This volume is intended to fill a want not yet covered by works published on the subject. The methods usually employed involve calculations with the longitudes and latitudes of the moon, the declinations of the planets, etc., or they are based on strange theories, often discouraging to the reader.

In this book the material with which the astrologer works, is made familiar to the student in the most systematic and easy manner, while the art of casting horoscopes is reduced to a set of operations as simple as that of consulting a dictionary. This is accomplished by numerous diagrams and tables, and by a full interpretation of the "Arcanes," those wonderful old symbols.

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Than are dreamt of in your philosophy," says Hamlet. Astrology, to-day denounced by scientists, may be in universal favor tomorrow. It certainly is an instructive and interesting study, from which even the skeptic may derive an amusing diversion.

That the book may prove a welcome help to all, whether they believe in the strange and fascinating language of the stars, or not, is the sincere wish of

CHAPTER I

WHAT IS ASTROLOGY?

Among all the sciences and arts which claim, justly or not, to reveal man or woman's nature and to open the mysterious book of the future, there is none more justified in its pretensions than the oldest of all the sciences, the science of ASTROLOGY.

Its antiquity and the high standing of the men who have believed implicitly in its revelations, force even the most skeptical to grant it a certain amount of the respect which they begrudge to Palmistry, Cartomancy (the reading of the future in cards), or Phrenology. Although it might seem to the unbeliever as if the great progress of modern Astronomy had removed from their proud position the astronomers of ancient Assyria, Egypt and Greece, it so happens that the more recent discoveries among the ruined tombs of the early Egyptian kings—built some 4,800 years before Christ—have furnished us with the most positive proofs that the great astrologers of those days were almost as deeply conversant with the principles of our solar system as the astronomers of the present century, allowance being made, of course, for the fact that they had no telescopes to assist them in their researches in the firmament.

Now, the Chaldean, Egyptian and Greek astronomers were, also, astrologers, that is to say, while understanding, in the main, the positions of the stars and planets as correctly as we do since the rediscoveries of Kepler, Copernicus and Newton—they also believed that these heavenly bodies exert over every human being a powerful influence for good or evil, from the day of birth to the hour of death, an influence, which, of course, personal conduct will strengthen or decrease.

In our time of skepticism and agnosticism it is not strange that the claims of astrology are laughed at, but it is certainly a study that has lost none of the powerful fascination which it has exerted over the greatest men throughout the 7,000 or 8,000 years of which we know anything, and the vast number of well-authenticated fulfillments of prophecies by astrologers will surely go far to prove that Astrology is entitled to the name of a Science.

From among the thousands of cases of successful predictions by astrologers we mention here two which are as remarkable as they are true.

The first instance we cite from Bacon's Essay of Prophecies:—"When I was in France, I heard from one Dr. Pena, that the queen-mother, who was given to curious arts, caused the king, her husband's, nativity to be calculated, under a false name; and the astrologer gave a judgment, that he should be killed in a duel; at which the queen laughed, thinking her husband to be above challenges and duels; but he was slain upon a course at tilt, the splinters of the lance of Montgomery piercing his neck."

The second is a most singular prophecy by one of the most brilliant astronomers of the sixteenth century, Tycho Brahe, whose picture ornaments this volume (see page 278). In 1577 there was a comet visible, from the observation of which Brahe deduced a clear proof that the sky was not a solid vault, and from the appearance and course of which he predicted, that in the North, in Finland, there should be born a prince who should lay waste Germany and vanish in 1632.
Gustavus Adolphus, king of Sweden, was born in Finland, overran Germany and when he was killed, in 1632, in the battle of Luetzen, his dead body was never found.

Whoever has read Milton's Paradise Lost, will remember his innumerable references to planetary influences; Wallenstein, the great captain and adversary of Gustavus Adolphus, undertook no important work without first consulting Seni, his astrologer, and it is well known that Napoleon I. firmly believed in his star.
CHAPTER II

THE PLANETS AND THE ZODIAC

The heavenly bodies that are of influence over the destinies of human beings, and consequently over all human affairs, will be given in this volume, together with their relations to each other and their various combinations, which, as astronomy teaches us, have re-occurred in regular intervals from time immemorial. We shall find the influence of each star, of each constellation, and of each combination, based on the experience of thousands of years; we shall find elaborate tables, worked out with infinite patience by the old astrologers, and exceedingly helpful to the student. The directions for using them are simple and plain and can be understood and followed by a child, as are, also, those for the use of the "arcanes," a marvelous inheritance from the ancient wizards in the shape of seventy-eight mysterious "tarots," which were probably originally devised by the old masters as aids in teaching their art, and which are an interesting study by themselves.
Astronomy teaches us that there are two classes of heavenly bodies: "Fixed Stars" and "Planets." The first are as many Suns at enormous distances from the Earth; our own particular Sun being, not the largest, but the nearest. The other class of stars are called "Planets" on account of their roaming habits, which are not, however, in any way erratic, since they follow regular routes over stated tracks, called their "Orbits." The Earth is a planet and takes 365 days and a fraction to cover its orbit around the Sun, its central ruler. The other large planets known to us are, in the order of their nearness to the Sun, our common center:

(The Moon, which revolves around the Earth and with the Earth around the Sun, and on account of its nearness, has a strong influence.)

If we now add that a large number of Fixed Stars, visible with the naked eye, have been grouped, from time immemorial, into Twelve Combinations called the "Constellations of the Zodiac," we shall have an exact idea of the various celestial elements that furnish the necessary data for complete and accurate Astrological readings, or "Horoscopes,"—this being one of the first terms you must become familiar with.

So far we have not used any words or statements that are not used in every primer on Astronomy and the definition of the Zodiac which follows, is also accepted by modern science, although dating back to the very dawn of human history.

The "Zodiac" is the imaginary route which the Sun travels around the Earth during a period of one year. We write "imaginary" because it is recognized nowadays that it is the Earth that is traveling around the Sun, and not the Sun around the Earth. But this manner of expressing the idea, being in constant use, had better be adhered to for the present.

Now, as the Sun travels around the Earth, it seems to be entering every thirty days among a new set of stars, or "Constellation" which, ever since man began to take delight in contemplating the skies, have been known to be the successive monthly dwellings of the Sun, called the "Signs of the Zodiac."

Before proceeding further it is therefore proper for us to give you the accepted names of the "Signs of the Zodiac," and the exact periods during which these Constellations exert their influence over the Earth and the inhabitants of it.

The astrological year begins with the spring equinox, on March 21st; thus:

The first Sign of the Zodiac—Aries (the Ram)—reigns from March 21st to April 19th.

The second sign—Taurus (the Bull)—reigns from April 20th to May 19th.
The third sign—GEMINI (the Twins)—reigns from May 20th to June 18th.

The fourth sign—CANCER (the Crab)—reigns from June 19th to July 23d.

The fifth sign—LEO (the Lion)—reigns from July 24th to August 22d.

The sixth sign—VIRGO (the Virgin)—reigns from August 23d to September 21st.

The seventh sign—LIBRA (the Balance)—reigns from September 22d to October 21st.

The eighth sign—SCORPIO (the Scorpion)—reigns from October 22d to November 20th.

The ninth sign—SAGITTARIUS (the Archer)—reigns from November 21st to December 20th.

The tenth sign—CAPRICORN (the Sea-Goat)—reigns from December 21st to January 19th.

The eleventh sign—AQUARIUS (the Water-Bearer)—reigns from January 20th to February 18th.

The twelfth sign—PISCES (the Fishes)—reigns from February 19th to March 20th.

The divisions of these twelve periods are called "Degrees" and not "Days." As the student has doubtless already noticed, there are 30 degrees (days) in each sign, except in "Cancer," where there are 35 degrees (days) to complete the regular cycle of 365 days composing the solar year; these five extra "degrees" or days are called "Epagomenes."

We cannot, in this short work, give the reasons for these various arrangements, all very logical when fully understood; it would take too much time and space and only confuse the student who, at present, is solely looking for simple rules that he may apply himself, successfully. This second chapter, with the illustration that accompanies it, has indicated to him the first Astrological elements with which he must make himself absolutely familiar if he wants to proceed smoothly in his study of this strange and most curious science.

The symbol, or written mark, by which each sign of the Zodiac is invariably indicated in astrological illustrations and horoscopes, is given in our illustration next to the name of the sign it corresponds to and again, in the next chapter, at the head of each of the twelve divisions devoted to the Signs of the Zodiac and the Types that proceed from them.

CHAPTER III

THE SIGNS OF THE ZODIAC

As explained to you in the preceding chapter, the “Zodiac” is the zone of the heavens whereon are to be found the various omens or predictions which are to constitute a primary “Horoscope.”

The great importance ascribed to the Zodiac by all the astronomers of the most ancient times, is proved by the elaborate and artistic representations of it, which are still to be found in Eastern countries, such as China, India and Egypt. Our frontispiece pictures one of the most famous of these, hewn in stone.

The twelve equal divisions of the Zodiac are called “Signs”; each of them is itself divided into thirty “Degrees” or days, and every one was born in one of these degrees. The first thing to know, therefore, is the ancient meaning of each of the signs and the type peculiar to the human beings born under it. I shall give in this chapter a summary of the leading features belonging to the Signs. Before doing so, however, I will state that the Signs have been classed into four groups, or "Trinocracies," according to their dominant characteristics.

Aries, Leo, Sagittarius, are "Fiery Signs."

Taurus, Virgo, Capricornus, are "Earthy Signs."

Gemini, Libra, Aquarius, are "Airy Signs."

Pisces, Cancer, Scorpio, are "Watery Signs."

The illustration on this page indicates this division by means of triangles. Later I shall have occasion to more fully explain the importance of this classification. I begin now the enumeration of the peculiarities and omens special to each of the signs. It is the basis of all further study and must, therefore, be given most serious attention.

1 ARIES. (The Ram.) ♃

The Constellation "Aries"—the first Sign of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from March 21 to April 19, the period coinciding with the first month of the Roman Year. It endows those born during this period with simple, unaffected manners, with an obedient disposition and yet with a capacity for commanding (a duality of qualities frequently met with); with plenty of enterprising audacity; with a lofty, charitable soul; with a generous heart, that will meet with few grateful returns; with a firm will, a superior mind, quick, brilliant, courageous, but not lacking in prudence; with religious tendencies; often with artistic talents, with plenty of clever ingenuity; a natural gift for business; a rather combative spirit, tempered, however, by eclecticism (the power of learning from others). The will, although steadfast, may vary in its object, in its plans.

He will have a taste for outdoor sports, especially hunting.

He will aspire to the highest honors, and will not be daunted by the difficulties in his way. Should he choose a military career, he would make a success of it and gain rapid promotion.

This sign endows one with aptitudes more varied than profound; it renders eloquent.

The love affairs of one born under this sign will be sudden, full of fancies and of short duration.

The subjects of Aries will get easily into passions of rage, but the fire will burn itself quickly out and leave behind no rancor or grudge. They will forget, in an instant, the injury done to them.

The opinions of the subject, be they of a religious or political character, will be very strong and ardent for a time, but that time will be short.

He will pass through many changes in his financial status; he will own much real estate, especially country property that will come to him through marriage. He will have to stand many difficulties and law-suits in reference to these estates; women's preferences and an inheritance will bring him most of what he will ever own; but he will be lucky in his business partnerships.

He will probably be an only child, or become such by the death of brothers and sisters.

In childhood, there will be troubles or disasters in the family of the subject that may upset his career.

If the birth takes place between midnight and noon, the subject will lose his father early in life.

Much traveling will be rendered necessary by family matters or to escape enmities. The subject will make balloon ascensions, or at least climb mountains.

At the ages of 7, 19, 30, 44, the subject's family will meet with trouble or he himself will run dangers due to his own relatives.

By his own fault, the subject will shorten the duration of his life; he will have to struggle against many unforeseen and dreadful incidents that will place him in great peril.
Aries announces many conjugal disagreements and often broken partnerships.
There will be very few children, if any.
The subject will rise, after many obstacles, to high positions of trust and honor, but will not keep them, as he will be the victim of the bitterest envy.
The subject will marry too young; there will be danger of inconstancy in the marriage relations.
The professions that will probably be chosen, by the persons born under this sign, are the army, the bar and mining engineering.
Should the birth take place between the hours of noon and midnight, the friends of the subject will greatly exert themselves pushing him to the front, and he will reach high positions; if he is in the Church, a bishopric may come to him.
He will have many and devoted friends with a dangerous traitor among them. Many, also, will be his enemies, all envious of his success, but these enmities will not last long.
The physical temperament of the subject will be nervous-sanguine, if he is born in a southern climate, and bilious-sanguine if he is born in a northern latitude. (See page 75.)
2. TAURUS. (The Bull.)

The Constellation "Taurus"—the second sign of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from April 20 to May 19.

It endows the persons born during this period with a stubborn disposition; it makes them rebellious to advice, exag- gerately proud, difficult of approach, and fond of opposition to the point of starting a controversy, or a fight for the sole purpose of coming out victorious. Slow to get excited and slow to calm down, the subjects of Taurus will harbor a grudge for a long time and will be hard to reconcile.

Of course, all these idiosyncrasies may be modified, even overcome by surroundings, education, etc. We are only enumerating here inborn tendencies or instincts that can always be fought against and triumphed over. This sign gives the subject a mind straightforward, just, inquisitive and shrewd; it makes him hard to fathom and endows him with the essential qualities of a diplomat.

The impressions, when received, are violent but changeable; the passions fiery, but not persistent.

The subjects whom this sign influences are generally very much attached to their sentiments and their opinions; they are taciturn and tenacious; their will is steady, persevering and determined to reach its end at almost any cost.

They are fit to command, to govern; there is a great probability that their brain power will prove of so superior a kind that they will be carried up to celebrity almost unwittingly.

Sometimes the sign of Taurus gives the subject a taste for agriculture; it is certainly conducive to a liking for choice food, while it renders the subject patient in all his undertakings and fond of a well-earned repose of mind and body.

The subjects of Taurus are essentially conservative in their ideas, their actions, and even their ambition toward high offices.
In love matters, they are (with many exceptions) of a fickle, yet jealous, disposition. This sign always brings about severe struggles, also illnesses caused either by excess of work or by a too great indulgence in good living.

There will be a gathering of an important amount of personal property; but it will be in some danger of being frittered away, either by lawsuits, or by loss of employment, or through intrigues out of wedlock.

However, unexpected gifts of valuable property are among the possibilities; they will be inspired by some devoted affection; certainly, the financial affairs of the subject will be improved by people who love him; thus, an inheritance from a dear friend is indicated as probable.

If the subject’s birth is “nocturnal,” i. e., has taken place between the hours of midnight and noon, the sign of Taurus foretells that his father will be a man of some importance, either by his rank, by his fortune, or by his talents in art, literature, etc.

Brothers and sisters will be the causes of much serious trouble; the subject will have to take a very long journey on account of one of these blood relations.

Many travels are to be expected; if the subject is born between midnight and noon, one of these journeys will prove very dangerous, perhaps fatal.

This sign must induce the subject to take great care of his children, especially his first-born; if it is a boy, he runs great dangers in his boyhood. Otherwise, the children will give great satisfaction and distinguish themselves, in a scientific career, at the bar, or in industrial pursuits. Still, the subject will have periods of sad disappointment with them.

The greater part of the subject’s life will be peaceful and eventless; his main troubles will arise from difficulties the subject’s in-born stubbornness will cause him to create himself, or, at any rate, to magnify greatly.

This sign announces the following diseases as being in store for the subject: splenetic and plethoric troubles at 11, 23, 35 years of age. Besides, as the weak organs of the subject will be the kidneys and the liver, he must watch for the incipient symptoms of the stone and diseases of the spine. Let him beware of wounds from sharp instruments or from quadrupeds.

There is a sorrow or a death predicted, in relation with the subject’s marriage.

While his position will be very modest in his youth, he may reach great fortune and celebrity due to his talents in the line of the fine arts, or his discoveries in the realm of physics.

There will be many friends to brighten the life of the Taurus subject, but none of them of the steadfast kind, and most of them undesirable. Both the so-called friends and the subject’s relatives will cause him many disappointments. The enmities he will encounter will be, fortunately, of the open kind, not of the hidden and treacherous variety.

The constellation Taurus always promises a long life, provided excesses of all kinds be avoided. The many perils through which the subject will pass, he may escape the worst consequences of, since they will be, so to speak, in full sight and known in advance.

The physical temperament of the Taurus subject will be bilious-sanguine in a southern latitude and lymphatic-nervous in a northern clime.
3. GEMINI. (The Twins.) η

The Constellation "Gemini"—the third of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from May 20 to June 18.

It endows the subject born during this period with probity, a pleasing, accommodating disposition, a temper quickly irritated but just as quickly calmed down, showing but little violence in its outbursts and a great promptitude in manifesting repentance. The sign of Gemini often promises some kind of celebrity. It gives the subject natural, inventive genius, and, with it, a love of science for its own sake; it urges him to follow scientific researches, especially in the line of mathematics, and often makes him an orator or an author. It endows him, also, with some talents for commerce, with a saving disposition and moderation in the use of all things.

It renders him scrupulously honest, fair-minded, and noble-hearted; he will possess a subtle, quick-seeing mind, an easy-flowing mode of speech; but the latter quality will manifest itself only when the subject is talking about some favorite topic of his; otherwise, he is rather reserved, even to taciturnity and often suffers strange perplexities and hesitations when the moment to act has arrived.

The expression of his will is firm, sometimes too affirmative, but without tyrannical tendencies, and without roughness.

Besides the scientific talents mentioned above, Gemini also gives a taste for fine arts, for music, especially the study of harmony, counterpoint, etc. In the scientific line, chemistry will be a prime favorite.

The wealth acquired by the practice of the talents above mentioned will lead the subject to many ups and downs, which, at times, will leave him almost in want, when, at other moments, his fortune will be quite large.

It will be the same as to the positions occupied by him; they will lack stability, now very brilliant, now again, of the humblest. These fluctuations will all be due to the subject's own acts.

This sign always foretells family secrets and family disagreements. Great trials will have to be gone through on account of, or caused by the subject’s father.

Numerous will be the subject’s children; some enmity will unfortunately be developed among them, and against their father or mother, or both.

The diseases that will be most threatening are bladder troubles, epidemic fevers, malaria; great perils will be incurred through quadrupeds, also from venomous bites and from enemies bent on serious mischief. The subject’s family, his employes, or servants, will show themselves painfully and actively unfriendly toward him.

Great sorrows, troubles and disappointments will be caused by love affairs. There will be several marriages or long attachments in the subject’s life.

He will have friends of all sorts and conditions, several of whom will turn his bitter enemies.

Toward middle life, he will meet with persistent obstacles to his success and legitimate promotion; they will be brought about by enmities to be found in the church or in the law profession. He will be to blame for the fact that these persons will be his enemies.

The position occupied by the subject and constituting his life work will often be of a dual nature; he will constantly attempt to run two things at once; hence, many complications in his social relations. A disastrous betrayal is to be feared.

This sign foretells the existence of persistent, often armed enemies; the subject may even be waylaid. He will have cause to suspect his immediate associates, his relatives by marriage; he will suffer cruelly from tireless calumnies, from low intrigues relating to secrets in his family or that of his wife.

Gemini always announces events of a violent nature; but Providence may save the subject from their worst consequences.

The subject will have a sanguine-bilious constitution in a southern latitude, and a bilious-nervous temperament in a northern one.

4 CANCER. (The Crab.)

The Constellation "Cancer"—the fourth of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from June 19 to July 23 (including the "5 Epagomenes," or supplementary degrees). It always gives to the subject a most agitated, restless existence, but a life of power and incessant activity.

Cancer endows the subjects it influences with a taciturn disposition, with a searching mind and good morals, pure even to austerity. Their imagination, of a rich, creative character, will be in love with the fantastic; added to it will be a great aptitude for assimilation, so that the subject will be ever ready to act in real life the part of the particular hero for whom his imagination, his dreams, or his readings will have given him a temporary fancy.

The mood will be changeable, capricious, fickle to a degree, and the intercourse with others will suffer on that account, although the subject himself will not greatly care.

An unquenchable thirst for sympathy will make him attach himself to a new fancy as fast as the preceding one will lose its attraction.

This sign renders one discreet, independent, open-minded and versatile.
The Moon, who has its throne in this constellation, gives the subject sometimes the appearance of a most phlegmatic individual, and again it shows him up as a most unreasonably irritable fellow; both states of the mind are due to excessive impressionability and sensitiveness.

Those born under Cancer are quick in body and mind, clever in business matters and fit to command; they are ambitious to obtain wealth, honors and all the good things of life, and Cancer helps them to succeed, while it gives them decided religious tendencies. Women born under this sign are both hard workers and imperious. Eclecticism and general versatility are among the gifts of Cancer.

The complex influences that proceed from this sign, and which are more helpful to those who are born between midnight and noon, may render the subject either brave or cowardly according to circumstances and surroundings. The same individual may show himself one day suspicious or simply prudent to excess; and, the next morning, influenced by the phases of the moon, he may prove extravagantly thoughtless, absent-minded and fanciful.

These qualities are the causes of the sudden but weak and short-lived fits of anger of the subject; in reality, it is only assumed anger which will vanish like smoke.

Wealth will be often very hard to collect, and the inherited patrimony may be recklessly squandered, either by relatives or by children of the subject.

Losses at the gaming table, or in speculation, or through thieves are to be expected; but, in the latter part of life, the chances to become rich are excellent.

During his youth, the subject will meet with obstacles to his chosen vocation and have troubles from near relations; he is threatened with an early loss of brothers or with quarrelling with them. He may have a second (or adopted) family, outside of his own. His children will cause him much anxiety; it will be hard for him to settle them in life, with the exception of the eldest one, however, who will reach a high position.

The subject’s kindred will push him energetically in the career he will finally select.

Many will be the vicissitudes and worries of the subject; some of them of a mysterious nature; but at the hour of most desperate crisis, unexpected assistance will come up providentially.
This sign gives one a repulsion against marriage and renders it, if entered into, quite unsatisfactory; the subject may inherit property from a first wife, but a law suit will be connected with it.

Travels will be long and profitable. One of them will make the subject comparatively famous and he will emerge “all right” out of the perils and struggles he may encounter in these journeys.

Some changes of residence will prove injurious to the health and to the pocket, on account of undesirable acquaintances or hidden enemies; even ambushes are to be feared, especially at the age of 14, 26 or 38. Toward the 35th year the subject’s position will be changed from good to bad or vice-versa. After that age it will be much more steady.

The subject will have many friends and protectors, especially among persons of the other sex; one of these patrons will run a great danger of total ruin, which will have a disastrous effect upon the subject.

At the age of 20, 32 and 44 there will be great peril resulting from secret intrigues of declared enemies or traitors among the subject’s trusted friends.

Cancer generally gives the people born under it excellent health. Should they be ill, the parts of the body to be affected will be the lungs and in general the breathing organs.

Wounds inflicted by the hands of man are foretold.

This sign gives the subject a lymphatic-bilious temperament in a southern climate and a lymphatic-nervous disposition in a northern latitude.

5. LEO. (The Lion.)

The Constellation "Leo"—the fifth of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from July 24 to August 22.

Ptolemy, of Pelusa, surnamed the King of Astrologers, said that the subjects born under this beneficent influence will reach positions of honor and trust.

Leo gives to those born under its influence a lofty mind, a spirit of fair play, an unbending dignity and a warm and generous heart. The will-power of the subject will be firm, enterprising and persevering; it will aim straight at the object desired, but secure it only by honest and above-board methods.

The mind will be steadfast, virile, proud, simple and liberal, with great brilliancy that may render it sometimes egotistic and presumptuous but never lacking in gratitude for an act of helpful kindness. The impulses and instincts will be always held within control. The temper will be kindly, though firm, courageous and magnanimous.

In the difficult moments of life, anger may be quickly aroused but it will harm no one and cool down almost at once.

Good will invariably be returned for evil; this will be the only kind of revenge practiced by the subject.

This sign induces one to love steadfastly; the affections will be constant, although forgetfulness may occur, in case of prolonged absence.

The special aptitudes of the subject will be of a soldierly character; he will be quite successful in all open-air sports, patient in all kinds of labor and admirably adapted to command. This sign does not endow the subject with many varied abilities, but those granted him will be of the best, often approaching perfection.

Leo gives a taste for pleasures and luxury. Those born under this sign have nothing but disdain for the honors they are destined to reap almost without efforts.

The subject's inclinations will be strong, and yet well-reasoned out. His opinions will be fixed, passionate, sometimes exaggerated, and when he decides on a certain course of action he will follow it to the end, at all risks.

Those born under this sign will acquire, by their own merit, a good deal of property, besides what will come to them through relatives or influential friends. But their losses will be heavy and sudden, due to either gambling, or speculation, or imprudent loans; they may suffer from cruel spoliation, family property being taken from them quite unjustly. The death of a near relative will greatly compromise their pecuniary interests and their position; they will be shabbily treated in money matters by brothers and sisters, or other close relations. Even their parents may ruin their hopes of brilliant promotion.

During a short journey rendered necessary by the subject's position, he will have to fear some personal danger; the upper part of the body, the head and the shoulders especially, may be severely hurt.
Violent quarrels with relatives will be caused by a division of property or by family secrets, or by prolonged absence of the subject.

The father of the subject will be in peril of his life on a journey.

There will be many children coming to the subject who will have the sorrow of losing the eldest one.

If the subject is a woman she will probably be the mother of twins, or she may have children of two successive husbands; when these children will be grown up, they will give her trouble.

Long and complicated diseases are threatening; the woman born under Leo will have great troubles in, and resulting from, child-birth. Servants and employes of the subject will be the cause of constant worries.

Leo always announces family disagreements.

Several unforeseen legacies, or even inheritances, will render easier the circumstances of the subject and especially of his children who often will be the beneficiaries; there is a probability, however, that relatives may succeed in diverting these wind-falls away from the subject and his family.
The subject will make but few sea voyages; the first one will be detrimental to his interests and a source of losses.

His position will demand frequent voyages on land; one of these will prove highly advantageous and bring about a sudden change for the better.

The offices coming to the subject will be offices of great honor but small emoluments; he may grievously compromise his chances in that direction, or even forfeit these valued prizes, in an instant, by some most unfortunate and thoughtless moves.

He will enjoy some reputation, even marked celebrity, through his own merit and without the help of any outside protection. It may be in the sciences, or the fine arts that he will find his true sphere and make a shining success. As said above, the ruin of these promising prospects will be due either to an unfortunate voyage or to a rash act on the part of the subject.

His friends will be many, but of little assistance, even if their fortune and position be such as to give them the means to be of great use; on the contrary, they will probably cause the subject some heavy financial losses.

His few enemies will be declared ones.
low and cowardly intrigues against him will prove so invariably unsuccessful, that he will soon be free from such attacks.

Leo gives those born under it a nervous-sanguine temperament, a remarkably fine health and a long life.

However, the subject may be attacked by inflammatory rheumatism, located especially in the knees. Pneumonia, and in general, troubles of the respiratory organs, and troubles of the spleen and the bladder are also among the possibilities; wounds, if any, will affect the feet and hands.

According to the old astrologers, Leo, containing the throne of the Sun, is always the prognostic of a fine fortune and a lofty position.

6 VIRGO. (The Virgin.) Σ

The Constellation of “Virgo”—the sixth of the signs of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from August 23 to September 21.

Those born within this period will reach honors through their personal merit.

This sign bestows on them a cool reason, a spirit of equity, a merciful disposition and a taste for everything that is honest and straightforward.

The moral nature of the subject will be mild, modest, amiable, confiding, and yet not easily fathomed.

His will-power, although comparatively firm may be influenced through sentimental motives.

He will be intelligent, ingenious, but above all, moved by his feelings to which he will remain passionately attached. He will be slow to anger and slow to quiet down, although his wrath will never harm any one. He will be moved to repentance quickly and deeply. Virgo gives people born under it a taste for cloister life, a love of divine thoughts; or, in a lower plane, an inclination toward the liberal arts and the gift of persuasive eloquence.

To the taste for art the subject will add a liking for agriculture or horticulture and a mild mania for collecting things. He will show a real aptitude for the higher sciences and deeper studies. All his tastes will be under his control and his opinions easily changed.

Those born under Virgo run serious physical dangers from their earliest babyhood and all through childhood.

It is almost an invariable fact that they will have the greatest difficulty to acquire even moderate means, and this small competence will be constantly threatened, during the first part of their lives. Later, they will be luckier financially and recover some family property.

Although this sign foretells wealth, due to the hard work and intelligence of the subject applied in the field of science and art, or through successful inventions, or thanks to some high office connected with the Church, still, by the fault of the subject himself, there is a strong probability of his losing suddenly that (either money or position) which he will have acquired through such long and laborious efforts.

Travels may be the cause of some large addition to the subject's fortune.

Relatives, near or distant, will prove rather harmful than otherwise.
The subject may have many brothers and sisters, but there will be no harmony between them, and he will lose several of them at an early age, probably in a violent manner.

There will be sad and grave family secrets, either on account of irregular unions, or through divorces or separations.

There is here a prognostic of sudden losses of children, either through a fall from a high place, or through drowning, or through quadrupeds.

Virgo always announces some violent happenings, great obstacles in love matters, serious law suits, dissensions between friends or relatives, between husband and wife, even divorces. Let us say here that "unions and marriages" are expressed by the same indications in astrology, and must be understood aright by the parties interested.

The struggle for life will be particularly hard for those born under this sign. But, after painful efforts, and many disappointments, the subjects of Virgo generally triumph. "Better late than never," ought to be their motto.

They will have decided religious tendencies.

The Virgo subject will have a chance to marry twice. But his second union will be the cause of a great upheaval in his existence; it may be for his good, and again it may prove disastrous.

Few inheritances will come the way of the subject; those that will be within his reach will be acquired only after long and disagreeable law proceedings.

The subject may have to undertake, generally against his will, long travels, either to try his fortune in a foreign country or to fill a mission of importance with, or in obedience to, the orders of some great man. But travel he will, surely and frequently.

It will be a hard pull for him to succeed, since he will have only his own self to depend upon; but he will succeed and reach a high position in the world. He may even acquire riches through his intelligence and activity; but if he does get wealthy, it will be on account of the dangerous profession or occupation he will have selected. It may be the result of perilous experimenting in the realm of physics, for which he will be particularly well adapted.

His friends will be very few, very uncertain and of little use to him; a few pleasant acquaintances, met in his travels, will be among the least undesirable of his associates; but he will soon lose track of them.
The subject will have secret enemies in the world of art, or in the financial marts, or among business leaders; they will cause him numerous, heavy losses, especially through bad investments.

In southern climates, Virgo gives those born under it a lymphatic-bilious temperament; in northern climates, their constitution will be lymphatic-nervous. The weaker spots will be the stomach, the liver and the legs.

7. LIBRA. (The Balance.)

This Constellation, “Libra”—the seventh of the signs of the Zodiac—also called “the Scales”—exerts its influence from September 22 to October 21.

It endows those born under its influence with great gentleness, straightforwardness and pure moral principles; it renders the soul merciful and the heart affectionate and constant.

The disposition is frank, open, confiding, slightly melancholy; anger is easily aroused and rapidly quieted down again.

This sign causes indecision in opinions and in actions; it bestows upon one inventive genius, a special aptitude for mechanical arts and sciences and for navigation; but all these gifts will not profit the subject.

The will-power, although plentiful, knows not how to bring about final results.

The subjects of Libra are prone to study, handy with tools as well as quick at figures, but care little for the fine arts, except music, being devoted, heart and soul, to business. Otherwise, in the choice of their pleasures, they show refinement.

Their passions are deep and honest.

They are changeable in their opinions, although strongly attached—for a time—to the idea or theory that rules over them temporarily.

Toward the middle of his life, the subject born under Libra will make a fortune, thanks to some industry connected with navigation, or at least with water as motive-power. He will have to defend his wealth in court; a great law suit which he will ultimately win, will create bitter enmities, perhaps even a serious disagreement between him and his spouse or partner.
He will have many brothers and sisters, some of them by a second wife of the father or by a second husband of the mother; these blood relations will be constantly at odds between themselves and with the subject.

He may have some trouble with his parents, especially with his father, who will lack the paternal fiber. If the subject is born between noon and midnight there is a risk of his losing his father early in life.

Few children will come to him, and one of them will be the cause of great anxieties.

Family relations will be frequently disturbed; there is a prognostic of a second family, perhaps an adopted one; or the subject himself may be the object of adoption.

Diseases characterized by a flow of some kind are to be expected; the weak organs of those born under Libra are the bowels and the bladder. The hands and feet are threatened with wounds.

The sign which presides over marriage, in the arrangement of the Zodiacal Constellations, is "Aries" in House VII. It is fickle, violent in temper, and barren; it is directly opposed to Libra, but unsatisfactory as this opposition is, the subject will gain riches through marriage. Through the death of the spouse he will make a large inheritance totally unexpected.

Those born under this sign had better beware of sea voyages; they will prove dangerous and never profitable.

Toward middle age, there is a threat of loss of position, and a warning that the mother of the subject may be the cause, direct or indirect, of this disastrous happening.

The subject has in prospect the probabilities of reaching some high and honored position; his relatives will assist him in his ambitions; he will possess protectors and friends among the great people of this world; they will show themselves steadfast, assist him to a brilliant marriage, lend him their moral and material support in matters of business; and yet, it will come to pass, that, willingly, or not, the subject will do grievous harm to one of these powerful friends.

He will meet with serious enmity on the part of certain clergymen on account of family matters; other enemies will come up among lawyers and men of learning.

An ancient tradition says that the persons born under this sign will be the cause of their own troubles and perhaps of their death. In southern latitudes the subjects of Libra are naturally sanguine-bilious; in northern climates they are nervous-bilious.

8. SCORPIO. (The Scorpion.)

This Constellation, "Scorpio"—the-eighth of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from October 22 to November 20.

It endows the subject born during this period with a mind at the same time shrewd, persuasive, fickle, capricious, dreamy, poetical and often religiously inclined.

He has a firm hold upon himself and his will-power is steadfast and persevering.

The temper is fiery, bellicose and easily aroused, somewhat rough and even violent, but never unkindly so; there is a love of danger for its own sake. This sign renders those born under it phlegmatic, taciturn and close mouthed; they are often tinged with misanthropy.

Slow to move to anger, they are also slow to forgive; they keep a deep feeling of resentment, and as their wrath cools down it becomes almost more dangerous, for in their revengeful spirit, they are relentless and act quickly and recklessly.

If the phlegmatic tendency is the predominant symptom, they oppose their adversary by the mere force of inertia.

If they are not toned down by education and proper surroundings, the subjects of Scorpio are quarrelsome and fond of seeking trouble with or without cause.

This constellation renders those born under it skillful and patient in all kinds of work; it gives them a love for architecture, for simple country pleasures, and withal, a thirst for honors.

In their opinions they are stubborn, rarely amenable to reason and disagreeably aggressive.

This sign gives little prosperity in the first part of life, but promises plenty of it in mature years. Unexpected gains will accrue at that time of life; they may come from matters connected with religious worship or be the result of long journeys; an inheritance is also among the most serious probabilities. Scorpio always brings fortune in its train.

The subject will have few brothers if any; one of them is threatened with a fatal accident either through a fall or through drowning.

If the subject is born between midnight and noon his father will suffer complete ruin in his position and fortune.

Scorpio always gives to his subjects a numerous progeny.

Malignant fevers contracted across the sea will threaten the subject’s life; he will also suffer from constant headaches and cruel fits of neuralgia; through excesses of some kind—work or dissipation—a severe illness will come, but recovery is possible.

The subject will surely marry, in fact, he will marry twice as an early widowhood is foretold; one of these unions will be unfortunate. Either of the spouses will be in slight danger of being crippled by a large quadruped, by secret enemies or by accident.

Deep heart-sorrows will come to the subject by the early loss (before the age of thirty), of a dearly loved one, either wife or husband or sweetheart, or friend of either sex.

Long journeys will be undertaken over land and sea; they will not be particularly fortunate.
As success will come to him comparatively late in life, he will have passed middle life before he tastes a secure peace, bitterly fought for through a laborious youth.

Many will be his friends, and the kindly favors of the great will not be wanting; but one friend or protector will be the cause of great trouble in the march of success, or in a love affair.

Enmities will also be numerous and they will stick to the subject the best part of his life. These will be found even among his daily associates, both social and in business.

If the subject visits a foreign country, he will be in great danger of being waylaid; but he will escape scot free, as all those born under Scorpio are singularly well protected against accidents or attacks.

In warm climates the subjects of Scorpio are lymphatic-bilious, in cold latitudes they are nervous-bilious.

9. SAGITTARIUS. (The Archer.)

This Constellation, "Sagittarius"—the ninth sign of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from November 21 to December 20.

It endows those born during this period with an ingenuous, strictly honest nature, with a generous heart, that does kindly acts without a thought of reward or even gratitude.

The ancient Magi claimed that the subjects of Sagittarius would prove exceptionally good, or radically bad.

The mind of the subject is versatile, gentle, easy-going, peaceable; quick to anger and quicker to quiet down, very liberal and impartial in his opinions, and with a gift for rapid assimilation. But it worries a great deal about trifles and shows anxiety out of proportion with the trouble in prospect. The temper does not grow heated, except when unjustly attacked, or if placed in the presence of dangerous people.

The subject of Sagittarius has an extremely sensitive and nervous disposition, and, on that account, shows, at times, an irritability only skin-deep, however, and of short duration. Otherwise he is habitually cheerful, often like a child.

Sagittarius gives simplicity, and unconventionality, and an intense love of independence. Its subjects are always on their guard over themselves and over others, although frequently deceived, just the same; they love harmony and prefer giving way rather than fight and win. Their extreme timidity prevents them often from asserting their rights, but at times they suddenly conquer it and show that they are no cowards. They are not easily understood as they keep much to themselves. They are skillful with their hands and are gifted with eloquence; the fine arts and certain branches of science attract them; they love solitude, and study by themselves behind locked doors.

Their passions are fully under control, and yet they are ardent and numerous; their opinions are always moderate, rather of an eclectic nature and frequently changed.

The subjects of Sagittarius will be in poor circumstances in infancy and childhood, on account of losses their parents will have suffered from.

Their personal merits will assist them in building a fortune to which a few legacies will be added later.

This sign announces that the subjects will have few brothers and sisters, and that they will not be on good terms with them;
one of them will die an early death or barely escape.

On account of certain family secrets, a serious disagreement will intervene between the subject and his parents, or parents-in-law, or step-parents. He will have but few children and the eldest one will be a cause of serious worry; in fact, he will not get along with his children and they will live away from him.

This sign foretells two marriages, one of which will be of great detriment to the subject's position.

The aptitudes as well as the occupations will be of two different kinds, interfering greatly with each other, and thus hindering success. The subject will have reached middle age before obtaining the position and fortune due to him on account of his talents.

He will suffer from frequent minor physical ailments, such as sore-throat, sick headaches, etc. Until his thirtieth year he will meet with frequent falls from high places.

Many long journeys, but none by water, will be made necessary by his position and his business. During one of these trips, he will hear of the death of a near relative.
Socially he will meet with success and make many friends, one of whom will prove treacherous and almost bring about the loss of the subject's position. He will have protectors of high degree, among them a person of lofty standing, who will be extremely useful to him at a critical moment.

His enemies will show themselves bitter and persistent; they will not hesitate to slander him cruelly, and try their best to ruin his prosperity in business and in love.

This constellation gives to its subjects a purely nervous temperament in Southern climates, and a nervous-bilious disposition in Northern latitudes. It promises them a long life.

10. CAPRICORN. (The Sea-Goat.)

This Constellation, "Capricorn"—the tenth sign of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from December 21 to January 19.

The persons born under its influence will be self-made men, the builders of their own fortune, and they will know how to remain prosperous.
Capricorn also endows its subjects with a strong taste for destroying things, an active disposition, a vigorous body, especially if born between midnight and noon, for, if born between noon and midnight they may have a few physical defects and suffer from accidents. They will show themselves aggressive, warlike, enthusiastic, vehement, and yet, inclined to melancholy and saving habits.

Their mind will be shrewd, fair and clever in business matters, and decidedly versatile.

Their will-power, although strong, may vary in its object, but will finally succeed in reaching the desired goal.

Capricorn renders its subjects rather brusque in their manners, with such decided ways that they will often seem rude. They will be slow to anger and slow to forgive, although they do not harbor mean, revengeful feelings.

They are very prudent and circumspect, never making a move without lengthy deliberation.

Capricorn endows those born under it with quickness and agility and with a sound eyesight.

They will not prove constant in love matters, although this fickleness may be frequently caused by the influence of others, not by an inborn unfaithful disposition.

Money will come to the subject through his own talents and efforts, seldom through gifts or inheritance.

Brothers and sisters will be numerous, but harmful rather than helpful.

The Capricorn subject will undertake many short journeys, several of them in consequence of his enemies' intrigues.

His father will make him suffer through his violence; his family will be a source of more trouble than satisfaction; they will interfere with his matrimonial projects.

In his youth, he will have to face great physical dangers, either wounds in war or severe illnesses.

This constellation is not prolific; it is better so, since the children of the subject, if he has any, will ruin his position or his conduct will ruin the children's lives.

Great struggles are foretold; difficult and mysterious intrigues developing during journeys or on account of them; clerical gentlemen will be mixed in the matter. Until the subject has passed his 42d year he will have to undergo many vicissitudes and be ill-treated by relatives.

The Capricorn subject suffer greatly from gout, rheumatism in the joints, especially in the arms and hands; they are troubled also with certain stomach disorders. They may expect bruises due to falls; they will develop a tendency to hypochondria.

The marriage question is in their case both serious and complex. The Cancer constellation, whose part it is to preside over alliances between sexes, is particularly fickle and changeable; it is in direct opposition to Capricorn, which it, therefore, greatly influences, and so the subjects of the latter will meet with serious troubles in their marital relations, and will probably marry more than once.

Capricorn interferes sadly with long journeys, and renders them quite dangerous, either through accidents, or through severe illnesses or wounds.

There will be more than one Judas Iscariot among the friends of the subject; his position will run great risks through their dark intrigues. A powerful protection will help the subject upward, especially if he has chosen the army or navy as his career.

He will meet two kinds of enemies; some in high places, others low down in social rank; his brothers and sisters (at least one of them) will not prove his friends. Finally, he will triumph over all this active or latent ill-will, or it will subside of itself.

The Capricorn constellation gives its subjects a lymphatic-nervous physical temperament in Southern climes, and a lymphatic-bilious disposition in Northern latitudes.

II. AQUARIUS. (The Water-Bearer.)

This Constellation, "Aquarius"—the eleventh sign of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from January 20 to February 18.

It endows the persons born under it with a special aptitude for the fine arts and secures popular recognition for their remarkable works. Besides, it gives them a long life and lofty position, and makes of them orators and authors.

However, they will have none but themselves to blame if they are persecuted or even exiled.
They will have graceful, gentle, simple, and straightforward natures. Although violent when driven to wrath, they quiet down quickly and bear no grudge.

The will-power will be firm, but lacking in logic and be apt to rush to its goal unmindful of obstacles over which it will ride rough shod. The Aquarius subjects will be fond of solitude, laborious and diligent, patient and persevering. They are well endowed for serious studies, and for ruling over other people; they are always dreaming of riches and honors.

Passionate in all their undertakings, their opinions are ardent, steadfast and strongly convincing.

The property the subject will acquire will not be permanently in his possession, but be taken from him repeatedly through the intrigues of evil-minded people, some of them his pretended friends, who will, at times, resort to violence to deprive him of his own. Through members of his family he will come to much money, but other blood relations will damage his position and reputation.

The Aquarius subjects will be great travelers, sometimes against their will; but these journeys will generally turn out badly and interfere disastrously with the financial prospects and the social position of the subjects; their health also will suffer on that account.

They will have few brothers and sisters, if any; they will receive from them little else but unpleasant, even cruel, treatment.

On a short trip, the subject will run some serious bodily risk, probably on the water or through fire-arms or quadrupeds.

His father will die of sudden death, or meet with unexpected financial reverses. Scientific researches may be the cause of either disaster.

Aquarius subjects are often blessed with twins. Death in child-birth is among the probabilities; the infants that will come to them will be delicate in health and hard to raise.

Among diseases that will afflict them are troubles of the stomach and the lungs, violent sick headaches and brain neuralgia.

The Constellation Leo, in whose resort all unions between sexes are placed, foretells for the Aquarius subjects a marriage with an artist, actor or professional musician.

The career of the subject will be full of ups and downs, the latter often of the most disheartening kind; but he will always come out a victor, either through his unfaltering efforts, or through the opportune assistance of his friends.

For his friends will be many and really devoted. People in high position will contribute to the subject’s final triumph over his difficulties.

But his enemies also will be many and relentless, using both hidden and open, violent means to undo him; he will conquer them through a series of almost providential circumstances.

Still the risks ahead of him are many, mostly due to his own rashness and his ruinous love of change. His friends will often quarrel with him on that account. But Aquarius will bestow upon him public esteem, and the kindly advice of the wise will help him to reach a pre-eminent position among his fellow-citizens.

Those born under this constellation have a bilious-sanguine temperament in Southern climes, and a nervous-sanguine physical disposition in Northern latitudes.

12. PISCES. (The Fishes.)

This Constellation, “Pisces”—the twelfth sign of the Zodiac—exerts its influence from February 19 to March 20.
Those born under this sign will be the artisans of their own celebrity and will attain it in the realm of the fine arts, sciences or literature. Popularity will come to them unbidden, as a reward of unwearying efforts in developing their natural talents.

Pisces endows its subjects with a certain degree of restlessness, with a constant disposition to find fault with the results of their own labor, thus inciting them to further efforts; they are somewhat pessimistic and inclined to alter their views to reach the goal more rapidly. They have a kind of duplex moral nature difficult to fathom, but withal strictly honest, fair in all its dealings, poetical, dreamy and mystical.

The morals of the subject will be pure, owing to his high principles, for he will otherwise be very fond of pleasure. He will be of a proud disposition and that will keep him away from anything degrading.

His will is strong while it lasts; but it will change its object frequently; he will be mildly despotic, without a real tyrannical trait.

His prudence will be remarkable; he will be slow to confide in any one, or to make real friends, while always cheerful in his relations toward his fellow beings.

He will be witty and somewhat sarcastic in his remarks, but never biting or unpleasant. There will never be any sting in what he says.

Slow to move to anger, he will quiet down just as slowly, but will keep no rancor in his heart. He will be quick, vigilant, industrious.

This constellation gives those born under it gifts of eloquence in speech and writing, and causes them to love a generous diet, especially when sitting with friends around a well-laden board. It will make them sociable to a marked degree.

Their opinions will be ardent, but rather eclectic than one-sided.

By his work, by his personal merit, the subject of Pisces will be able to acquire wealth; but he will be kept poor by imprudent alliances or reckless speculations.

Generally, this sign foretells two or more professions, pursued simultaneously or successively, as the subject will prove remarkably versatile.

He will have more sisters than brothers, and will lose one of them early in life. His parents had to suffer from serious mishap or losses during his childhood.

This twelfth constellation generally promises its subjects many travels and plenty of money, although the ownership of the family estate may be contested in law by stepfather or step-mother, on account of a second marriage of the subject’s surviving parent.

He will leave the family home at an early age, while his people will not be great travelers.

This constellation announces two marriages for the subject, one with a widow or widower; there will be some misfortune connected with either the first or the second spouse; the other marriage will be a very happy one.

Severe accidents will happen in his family. He will undertake many journeys; their object will be the acquiring of fortune, or reputation, or both. He will change his residence and maybe his position, very frequently.

Pisces promises those born under it, high public or social positions and the favor of people of lofty standing—probably a liberal profession as one's life's work and sometimes two distinct careers. The illnesses peculiar to this sign are fevers and troubles of the heart or eyes; the accidents that may occur will be of trifling nature. Unpleasant dreams will annoy the subject.

Besides a few solid friendships, the subject will have very treacherous friends, one in particular whose odious conduct toward him will almost wreck his life.

Many will be the envious ones whose occult or open intrigues will have to be constantly guarded against. They will fail in their evil designs, unless the subject's conduct be such as to give them a serious hold upon his destiny.

In Southern climes, the subjects of Pisces are by nature lymphatic-bilious; in Northern latitudes, they are lymphatic-nervous.
CONCLUSION OF THE INTERPRETATION OF THE SIGNS OF THE ZODIAC.

We are compelled to admit that a hasty perusing of characteristics thus assigned by tradition to the subjects of the various Zodiacal signs, may reveal a number of discouraging contradictions, at least on the surface, until the student has fairly grasped the onward, esoteric significance of these long enumerations of qualities, defects, probable accidents, etc.

This unfavorable impression disappears, however, as soon as one takes the trouble to classify these various "symptomatic prophesies," according to the Trinary Kabbalistic divisions, or "Trinocracies," the importance of which cannot be too strongly insisted upon.

As I mentioned repeatedly in my large book on Palmistry* all visible manifestations of the occult may, or rather, must, bear three distinct separate meanings, to be used, the one or the other, or again the third, according to the elements in the human being which we wish to understand and fathom.

We have:

First: The World of the Soul—Inspiration.

Second: The World of the Mind—Intellect.

To the first world belong religious and psychological aspirations, the knowledge of good and evil, Conscience.

To the second world belong: Imagination at its best, or its worst; what is erroneously called Genius; the gift of reasoning, of higher eloquence, of poetry, of art, of music, the inventive faculty, the direct influence over one’s fellow beings.

Finally, to the third world: Our passions, our instincts, our love for doing and undoing, the creative or destructive impulses.

Now that we have laid down, in a few brief words, the tripartite rule that must govern our investigations, of ourselves or other human beings, be it by Astrology, Chiromancy, Graphology, or Phrenology, let the student read over the special characteristics (given above) that have been, from prehistoric times to our days, attributed to those born under this or that sign of the Zodiac, and he will have no difficulty to find his way through what appeared at first a rather inextricable labyrinth.
Should he desire, however, to plunge a little further into the mysteries of the three worlds, inasmuch as this classification enters into the scheme of this work, he may read the following pages, that will, doubtless, lighten the wide stretches of kabbalistic horizon still left dark in this our popular exposition of the particularities of the Zodiac subjects.

THE FOUR TYPICAL TEMPERAMENTS

Bilious: Dark complexion, strong muscles, great vitality, strong passions, tenacity of purpose.

Sanguine: Brilliant complexion, active mind and body, energy, fickleness of purpose.

Nervous: Delicate features, rapid circulation of blood, irritability of vital functions and temper, shrewdness.

Lymphatic: Flabby muscles, dull complexion, sluggish of circulation, emotion and mind.

CHAPTER IV

THE PLANETS

In the first two chapters we have completed what is called “the Orientation of a Horoscope,” meaning by this the position of the Sun on the Ecliptic on the day of birth of any one whose life we propose studying. Of course, without this exact date, nothing can be done toward the casting of a Horoscope, but, on the other hand, astrological readings, to be reliable and truly personal, depend on other facts and calculations which will be gradually unfolded to the reader. Horoscopes based solely on Zodiacal indications have a real, intrinsic value and one of the most popular books in America claims that they include everything worth knowing in this order of ideas.

But the details of one’s life, i.e., information about Health, Fortune and Love, are not convincingly and accurately revealed by the signs of the Zodiac, studied singly and by themselves.

Although I have neither the space nor the inclination, in these short and practical lessons, to attempt a defence, or simply an explanation, of the mysteries of ancient Astrology, I must state the following as an article of faith in astrological researches.

In this great Universe, all the realms, all the Worlds, are included in a huge solidarity, just as in our little bit of a world the various elements, whether endowed with life or not, all depend on each other and are the component parts of a great whole. If this be so—and this primordial law is being made clearer and more certain every day by the discoveries of modern science—the larger celestial orbs or luminaries exert a most decided influence over us—the Earth—just as we, ourselves, do exert an influence over them.

In my first chapter I named "seven" celestial bodies, which have been recognized from all antiquity as the bestowers of powerful fluidic influence over our planet. In the order of their nearness to us they are:

Between us and the Sun: Venus and Mercury.

Farther from the Sun than the Earth: Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

To these five planets let us add: The Sun itself, and the Moon, which, as we all know, is a satellite of the Earth.
Now, to each of these five Planets have been assigned by tradition a Throne by day and a Residence by night, in one of the signs of the Zodiac. The illustration used in this chapter places the symbols of these planets where they belong, that is:

Saturn by day—in Aquarius; by night—in Capricorn.
Jupiter by day—in Sagittarius; by night—in Pisces.
Mars by day—in Aries; by night—in Scorpio.
Venus by day—in Libra; by night—in Taurus.
Mercury by day—in Gemini; by night—in Virgo.

The Sun is, day and night, in Leo, while the Moon is, night and day, in Cancer.

Remember, these are the specially elected Dwellings of the seven Planets, and their meanings are to be understood in connection with the readings we have given of the signs of the Zodiac. This adds that much more precision to the information we have already gathered from the signs themselves and "by themselves."

But before giving these meanings, and describing the human types that bear, as it were, the visible imprint of the particular Planets exerting upon them a predominating influence, let me state at once that the main study of the would-be astrologer, professional or amateur, is to learn how to locate exactly the position of each of these Planets, on the day, and, if possible, the hour, of birth of the person whose horoscope is being cast. This has always been considered as the most difficult part of the casting process and arduous mathematical operations have been claimed to be indispensable to reach this result with any degree of accuracy.

If you have perused other works on Astrology, you are aware that they require calculations about the moon's position, the planets' declinations, etc. To avoid this difficulty I have spent years in hard work, until now I shall be able, in my concluding lesson, to give the student a much simpler and most accurate system for putting together the different elements of a Horoscope, all of which we shall have, by that time, thoroughly mastered together. But this is anticipating and getting away from the subject of this lesson, the Planets.

Of the seven celestial orbs, Saturn, Mars and, often, the Moon, are considered as decidedly unfavorable or "inimical." The Sun, Venus and Jupiter, on the other hand, are constantly favorable or "friendly." Mercury is sometimes good, sometimes bad. Of course, their positions, on the day of the subject's birth, not only influence the said subject's whole life, but also react upon each other and, in that way, modify greatly the meanings of each separate orb, and the type it represents on Earth.
1. SATURN

Any one born under this Planet will be, in physical appearance, unprepossessing and even somewhat repulsive. The complexion is dull; the hair is straight, dark and dull and is lost early. Their teeth, also, are poor. They walk with a stoop and with eyes downcast; they are awkward and fall frequently; they are often deaf and suffer from rheumatism. They are skeptics born, even scoffers, and have no liking for the society of their fellow beings. Among them are found poisoners, anarchists and all sorts of public and private enemies. They are fond of the wicked sides of the occult sciences, of chemistry, agriculture and mining; they are misers at heart, and smile but rarely. Saturn has a disastrous influence upon the nervous system and drives one to insanity. The Saturnians, as they are called, are born gamblers and unlucky ones at that.

2. JUPITER

This Planet—next in size and nearness to the Sun—endows those born under its influence—Jupiterians—with a handsome, most pleasing physique, and a most cheerful, jovial disposition. They are general favorites, in fact, too much so, for their own good, as they have a tendency to live too high and too fast. They have a clear, somewhat florid complexion and a disposition to stoutness. Their hair is plentiful and curly, they lose it early in life. Their teeth are good, sometimes a little large in front; they often have dimples. They are great lovers of comforts; their ambition is generally successful, doubtless on account of their popularity due to the pleasant magnetism that emanates from them. In religion, they love everything that appeals to their senses; they are most of the time in love but are more sensual than truly affectionate. At bottom, and unless otherwise influenced, they are weak and lack the power to resist temptation. In its best type, the Jupiterian (or "Jovial") is magnanimous, noble-hearted and a born leader of men—or women.

3. MARS

Between Jupiter and the Earth, Astronomy places the Planet Mars, with which it is claimed we are about to communicate by means of electric waves. Whether such result be obtainable or not, it is certain that the majority of human beings born under the influence of Mars—the Martians (or “Martials”)—are heavily built but physically strong. They are not gifted with much intellectuality and care but little for any form of learning, except as it refers to out-door sports, travels in dangerous countries and military affairs. They are brave to a degree, only too ready to risk their lives for little or no purpose; they are easily angered, and, for the time being, forget everything in the excess of their violence. The worst Martian type will commit murder before he knows it. At their best, those born under Mars will show themselves straightforward and incapable of any kind of fraud. Their word is their bond and they are ready for hard work. They are patient, faithful and true, but not “brainy.” A male Martian is generally a great favorite with the ladies and is apt to be rather quick and unscrupulous in his courtship methods. He is not a sentimental lover. A bad Martian is a loud, fatiguing talker and a braggard.

Now we have studied the Astrological meanings of the three Planets placed, in the Solar system, farther from the Sun than we—the Earth—are. Between us and the Sun we find, first:
4. VENUS

This is one of the most favorable or "friendly" Planets. The persons born under its influence have many physical, mental and moral traits in common with those born under Jupiter. But the Venusians—it is the name they are known by in Astrological lore—possess a more effeminate style of beauty and their general temperament is also cast somewhat in the same molds; thus, their complexion is ultra-clear and their skin very thin and transparent. Their height is below the average; the face full, the forehead smooth but often too narrow for perfect beauty; the hair is dark with a brilliant shine, the eyebrows and lashes are gracefully pencilled. The nose is fleshy and the nostrils dilate whenever a pleasure is in prospect; the eyes are smiling and bathed in a tender languor; frequently one eye is larger than the other. The mouth is small, with full lips of a bright red; it displays white and perfect teeth and coral-red gums. The body is plump but beautifully shaped, with no bone prominent; the hips are rather too marked. Hands and feet are small and well formed. Venusians are found of dress, of jewelry, of flowers, of perfumes, of music—especially simple, melodious music. They are often quite expert in some of the fine arts, which they cultivate more for the pleasure they find in them and to charm their friends than for the satisfaction of their vanity or for profit. The Venussians are remarkable for their constant good humor and their aversion to all strife and quarreling, even of the mildest character. They generally have large families. If this planet be under unfavorable aspects from Saturn, or Mars, its best benefits turn into terrible defects, especially if Jupiter is also in bad aspects. Then the effeminacy grows to such an extent as to destroy every noble trait in the subject's nature; the inherent sensuality of the Venusian allowing itself unrestricted scope becomes the cause of gravest excesses and ruins the subject's prospects. Sometimes, if the Venusian be a man and Mars should react on Venus, brutality in love matters will be the dominant feature of the wretched victim of this sad combination. As a matter of fact, in the good as well as in the bad Venusian, the senses are all powerful; they may act in a more refined way in the first case than in the second, but in either case, they have still to be watched over closely or may turn out to be rather unreliable rulers.
5. MERCURY

As I stated above, Mercury is an unclassified Planet, a sort of “free lance,” in the Astrological world. It is at times “friendly,” at others decidedly “inimical.” It all depends upon the aspect of the other planets toward it. Those born under Mercury—the Mercurians as they are called—are small in stature, but remarkable for their agility and bodily skill. Mentally, they are endowed with a versatility which renders them apt to undertake almost any study, trade, or profession, and make a success of it. They remain young-looking very late in life and their complexion, rather of a creamy white, is often tinted by blushes. The hair is chestnut-colored and curls at the end; the forehead is high, the eyebrows meet, the eyes themselves are deep-set and penetrating, a little too restless, perhaps; the nose is straight, the upper lip protrudes slightly; the chin is long and pointed.

The Mercurians are active to a degree, fond of money-making and clever in business. Their voice is not strong and yet they are often eloquent, but of an eloquence that does not dazzle; it is of a convincing, not of a showy; style. They are born logicians and, on that account, are excellent mathematicians; they have wit, are quick at repartee and excel in turning a threatening failure into success. They are met most frequently among the professions, the medical particularly; they are successful in society and a Mercurian of the fair sex has always a crowd of fascinated admirers in her train when much handsomer women remain uncourted. In fact, adventurers of both sexes are, eight times out of ten, Mercurians, for they need a great deal of personal magnetism to victimize their dupes. Affected by Saturn, the Mercurian will become extremely dangerous, for he grows secretive, which Mercury is not by nature. Then all these talents for mischief may lead him to crime, such as forgery, perjury, even poisoning.

The defect against which all those born under Mercury ought to guard themselves with a tireless vigilance is a temptation to lie and an irresistible inclination to annex too freely other people's property by schemes that are called "clever business devices" by the unscrupulous. Then again, they talk too much for the sake of boasting of their various feats of cleverness, and this weakness leads them into all manner of trouble.
6. THE SUN

The Solarians—or those born under the influence of the Sun—are of an average size, handsome and well built; their complexion has a sort of golden tint; their hair is often a beautiful blond color, wavy and abundant; their forehead is well developed but too high; it denotes at once the uncommonly brainy type of the subject. The eyes are large, of a graceful shape, full of fire and yet gentle in expression; they are somewhat prominent and the eyesight is easily affected. The face is well rounded, the mouth is arched and the teeth regular but somewhat yellowish in tint; the chin is round and firm. The body is admirably shaped, the bearing is proud and stately, but in the good Solarian there is no trace of silly vanity. They are, intellectually, a very superior race and no other star endows its subjects with such a taste for all the arts. They are dreamers of beautiful dreams and although not what one calls “practical,” they are singularly successful. Often it seems as if everything they touched turned into gold. They are essentially lucky and their gambling or speculating ventures seldom fail to ultimately enrich them, especially if they obey their own inspirations. Their great defects are: a great deal of unconscious selfishness, and, as a natural result, a lack of constancy in their affections. Thus these most amiable and charming individuals render the people devoted to them very unhappy and discouraged.

The Solarians are often called to the highest positions in the world they belong to, as their flowery eloquence and charming personality dazzle their listeners. They are not shrewd in business matters and, being accessible to flattery, are frequently the victims of sharpers and adventurers. In brief, they are the spoiled children of Nature and if they realize their weak points in good time, they have a magnificent existence before them.

7. THE MOON

You have doubtless noticed by this time that words in every-day use, such as “jovial,” “saturnian,” “mercurial,” “sunny,” applied to the dispositions of the human temper correspond with remarkable exactitude to the names given by Astrology to the various planetary types. The rule holds good with the Moon subjects, whom we call “Lunarians” (not “lunatics”).

height, with blond hair, rather prominent, light-colored eyes and a round head with somewhat bulging brow. They are stout, but this is often due to an ultra-lymphatic temperament. They have a tendency to dropsy and kidney diseases. The hair falls easily and so do the teeth; there is a sort of vague expression in the eyes, which are often watery. To the Lunarian type belong the nervous, hysterical temperaments, easily hypnotized and genuinely clairvoyant. Their intuition is all the more remarkable, since they are very poor reasoners and are swayed to and fro by an ever-working imagination. Their nature is seldom well-balanced and, unless properly trained or protected by "friendly" Planets in favorable aspects, the Lunarians may end in insane asylums as "lunatics."

However, a fair amount of Moon influence may be beneficial, especially to those whose profession calls for a constant supply of imagination, such as poets, novelists, composers, and even painters and sculptors. As a rule it is among women that one finds the greatest number of Lunarians; their special physical troubles are also very powerfully influenced by the Moon. Intuition, this precious gift of the weaker sex, is due to the same planet; finally, the Lunarians are decidedly hypochondriac, that is, constantly imagining themselves the prey of some disease or other.

This closes my present review of the Planets' characteristics. Remember, this is only the ground-work of what is coming later; but, like every other kind of groundwork, it is an essential part of the structure and has to be studied in all its details, if any satisfactory results are to be secured.

CHAPTER V

THE TWELVE SOLAR HOUSES

We have studied, sufficiently for all practical purposes, the first two elements of a Horoscope, namely, "the 12 signs of the Zodiac" and "the 6 Planets." Now we reach the third element, which, intelligently combined with the two others, will give us the most extraordinary inside view into the lives of the subjects under inspection.

This new and distinct element in our study consists in another method of dividing the Zodiac, discovered or prescribed by the ancient Magi, and their successors, the Egyptian Priests. Here again, the Zodiac is divided into twelve equal parts, called this time "Solar Houses," and designated by the numerals I. to XII. in Roman figures.

The student will remember that, when we began our examination of the Signs of the Zodiac, we placed the first Sign, "Aries," in what is called the "Orient" (= East) of the Zodiacal circle. This same space (to the left hand of the reader when examining a diagram of the Zodiac) is permanently occupied by House I. Proceeding downward to what is called the "Bottom" of the Horoscope, we place House II. in the compartment reserved for "Taurus."
Continuing in the same direction we place:

House III. in "Gemini."
House IV. in "Cancer."
House V. in "Leo."
House VI. in "Virgo."
House VII. in "Libra."
House VIII. in "Scorpio."
House IX. in "Sagittarius."
House X. in "Capricorn."
House XI. in "Aquarius."
House XII. in "Pisces."

The illustration in this Chapter locates the 12 Houses in accordance with the above enumeration. Now, this is the position of the Houses in every Horoscope; they never change.

On the other hand, the Signs of the Zodiac, although keeping in their immutable order, are "oriented" (placed) in such a manner that the sign containing the date of the subject's birth always occupies the space which is devoted to Aries when the Zodiac is, as above, examined by itself and without having any particular individual in view. In other words, the sign representing the date of birth is invariably placed in House I.

As an example, let us suppose that the subject was born on September 23, i.e., in the second degree of Libra. After drawing a circle and dividing it into twelve equal parts, we shall place the sign of Libra where, in our illustration, Aries is marked. Then, working our way downward, we will place:

- Scorpio where Taurus was.
- Sagittarius where Gemini was.
- Capricorn where Cancer was.
- Aquarius where Leo was.
- Pisces where Virgo was.
- Aries where Libra was.
- Taurus where Scorpio was.
- Gemini where Sagittarius was.
- Cancer where Capricorn was.
- Leo where Aquarius was.
- Virgo where Pisces was.

In such a Horoscope the signs are located in the following Houses:

- Libra in House I.; Scorpio in House II.;
- Sagittarius in House III.; Capricorn in House IV.; Aquarius in House V.; Pisces in House VI.; Aries in House VII.; Taurus in House VIII.; Gemini in House IX.;
- Cancer in House X.; Leo in House XI.; Virgo in House XII.

As each of the Houses embraces one or more of the leading features of man or woman’s physical, mental, and moral characteristics, as well as all the important events of his or her life, the clear understanding of the meanings of the Solar Houses—not only by themselves but in connection with the signs of the Zodiac which the fatality of birth has caused to be located in each of the Houses—brings us a wide step nearer to a complete comprehension of the Astrological mysteries.

Let me give you first the grouping of the twelve Houses in four divisions of high philosophical importance and at the same time of real practical utility for every student. And in this connection, allow me to remind you of the divisions of the Signs of the Zodiac into the four Trinocracies: Fire, Earth, Air and Water.

Here we have also four groups:

First Group: House I., V., IX.—These represent the life of the subject:—House I., his own life and type. House V., his life in his children. House IX., his life in the upper world, in God; his religion.

Second Group: Houses X., VI., II.—These represent the activity, honors and money-making possibilities of the subject.—House X., refers to what is not financial, in one’s prosperity, such as promotions, honors, etc.,
House VI., to the possessions of the subject that are of an animated nature, such as slaves, cattle, etc. House II., treats of the other kinds of wealth.

Third Group: Houses VII., III., XI.—They represent love in its various manifestations.—House VII., refers to marriage, and in general to love between the sexes. House III., to blood relations. House XI., to friends.

Fourth Group: Houses IV., XII., VIII.—They represent old age, illness and death.—House IV., refers to the various traits that come by heredity. House XII., to all the troubles that may affect us: disease, imprisonment, exile, etc. House VIII., reveals the time and manner of death.

Almost as a matter of course, its next neighbor, House IX., is devoted to such revelations as refer to the Supreme Being and a future life.

In these elementary lessons I try to avoid, as much as possible, the introduction of too many technical words, and yet I must speak here of two other divisions of the Houses, which are referred to frequently in more extended Astrological works. The first is as follows:
Houses I., IV., VII. and X. are called "Cardinal" or "Angular."
Houses II., V., VIII. and XI. are called "Succedent."
Houses III. VI., IX. and XII are called "Cadent."
The second division is as follows:
Good or "Favorable": Houses I., II., V., VII., X.
Indifferent or "Middling": Houses III., IV., IX., XI.
Bad or "Unfavorable": Houses VI., VIII., XII.

I wish I had the space and time to demonstrate to you that the apparent disorder in the arrangement of the Houses is, in reality, a most admirable and logical grouping of all the elements that compose a human existence. I will only add this—which applies to everything I have taught you so far: no single department of Astrological study—either the characteristics of the Signs of Zodiac, or the nature and position of the Planets, or the location and meanings of the Solar Houses, taken separately and apart from the other elements of study, could suffice to cast a reliable Horoscope, although in many respects it may furnish surprisingly accurate data. It is only the combined examination of all these three great components that brings forth a true and worthy Horoscope. We are studying now each of these elements separately, but in a short time I shall be able to initiate you a little further, and to place in your hands the key of one of the most curious and trustworthy of the occult sciences.

As stated above, we find in each House accurate information referring to some special characteristics or events concerning the person under examination.

HOUSE I.

Thus, House I., called also “the Horoscope” or “the House of Nativity,” is especially rich in details concerning the subject’s type, his physical, mental and moral propensities, and his past, present and future health. Here, also, we find everything concerning the duration of life and possible accidents, especially those that might affect the head.

HOUSE II.

House II. furnishes information about pecuniary transactions, their success or failure, the probabilities of becoming rich at some time or other, whether it be advisable to take risks in money matters or, on the contrary, to be satisfied with a moderate competence acquired without resorting to any speculative ventures. It also tells gamblers when, and when not, to tempt fickle fortune.

A close study of all the various features of astrology proves a fairly sure guide in all enterprises that possess an element of danger. But a long experience is necessary before such revelations are to be trusted at all. Beware of so-called astrologers who offer their services to speculators on the Board of Trade or the Stock Exchange; as a rule, they are absolute frauds, as they do not give themselves the trouble to go deep enough in the arcana of our science to obtain reliable answers to their clients' queries. In most cases they are not astrologers at all, but simply swindlers.

HOUSE III.

House III. will tell you everything of interest concerning your brothers, sisters, and other collateral relatives. It reveals also when travels and minor changes in the subject's existence are to take place, also the influence of passing acquaintances.
HOUSE IV.

House IV. refers to parents and ancestors in the direct line; to inheritances, legacies, family secrets, mysteries of all kinds in which the subject, his parents and his direct descendants are interested. A loss of position due to some family stain or disaster is also occasionally found marked in this House.

HOUSE V.

House V. is known as the “House of Good Fortune,” and in it most of the joys of life are discovered. Our love affairs, either ending in marriage or otherwise; our children; success in our career, the satisfactions of our pride; the presents we receive, and the rewards that come to us—deserved or not—all these and many others of similar nature are predicted to us by astrological readings based on the occupants of House V.

HOUSE VI.

House VI. used to be dubbed, by the ancient astrologers, the “Hospital of the Zodiac,” and it truly deserves this appellation, since it is there that we are notified of everything concerning our illnesses, our most serious disappointments, the cruel blows that Fate has in reserve for us, and our repeated failure to triumph over "what has been written." In the same House we must look for all that concerns our inferiors, our servants, our dependents.

HOUSE VII.

House VII. is the revealer of such things as relate to marriage and every kind of partnership. Strange to say, it is here also that we are apprized of our open enemies' attacks, of fights, and—should we be rulers of our fellow-beings—of the wars we shall have to wage or which will be waged against us. The fact that this House is directly opposite to House I., the House of the subject's birth—renders it dangerous and imical to the very existence of the person under examination. Separations, divorces, grave disagreements in matters of affection and interest are also found predicted herein.

HOUSE VIII.

House VIII. divides with Houses VI. and XII. the worst prognostics that are furnished by astrological examinations. It tells of sorrows, of the loss of beloved ones, of serious wounds, of fatal accidents, of diseases, and of death. The only consolation we can sometimes extract from this House is the announcement of unexpected inheritances, of gifts of importance coming to us unexpected, but welcome.

HOUSE IX.

House IX. reminds us of the resources and holy balm to be found in religion, of the possible development of our higher brain-power, of our abilities for philosophical studies, of our love for delving into the mysterious realms of the occult. Whenever this House is well endowed with Signs and Stars in their favorable aspects, you may feel certain that the subject is a person of very unusual accomplishments.

HOUSE X.

House X. is the revealing center of all the honors and dignities that may gild the life-horizon of the person under examination. Remember that it does not promise the realization of foolish ambitions, entirely out of porportion to the subject’s position in life. But, within the sphere where Fate has placed his lot, he will be looked up to as a leader, and if he is never to be “the second in Rome,” he is fairly sure to be “first in his village.” In one’s calling or profession, prominence is in the gift of this House; it is believed by many astrologers that House X. gives more vain glory than moneyed success. As a side issue, we often consult House X. for information on the subject's mother, while in House IV. the father's fate is found predicted or related.

HOUSE XI.

House XI. is the revealer of the benefactors and the true friends it may be our lot to meet during life. They are, as we all know to our sorrow, few and far between, and so are the disinterested protectors also announced in this House. Finally, by the fact of its being exactly opposite House V. we obtain here supplementary information concerning our children, the alliances (matrimonial or other) we may contract, and we are also told sometimes of the chances of seeing our most cherished hopes realized.

HOUSE XII.

House XII. is undoubtedly the worst of the 12 Zoadical habitations, especially for those who do not consider death as being the greatest evil man is heir to. It refers to the troubles and heart burnings coming to us from the treachery of friends; to ceaseless persecutions rendering our life more than a purgatory; to calumny pursuing us relentlessly, to imprisonment, exile, wretched poverty, unutterable discouragement and despair.

And this ends my rapid examination of the 12 Houses, the close study of which I take the liberty of particularly recommending to my readers.
CHAPTER VI
THE THIRTY-SIX DECANS

Now that we have obtained a pretty fair and accurate idea of the three main elements of Astrological lore, to-wit: The Signs of the Zodiac, the Planets and the Solar Houses, I want to enter into some further revelations which you will not find in any other works of the kind published on this side of the water or in England. I refer to the meanings given to the divisions of the 12 Signs of the Zodiac.

You must be told first, that the Egyptian priests—who became the depositaries and perfectors of the ancient science of predicting man's fate from the stars—had placed each Zoadical period of 30 days under the guardianship of one of the supernatural beings we call "genii." They further divided each sign into periods of 10 days, assuming some particular spirit as the power dominating over each of these spaces of 10 days. Finally, each day had its demi-god in charge and its separate interpretation.
I do not intend to give you here the names of these strange and powerful beings nor do I propose to explain the meanings and prognostics attached to every one of the 365 days of the year. But, to come a little closer to the understanding of the nature of the subject under examination, I will insert in this volume of brief lessons, the positive and most reliable statements that concern each one of these periods of ten days called in Astrological parlance "Decans" from the Greek word "deka," meaning "ten." Instead of following the usual order of the Signs and beginning the year in March, I will start from January 1st.

JANUARY

Decan I. From January 1 to 10 (Capricorn, 12 to 21).—Intelligence devoted to useless pursuit. Constant scheming of unpractical affairs. Warlike disposition.

Decan II. January 11 to 20 (Capricorn, 22 to Aquarius 1).—Suspicious, skeptical mind; impotence, timidity.

Decan III. January 21 to 30 (Aquarius, 2 to 11).—Anxiety due to hard struggle for life. Disappointed ambition. Delay in the realization in one's hopes. Illness in infancy due to neglect of the nurse.
THE DECANS

FEBRUARY

Decan I. January 31 to February 9 (Aquarius, 12 to 21).—Well endowed brain-power. Gentleness of temper, private virtues.

Decan II. February 10 to 19 (Aquarius 22 to Pisces 1).—Extremely delicate childhood until 7 years old. Persistent difficulties through life. Bitter disappointments.

Decan III. February 20 to 28 (Pisces 2 to 10).—Great ambitions, love of glory; boldness in everything the subject undertakes.

MARCH

Decan I. March 1 to 10 (Pisces, 11 to 20).—Indolence, love of pleasure, sluggish mind.

Decan II. March 11 to 20 (Pisces, 21 to 30).—Restless disposition, confused scheming, fickle tendencies, yearnings for impossible things.

Decan III. March 21 to 30 (Aries, 1 to 10).—Firm, haughty disposition. Contempt for all obstacles and perils.

APRIL

Decan I. March 31 to April 9 (Aries, 11 to 20). Noble nature, generosity, aptitude for commanding, diplomatic talent.
Decan II. April 10 to 19 (Aries, 21 to 30). Quick and versatile mind. Love of pleasure.

Decan III. April 20 to 29 (Taurus 1 to 10).
—High intellectual faculties, inclination toward the exact sciences and political economy. The subject will meet with serious reverses, some of these of a violent character.

MAY

Decan I. April 30 to May 9 (Taurus, 11 to 20).—Generosity of mind and heart, lofty inclinations, distinctions due to merit; eloquence.

Decan II. May 10 to 19 (Taurus, 21 to 30).
—Obstacles to enterprises; obligation to submit to the authority of others in spite of a naturally independent temper; troubles against which the subject must fight with all possible energy.

Decan III. May 20 to 29 (Gemini, 1 to 19).—Restless disposition which will destroy the subject's chances in life. Threat of violent death.

JUNE

Decan I. May 30 to June 8 (Gemini, 11 to 20).—Careless, thoughtless disposition; superficiality, poor understanding of own best interest. Useless, often senseless, talk.
Decan II. June 9 to 18 (Gemini, 21 to 30).—Inclination toward the purely theoretical branches of knowledge that bring neither profit nor glory. Troubles through life. Serious disaster early in life.

Decan III. June 19 to July 3.—This period includes the five Epagomenes or Supplementary Days, thus completing the full 365 days of our regular year. (Cancer, 1 to 10).—Bright, quick mind, sociable instincts.

JULY

Decan I. July 4 to 13 (Cancer, 11 to 20).—Abrupt manners. Love of the arts and sciences. Great luck in money-making.

Decan II. July 14 to 23 (Cancer, 21 to 30).—Hard, inflexible temperament, calling upon force to carry out its wishes. Sea-voyages predicted.

Decan III. July 24 to August 2 (Leo, 1 to 19).—Violent disposition, fiery passions, often celebrity acquired in such arts as sculpture, architecture, engineering, etc., or as a playwright.

AUGUST

Decan I. August 3 to 12 (Leo, 11 to 20).—Phlegmatic temperament; force of inertia, exaggerated self-confidence. Talent for the plastic arts. Conceit.
Decan II. August 13 to 22 (Leo, 21 to 30).—Great persistency of purpose, egotism, adventurous disposition, highly successful ambition through luck and thanks to a combative spirit. Several marriages.

Decan III. August 23 to September 1 (Virgo, 1 to 10).—Longevity; timidity; aptitude for the analytical sciences and the mechanical arts.

SEPTEMBER

Decan I. September 2 to 11 (Virgo, 11 to 20).—Orderly and saving disposition, sometimes to the point of penuriousness. Patient perseverance in all undertakings.

Decan II. September 12 to 21 (Virgo, 21 to 30).—A passion for gambling or other forms of speculative ventures. Incapacity for useful productiveness, destructive tendencies. Grave fatalities on account of an unfortunate marriage or through relatives. Often an inventive genius.

Decan III. September 22 to October 1 (Libra, 1 to 10).—Love of justice and of truth; feeling of what is right; impulse to defend the weak against all oppression.

OCTOBER

Decan I. October 2 to 11 (Libra, 11 to 20).—Ambitious and restless mind. Great cleverness in the handling of men; audacity; success in all bold enterprises.

Decan II. October 12 to 21 (Libra, 21 to 30).—Intense love of all kinds of pleasures, of luxury and of the society of the other sex.

Decan III. October 22 to 31 (Scorpio, 1 to 10).—Disappointment, treachery often met with, perilous travels, chimerical enterprises.

NOVEMBER

Decan I. November 1 to 10 (Scorpio, 11 to 20).—Enmity from influential people that will threaten to ruin even the best prospects.

Decan II. November 11 to 20 (Scorpio, 21 to 30).—Ardent passions, unbending disposition, energy that knows no defeat.

Decan III. November 21 to 30 (Sagittarius, 1 to 10).—Haughty disposition, extreme love of independence. Brilliant military career; disastrous married life.

DECEMBER

Decan I. December 1 to 10 (Sagittarius, 11 to 20).—Deeply religious turn of mind. Great struggles all through life, terrible fits of anger. Gloomy temper. Scientifically inclined. Many unforeseen perils. Frankness mixed with a great mobility of impressions.

Decan II. December 11 to 20 (Sagittarius, 21 to 30).—Obstinacy, violent temper, shrewdness, often dishonest, versatility, fighting instincts.

Decan III. December 21 to 31 (Capricorn, 1 to 11).—Disastrous journeys, alternatives of very good and very bad fortune, great love sorrows.

Completing the above statements concerning the Decans the reader must know, that, just as each Sign of the Zodiac is the seat of the Thrones (diurnal or nocturnal) of one of the seven Planets, just so one of these Planets is in charge of each of the Decans, except when the astrological calculations place it somewhere else. I will give herein the list of these “Influences of the Decans.”

Now let me tell you how the knowledge of the influence of the planets on the Decans may be used by you to advantage.

After you have located a birthday where it belongs, in one of the degrees of one of the signs of the Zodiac, you must read carefully the various characteristics I gave you in Chapter III. as referring to those born under this, or that, particular sign. Then, turning to Chapter IV. you will read what I have taught you concerning the various planetary types. If the subject you are studying—either yourself or anyone else, even a total stranger—is born, say on August 3d, i. e., in the 9th degree of Leo, which belongs, of course, to the first Decan of the said Sign, you will find, by referring to the above table, that your subject was directly influenced at birth by the planet Saturn. Thus the reading of what I have told you about Leo and Saturn will already give you a much deeper insight into this particular person's real nature and into his, or her, past or future, than could be obtained simply by Zodiacal data. But this is anticipating a little, as I reserve for our future lessons the systematic working out of all the mass of classified information herein contained.
CHAPTER VIII

THE ASPECTS

The special object of this chapter is the explanation of what is meant by "Astrological Aspects," and the practical use to which the knowledge of these Aspects can be put for the proper casting of a Horoscope.

Will you kindly look back to my illustration, page 80, entitled "The Planets on their Thrones"? We will suppose for a moment, that in somebody’s Horoscope these luminaries are all occupying both their Thrones at the same moment. Now you will admit that, around the Zodiacal circle, these planets seem to be gazing at each other, so to speak, at different angles. Thus, if we take Saturn in Capricorn as the starting point (as I do in my illustration, page 124), Saturn is said to be in Semi-Sextile Aspect (\( \frac{7}{12} \)) toward Jupiter in Sagittarius.

in Sextile Aspect (\( \frac{3}{8} \)) toward Mars in Scorpio.

in Square Aspect (\( \frac{3}{4} \)) toward Venus in Libra.
in Trine Aspect ($\frac{1}{3}$) toward Mercury in Virgo.
in Sesquiquadrate Aspect ($\frac{5}{12}$) toward the Sun in Leo.
in Opposition Aspect ($\frac{1}{2}$) toward the Moon in Cancer.

In the accompanying illustration, I give the symbols or marks by which these six different aspects are indicated for short.
The seventh aspect is called conjunction and takes place whenever two or more planets are found in the same Zodiacal sign. Now keep in mind the two following statements:

First. By "Aspects" is always meant the positions of the planets respecting each other, as these vary constantly. The positions of the Signs of the Zodiac in respect to each other is immutable and cannot be referred to by the term "aspect."

Second. By my system, which is nothing more or less than the exact restoration of the oldest conception of the influence of the heavenly bodies upon the types and destinies of mankind, it constantly happens that the same planet appears several times in the same Horoscope of birth. Thus an almost infinite number of combinations of Aspects is formed; but numerous as they are, they are easily grouped together, so that even a very indifferent student may grasp their leading meanings.

I gave you the names and positions of the seven Aspects, but I do not advise you to use, nor do I use myself, more than five of these "points of view." These are: Conjunction, Sextile, Square, Trine, and OPPOSITION. The Rule in reference to Aspects is simply and invariably this:

1. Planets separated by one full Sign, or 60 degrees, are in Sextile Aspect.
2. Planets separated by two full Signs, or 90 degrees, are in Square Aspect.
3. Planets separated by three full Signs, or 120 degrees, are in Trine Aspect.
4. Planets separated by four full Signs, or 180 Degrees, are in Opposition Aspect.

The Semi-sextile and Sesquiquadrate Aspects are of so little consequence, comparatively speaking, that we may omit them entirely from our consideration.

Now that the Aspects have been well defined let me give you some general points concerning their Astrological value.

"Conjunction" is considered favorable only if the Planets thus brought together are "beneficent planets."

"Sextile" is always a favorable Aspect.

"Square" is an unfavorable Aspect, except between two beneficent planets.

"Trine" is always a favorable Aspect.

The "Opposition" of two planets is always considered as most unfavorable.
CHAPTER IX

THE CYCLIC TABLES OF THE YEARS

An Astrological Cycle consists of 36 years. Each such cycle is ascribed to one of the planets, in regular rotation. This planet presides over the 1, 8, 15, 22, 29 and 36 years of its cycle, while the other 6 planets preside over the remaining 30 years in sequence.

The cycles follow each other in the inverted order of the week days: The Sun (Sunday), Saturn (Saturday), Venus (Friday), Jupiter (Thursday), Mercury (Wednesday), Mars (Tuesday), The Moon (Monday).

The order in which the planets succeed each other within each cycle, is as follows: Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, Moon, Saturn, Jupiter, etc.

CYCLE OF VENUS (1801—1836)

Venus, 1801, 1808, 1815, 1822, 1829, 1836.
Mercury, 1802, 1809, 1816, 1823, 1830.
The Moon, 1803, 1810, 1817, 1824, 1831.
Saturn, 1804, 1811, 1818, 1825, 1832.
Jupiter, 1805, 1812, 1819, 1826, 1833.
Mars, 1806, 1813, 1820, 1827, 1834.
The Sun, 1807, 1814, 1821, 1828, 1835.
CYCLE OF JUPITER (1837—1872)

Jupiter, 1837, 1844, 1851, 1858, 1865, 1872.
Mars, 1838, 1845, 1852, 1859, 1866.
The Sun, 1839, 1846, 1853, 1860, 1867.
Venus, 1840, 1847, 1854, 1861, 1868.
Mercury, 1841, 1848, 1855, 1862, 1869.
The Moon, 1842, 1849, 1856, 1863, 1870.

CYCLE OF MERCURY (1873—1908)

Mercury, 1873, 1880, 1887, 1894, 1901, 1908.
The Moon, 1874, 1881, 1888, 1895, 1902.
Saturn, 1875, 1882, 1889, 1896, 1903.
Jupiter, 1876, 1883, 1890, 1897, 1904.
Mars, 1877, 1884, 1891, 1898, 1905.
The Sun, 1878, 1885, 1892, 1899, 1906.
Venus, 1879, 1886, 1893, 1900, 1907.

CYCLE OF MARS (1909—1944)

  etc.  etc.

In the cycles presented above, the planets preside over the years set opposite their names. The student can easily construct the cycles preceding or following those given.
CHAPTER X

YEARNLY HOROSCOPES

As the Zodiac makes a complete revolution in 12 years, the sign under which a person was born, will be:

In House I. during the years 1, 13, 25, 37, 49, 61, 73, 85, 97, 109, etc., of the person's life.
In House XII. during the years 2, 14, 26, 38, 50, 62, 74, 86, 98.
In House XI. during the years 3, 15, 27, 39, 51, 63, 75, 86, 99.
In House X. during the years 4, 16, 28, 40, 52, 64, 76, 88, 100.
In House IX. during the years 5, 17, 29, 41, 53, 65, 77, 89.
In House VIII. during the years 6, 18, 30, 42, 54, 66, 78, 90.
In House VII. during the years 7, 19, 31, 43, 55, 67, 79, 91.
In House VI. during the years 8, 20, 32, 44, 56, 68, 80, 92.
In House V. during the years 9, 21, 33, 45, 57, 69, 81, 93.
In House IV. during the years 10, 22, 34, 46, 58, 70, 82, 94.
In House III. during the years 11, 23, 35, 47, 59, 71, 83, 95.
In House II. during the years 12, 24, 36, 48, 60, 72, 84, 96.

This change is due to the fact that the Zodiac moves around by 30°, one whole sign, every year. If Leo, for instance, was in House I. at the birth of a person, it will be there again in his 37th year. In his 45th year Aries will be in House I. This is figured as follows:

45 - 1 = 44. \quad 44 + 12 = 3, \text{ remainder, 8.}
Add 5, the number of Leo. \[
8 + 5 = 13.
\[
13 - 12 = 1, \text{ the number of Aries.}

When the Sign of Nativity returns to House I.—Here you simply interpret the sign according to its general meaning as given in chapters 3 and 4. In our next lesson we shall study the meanings of the other Signs of the Zodiac passing through House I.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through House XII.—Obstacles to all enterprises, animosities difficult to overcome, illnesses, bad year for traveling or for beginning business or starting a law suit. Betrayal by friends.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through
House XI.—Anxieties, threatened loss of reputation; the death of a friend or relative interferes with one's prospects, but powerful protections will save the day. Probabilities of travel.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through House X.—A favorable year for any business having money-making as its object. A good time to take a sea voyage or to attack and conquer one's enemies. Fame will come to the subject. Also a chance to marry well. These excellent omens will be darkened by a family mourning.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through House IX.—Another excellent year for all matters of affection and friendship. Also for the success of enterprises and the effective assistance of people in high position. Threatened loss of most of these good things through some scandalous revelation coming to ears it should not reach.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through House VIII.—Illnesses and even danger of death. Betrayal by friends and disastrous love affairs. Those you liked best will turn out to be your worst enemies; to a great extent it will be your own fault.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through House VII.—Danger of robbery and fire.
Favorable year for entering upon married life. Unpleasant relations with one’s superiors or employers. Great changes in the subject’s position.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through House VI.—Dangerous illness. Great struggles. Annoying and lasting enmities. More than modest financial circumstances. The subject ought to be on his guard against everybody and everything. Wounds of a serious character.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through House V.—Danger from perfidious enemies, but happy chances through the protection of people in high position. Probable marriage. Providential assistance in the nick of time. The occupation of the subject will be the cause of successful travels.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through House IV.—Inheritance, or large present made to the subject. Danger of a serious fall or of drowning while on a business trip. A lucky year for the enterprises the subject will undertake alone, but he must not count on any assistance or any useful influence exerted in his favor. Family journeys. Unfortunate complications in love affairs.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through
House III.—A year of traveling or at least of moving. Threatened secret enmities and slow diseases. Loss of confidence on the part of the subject's employers. Financial failure. Friends will forsake him. He will be the victim of constant persecutions on the part of envious people bent on ruining his career.

When the Sign of Nativity passes through House II.—A splendid year for the financial prospects of the subject, except that he will be particularly exposed to being robbed or swindled. Those he has a right to believe his best friends will turn out his enemies. Danger through four-footed animals. Position due to influential protectors. Chance offered the subject to undertake a long and profitable journey. Physical dangers threaten the subject and his or her spouse.

THE PLANETS AS SEEN THROUGH A TELESCOPE
CHAPTER XI

MEANINGS OF THE PLANETS IN THE SOLAR HOUSES

The student understands clearly that the position of the Houses never varies; House I. always occupying the space devoted to the Zodiacal Sign Aries in our original design of the Zodiacal Circle on page 16, while the Zodiacal Sign of Nativity must be placed in this House I. in each particular case. For a thorough understanding of this all-important principle I refer you once more to Chapter V. which clearly explains the various points at issue. Now I propose to go one step further in my brief course of practical tuition and give you a concise synopsis of the "Meanings of each Planet when found in each House."

1. SATURN

In House I.—Delicate constitution, poor health, slow intelligence, gloomy disposition, dislike for social intercourse. In House II.—Very commonplace life-work, up-hill efforts to doubtful success. In House III.—Quarrels with relatives on account of money matters especially about inheritances. In House IV.—Vicious tendencies, miserliness, meanness in all affairs of life. In House V.—Childlessness, or loss of children in babyhood. In House VI.—Chronic diseases and needy circumstances. In House VII.—Unfortunate for partnerships and marriage. In House VIII.—A low, dangerous nature; will end his or her life in prison or even on the gallows. In House IX.—The genius of the inventor, the discoverer, the explorer; a powerful mind but seldom for the good of others or his own. In House X.—High position or honors, obtained through unworthy, sometimes shameful, means. In House XI.—A tendency to practice usury and even worse traffics; a despicable character generally. In House XII. Hatred of one's fellow-beings which is returned in kind; a wretched ending to a contemptible life.

2. JUPITER

In House I.—Splendid health, sanguine nature, fine presence, power over others, success. In House II.—Taste for arts and sciences. Success in almost any career; the subject is often chosen for important public offices or to manage large enterprises, as he inspires confidence. In House III.—A leader in the family circle, generally succeeds in pushing his own people to excellent positions. In House IV.—Fortune made in mining or in large agricultural enterprises. Especially endowed as an engineer. In House V.—Happiness in love matters and marriage relations; perhaps too much fickleness in affections. Blessed in children. In House VI.—Very large wealth; superb estates, picture galleries, horses, yachts, etc. In House VII.—Rich marriage, but, whenever the aspects of the other planets are not favorable, unhappiness in a union contracted more through ambition than for love. In House VIII.—The fine omens of the planets will be darkened by law suits, calumnies, loss of protectors, etc. In House IX.—Fortune made by means of extended traveling at home and abroad. In House X.—High official positions. In House XI.—Many friends and many people under the subject's orders; success greatly due to influential relations. In House XII.—Most serious reverses from which the subject will emerge triumphant, ending his life prosperous and universally honored.

3. MARS

In House I.—Aggressive, quarrelsome disposition; all through life frequently the victim of accident, wounds, falls, etc. In House II.—The calling of the subject will be of a dangerous nature; often he will be in the army or navy. In House III.—Bitter family quarrels. In House IV.—Severe illnesses due to the subject’s imprudence or excesses. In House V.—Extreme sensuality, resulting but too often in physical, financial and social ruin. In House VI.—Heavy losses of money caused by men or the elements, especially fire and water. In House VII.—Unfortunate marriages, separations, divorces, or, when the union is happy, early bereavement. In House VIII.—Violent accidents, serious wounds, even death. In House IX.—Great taste for dangerous expeditions, that may, and probably will, end fatally. In House X.—The social position of the subject will be ruined without warning. In House XI.—Frequent fights and association with objectionable people. In House XII.—Mars is here at its worst as it may tempt the subject to commit murder, or suicide.

In House I.—Noble instincts and healthy ambition. Excellent constitution and long life. In House II.—Honors and high situations coming to the subject on account of his brain-work and his accomplishments. In House III.—An only son, or in every way superior to, and more successful than, his brothers. Prosperity and distinction in a foreign country. In House IV.—Conceit replaces pride; a love for show at any cost ruins the prospects of the subject. In House V.—Pure, noble and disinterested love; a scrupulously honest conscience; a progeny to be proud of. In House VI.—Large wealth, life spent in a sumptuous palace. In House VII.—A brilliant marriage will raise the position of the subject far above expectations. In House VIII.—High honors on the battlefield, or on account of deeds of heroism. If the other planets are unfavorable, death in a fire or by sunstroke. In House IX.—Brilliant intelligence, great social and financial success, wide fame. In House X.—Honors bestowed on the subject, governmental position, high promotion in the church. In House XI.—A leading position in society and great wealth coming. In House XII.—Ambitions far beyond possibilities of realization; reverses followed by recoveries, happy and comfortable old age.
5. VENUS

In House I.—Beauty, grace and the gift of pleasing, but no faculty to judge people right, and, on that account, frequent deceptions. In House II.—Riches coming through the other sex; talents for such trades as are devoted to the beautifying of the body or to the light recreation of the mind. In House III.—Promise of perfect harmony with one's family. In House IV.—The loving instinct of the subject will prove a cause of ruin on account of excesses or lack of constancy. In House V.—Tenderness, platonic love, disinterested devotion, beauty of body and soul, bliss in mutual love. In House VI.—Inheritance or large gift from a person of the other sex, close to you by the ties of love or blood. In House VII.—Most happy marriage. In House VIII.—Exasperated jealousy leading to crime, committed either by, or against, the subject. In House IX.—Ambition excited by love, the loved one met on a travel or belonging to another nationality. In House X.—Social prominence due to the efforts and influence of a loved one. In House XI.—Innumerable flirtations, but generally helpful in one's career. In House XII.—Contemptible love affairs, position ruined through unworthy intrigues.

6. MERCURY

In House I.—Great versatility but very superficial talents; ability in handling people; the other planets will decide whether this cleverness will prove a blessing or a curse. In House II.—Versatility is here still more marked and so are its drawbacks. In House III.—The subject will be in partnership with brother or sister. In House IV.—Serious illnesses, low occupations, wretched understanding of life. In House V.—A disposition to be unscrupulous in all dealings. In House VI.—The subject will be a broker of some kind, a speculator with other people's money, generally lucky but seldom honest. In House VII.—Two successive marriages or sometimes two simultaneous households. In House VIII.—A quarrelsome disposition; going to law on the slightest pretext and seldom faithful to his word. In House IX.—Love for traveling and the society of foreigners; constant changes in plans. In House X.—Great, but unwarranted, ambitions, rewarded only by minor positions. In House XI.—Many useful acquaintances but few real friends. In House XII.—Many disasters due to the lack of wisdom and the intriguing ways of the subject. Threats of prison, exile and total ruin.

7. THE MOON

In House I.—Queer tastes, disposition to constant changes. In House II.—A number of successive occupations, lack of stability in pursuits. In House III.—Twin brothers or sisters, early death of mother, many travels in one's own country. In House IV.—Accidents on the water, danger of drowning, possible insanity, sudden changes of position. In House V.—Fickleness in love matters and lack of moral principles; often childishness. In House VI.—One lives under the persistent illusion of being rich, frequently in the train of some wealthy protector. In House VII.—Unlucky marriages. Very frequently separations or divorces. In House VIII.—Threatened fatal ending of life on the water or near the water on account of the hatred of persons of the opposite sex. In House IX.—Extended traveling in foreign countries, often exile and death away from home. In House X.—Upsetting of excellent prospects through the wayward or wicked conduct of the subject. The reputation will be tarnished and the life made wretched and restless. In House XI.—Undesirable associations and bad habits ruining the chances of the subject. In House XII.—The worst of all combinations. Applies to regular malefactors, wandering about looking for crimes to commit, or at least leading a life of dissipation amidst the lowest surroundings.
CHAPTER XII

CASTING A HOROSCOPE

The "Horoscope of Nativity" forecasts the entire life of the subject, while the "Horoscope of Revolution" gives information about a certain day, or month, or year. The difference between the two is marked, and we will state the points in which the manner of casting a "Horoscope of Revolution" varies from the other, in a footnote,* for future reference.

At present we will proceed, without delay, to cast a Horoscope of Nativity.

In our system now presented for the

*HOROSCOPE OF REVOLUTION

For the summit of the genethliac scale add the Fatidic number to the year in question.

In consulting the Zodiacal Calendar and the cyclic tables look for the year in question.

Orient (locate) the Zodiac according to instructions on pages 129 and 130.

For locating the planets consult the circle of the Rose-Cross (page 184), disregarding the table of Arcanes, page 167.

first time to the American public, one of the essential elements of every horoscope consists of the name of the person of whom the horoscope is cast. By name we mean "the given name and the family name." To this must be added the exact date of birth, including hour, date, month and year. Should the subject be born before mid-day then he is supposed, astrologically, to be born on the preceding day and his horoscope is based on that date and not on the date which he generally believes to be that of his birth.

Now, to make our instructions in the matter perfectly simple and clear, let us take an example, and choose the Horoscope of a very prominent man, so that the reader may judge for himself whether the results of this horoscope correspond with what we know of that man's life.

We will choose for the erection of what is called technically a genethliac figure, Victor Hugo, the great French poet, born before mid-day on February 26, 1802.

The first operation consists in translating into numbers every letter found in the name and surname of the illustrious Frenchman. Here is the

This transformation of the letters of the alphabet into numbers is not arbitrary, but proceeds from the books of the Kabbala and the traditions of the Rosicrucians.* If I were to introduce here the Hebrew alphabet, I could make this interesting and important part much clearer to the student. But this would lead too far, and it is sufficient for him to know the value of each letter in figures.

Now that you know the numerical value of the letters you will arrange the letters forming the given name in one column; beginning at the bottom, you will place 1 opposite the lowest letter, 2 opposite the letter above and so on until you reach the top. You multiply this first figure, in each case, with the number representing the letter and you add the products of all these multiplications.

As an example, here is how the calculation will look when applied to the name of "Victor":

\begin{align*}
V &- 6 \times 6 = 36 \\
I &- 1 \times 5 = 5 \\
C &- 2 \times 4 = 8 \\
T &- 4 \times 3 = 12 \\
O &- 7 \times 2 = 14 \\
R &- 2 \times 1 = 2 \\
\end{align*}

Victor ............... 77

Let us repeat the same operation for the family name:

\begin{align*}
H &- 8 \times 4 = 32 \\
U &- 6 \times 6 = 18 \\
G &- 3 \times 2 = 6 \\
O &- 7 \times 1 = 7 \\
\end{align*}

Hugo ............... 63

No attention is to be paid to any name but the given name by which the subject was most generally known since infancy, and to the family name that he or she inherited from the parents. It is impossible to base a horoscope on pet names or adopted surnames. They must be really the name and surname given to the little one when it came into this world.

Now we have to transform the date of birth into the proper degree of the sign of the Zodiac under which the subject was born. The Zodiacal Calender, found on page 117, will tell us that the 26th of February corresponds to the 7th degree of the Constellation of "Pisces," which is the 12th Sign of the Zodiac. Now, if the reader refers to our chapter on Cycles he will find that the year 1802 was ruled by the planet "Mercury." (See page 127.)

Now let us put all our information down in a line.

77 — 63 — 12 — 7 Mercury.

Of course, the reader remembers that the Zodiacal sign under which the subject was born must always be placed in House I. of the Horoscope and all the other signs inscribed in their regular rotation within each of the Solar Houses.

We now come to the building up of the Genethliac Scale, by writing first the Year of Nativity, then the Number of the Sign, then the Degree, then the Total given by the Name, then the Total given by the Surname, finally the Number called "the Summit of the Horoscope," which is obtained as follows: Add all the digits contained in the name, surname, degree and sign, \[7 + 7 + 6 + 3 + 7 + 1 + 2 = 33\]

This number (33) is called the fatidic number. We add it to the birthyear to get the summit of the horoscope:
\[1802 + 33 = 1835\]

Now, \(1 + 8 + 3 + 5 = 17\). The two numbers, 33 and 17, refer to Arcanes XXXIII and XVII.

This first calculation gives us:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year of Nativity</th>
<th>1802</th>

<td>77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Surname</td>
<td>63</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summit of the Horoscope</td>
<td>1835</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Let us now reverse the order of these figures, making it read as follows:

```
Genethliac Scale of Victor Hugo.
```

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

The Roman figures at the right hand of the above figures indicate the "Houses," over which the planets and arcanes exert an influence, which we shall find by consulting the "Fatidic Circles." Thus the four indications furnished us by the figure 1835 will influence House X.; the two indications furnished us by the number 63 will influence House XI., and so on, down to House III.

We see that they will influence these Houses, either directly by being placed in the space reserved for each House, on the circle of the Horoscope, or indirectly by means of a Ray from the House where they will be placed to the House which they are to influence. (See cut, page 153.)

Now that the Genethliac Scale has been constructed and the Fatidic Circle selected, we proceed as follows:

A circle being a figure without beginning or end there must be a rule to find out where to start it. A special table called "Table of Starting Points" (p. 168) tells us, according to the decade of Nativity, where we shall find the first indication to be inserted in connection with House X.

We will continue with the example which we have been using. The 7th degree of any sign of the Zodiac belongs to its first decade, the Table in question shows us opposite the first decade of "Pisces" the Roman figure LXXVIII. This is our starting point and if we look in the Fatidic Circle,
No. 5, (p. 179) under the influence of Mercury, we find written the following:

200—10. LXXVIII. Saturn.
Which means that Saturn has to be placed in House X.

Now, the Fatidic Circles contain the following numbers:

1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60, 70, 80, 90, 100, 200, 300, 400.

Therefore, all other numbers have to be decomposed in their simple elements, thus:

1,000, 2,000, etc., become respectively 10, 20, and so on.

In the hundreds, all numbers above 400 are changed to the corresponding numbers below 10. Thus: 500, 600, etc., become, respectively, 5, 6, etc.

As a complete example, let us take the Summit of the Genethliac Scale we have just erected for the Victor Hugo horoscope.

This Summit is 1835; it is thus decomposed: 1,000 becomes 10. 800 becomes 8. 30 remains 30. 5 remains 5.

Continuing to analyze the numbers of our Genethliac Scale: The Name—63, gives 60 and 3. The Surname—77, gives 70 and 7. The Degree—7, remains 7. The Sign—12, gives 10 and 2. The year of Nativity—1802, gives us 10, 8 and 2.
We have now all the various elements needed for building the Figure of our Horoscope. We take a compass and trace "three concentric circles" about the size of our illustration. We orient it (fix its bearings) by placing outside of these circles—which have been previously divided into twelve equal parts—the Roman figure I to the East, i.e., where Aries was placed in our first illustration in the Chapter on the Signs of the Zodiac. We proceed to number all the divisions, as we explained it in the Chapter on the Solar Houses. For, as you must know by this time, the positions of the Houses never change.

Next, we inscribe the Signs of the Zodiac, in their regular order, beginning with "Pisces," which is the Sign of Nativity of the subject whose Horoscope we are now casting.

Now comes the task of placing the Planets and the Arcana where they belong. We do it as follows:

The first number in our Genethliac Scale refers, as always, to House X. and will read as follows:

1835—or 10, 8, 30, 5.

We know that our Cycle is that of Mercury and our starting point LXXVIII.
We find that this, LXXVIII., just corresponds to 10, (the first division of our number, 1835.) and that, opposite, is inscribed "Saturn." We therefore inscribe the symbol of Saturn (♃) in House X.

The next figure is 8; to find what it corresponds to, we go to the Table of the twenty-two Major Arcanes (which has always to be consulted before beginning any of the Fatidic Circles, 1 to 7, inclusive). We find that 8 corresponds to Major Arcane VIII. and it tells us to place the Symbol of Venus in the Sign of Cancer. To show, however, that the House X is the one influenced, we direct a Ray from Cancer to House X, being careful to mark the starting point of the Ray with a small circle to indicate where it comes from. We also inscribe the Roman figure belonging to the Arcane, and do so all along whenever we meet with Major Arcanes, as these are of such capital importance.

The next figure is 30, which, on the Table of Major Arcanes, we find in connection with Arcane XII. and with the mention, “The Moon in Libra.” We place the symbol of the Moon in Libra with a Ray to House X., and, also in Libra the figure XII.

The last figure of the first number is 5. We follow the Table of Major Arcanes to the end, and then start at the beginning of Fatidic Circle No. 5, devoted to Mercury, until we meet, for the first time, figure 5. Opposite we read “Mercury in Aries,” and, therefore, we place the symbol of Mercury in Aries with a Ray to House X. We will present our results in a table, as follows:

CONDENSED INTERPRETATION

OF VICTOR HUGO'S COMPLETE HOROSCOPE

as revealed by the presence of the Zodiacal Signs and Planets in each of the Solar Houses (Chaps. III., IV., V., XI.), by the Aspects (Chap. VIII.) and by the Arcanes (end of this Chap.).

House I. Fame in literature through unremitting labors. Dreamy, poetical temperament; restless and changeable disposition; refined but pleasure-loving tastes. Wealth and honors. Ripe old age. (V. H., one of the greatest French poets and authors, died at the age of 84. See Houses II., X.)

House II. Marked versatility; lack of stability. High position; threatened loss of it. Property through marriage. (V. H. was created viscount and life member of French Senate, but was extremely changeable in his political views. See House VII.)

House III. Family troubles; long journeys in consequence; strife and contention between relatives. (V. H.'s father and mother separated, father taking children.)

House IV. Parents of excellent family. Father high rank in army. Subject conceited; fond of show and applause. (V. H.’s father was a general in French army. V. H. was exceedingly vain and craved public applause.)

House V. Honors and distinctions. Possible flirtations. Happy marriage. Children affectionate—girl causes anxiety; disaster threatened. (V. H. married for love; fairly worshiped his wife. See House VIII.)

House VI. Loss of eldest child. Troubles with dependents. (See House VIII.)

House VII. Fateful events; loss of position; changeable fortunes; ultimate triumph. Rich marriage. (V. H. elected to Academy, 1841; in political exile from 1848 to 1870. See House II.)

House VIII. Violent and probably fatal accident on water; threatened ending of child’s life; warning of insanity and close connection between it and death. (One of V. H.’s daughters and her husband were drowned in a boating accident and another daughter became insane in consequence.)

House IX. At enmity with the church. Lack of religious feeling. (Witness his writings.)

House X. Happiness, save sorrows through children. Mother’s influence inimical. Many years prisoner or exile. Many friends. Highest governmental honors. (At his funeral France conferred highest national honors on V. H. See Houses VII., VIII.)

House XI. Early vicissitudes; changeable friendships; risks from intrigue; brother or sister unfriendly. Final triumph. (V. H.'s youth was marked by frequent changes of environment. See Houses III., VII.)

House XII. Quarrels with friends. Exile for political reasons. Renown in liberal arts. (See Houses VII., I., II., X.)

(Note especially the several marked indications of renown, exile, early vicissitudes and death of child.)

For further practice we will give as another sample the actual horoscope of a personal friend. (For obvious reasons, the name is withheld.)

First name, 102; Family Name, 31; Birth, December 7, 1847, in the morning. Result:

102 - 31 - 15 - 9 = \text{Venus.}

1 + 0 + 2 + 3 + 1 + 1 + 5 + 9 = 22.
\]

1847 + 22 = 1869.

Remember that middle names are disregarded in the erection of a horoscope.
Information from the above: 1, the fatidic number 22 refers to Arcane XXII., forecasting great fatality. 2, The summit of the Horoscope means Arcane XXIV. \((1 + 8 + 6 + 9 = 24)\), making the success of the subject dependent on a woman. 3, The second decan of Sagittarius (see Page 113) corroborates Arcane XXII. and makes the subject of angry, gloomy temper, scientifically inclined, frank and impressionable. 4. The Moon reigning over the second decan of Sagittarius (see Page 115) indicates that the troubles and perils arise from marriage. 5, The 15th degree of Sagittarius announces timidity.

We continue the erection of the horoscope:

Starting, in the Fatidic Circle of Venus (Page 182) from the second decan of Sagittarius, Arcane LXXVIII., we construct the figure shown in our cut. (The student should remember that, in counting, Arcane I. (not 22) follows upon Arcane 78.)
House X.—1869.

1000 = 10—Saturn—in Virgo.
800 = 8—Arcane VIII. and Venus in Cancer, and ray to X.

60—Arcane XV. and Saturn in Sagittarius, and ray to X.
9—The Royal Star of Leo.
HOROSCOPES

House XI.—31.
30—Jupiter in Libra.
 1—Arcane LV. of the Rose-Cross: The Sword.

House XII.—102
100—Mars in Pisces, and ray to XII.
 2—The Sun in Libra (with Jupiter), and ray to XII.

House I.—15.
10—Saturn.
 5—Arcane 5, with Mars in Aries (ray to I.).

House II.—9.
 9—Arcane IX. with Jupiter in Lec (ray to II.)

House III.—1847.
 1000 = 10—Arcane X. with Mercury in Virgo (ray to III.).
 800 =  8—The Moon in Cancer (ray to III.)
 40—The minor Arcane XLIII.
  7—Mercury, and ray from X. to III.

If by accident any planet is not located, put it on its diurnal or nocturnal throne (see page 79), according to the time of birth.
The meaning of the Zodiacal Sign inscribed in each House is easily gathered from Chapter III. by consulting Chapter V.; but the student will welcome the detailed interpretation of the Planets (see Chap. XI.) and of their Aspects (see Chap. VIII.), which follows:

Saturn, twice in House I.—Poverty and hard work in youth; independent spirit, melancholy temperament.

Saturn in House X.—Nocturnal birth makes settled position difficult till thirtieth year. Endangers married happiness and children.

Saturn in Virgo.—Mysterious fatalities, which concern position because of Virgo being in House X. Loss of grown children. Taste for science and public life. Two marriages possible.

Saturn in Sagittarius.—Slow to learn. Mind hard to understand. Sorrows in wedlock. Good morals. High promotion late, if ever.

Saturn with Mercury in the same House (X.).—Concentration of character, deliberate, grave, discreet. Weakness in the tests of life. Serious study.

Saturn with the Royal Star of Leo (which is as powerful as the Sun).—Strong reason-

Jupiter with Arcane of Sword.—The good things foretold will not be obtained except through hard fight.

Jupiter in trine aspect with Mercury. (Favorable; see Page 126).—Keen judgment. Talent for science and arts. Ingenuity. Wealth and honors.

Jupiter in opposition to Mars.—Friendship changing to enmity. Marital troubles. Separation from family or children.

Mars in House IV.—Misfortune caused by women. Danger of wounds by steel or fire. Falls from high places. Brain disease, headaches. Troubles with parents or parents-in-law.

Mars in Aries.—Irritable temper. Wounds in head. Trouble with eyes and intestines.

Mars in opposition with Mercury.—Bad connections. Danger of imprisonment.

The Sun in Libra.—Great moral qualities. Reflective, observing mind. Talent for poetry and the arts.

The Sun together with the Sword.—Late honor, after hard fights.
The Sun in trine aspect with Mercury. —Fame as a scientist or inventor.

The Sun in square aspect with Venus.—Wealth and honors due to a woman. Many friends.

Venus in House VIII.—Childless marriage. Early end of married life.

Venus in Cancer.—Fickle in love. Widowedhood or separation. Love affair on a journey.

Venus together with the Moon.—Unsettled marriage. Two love affairs at the same time.

Mercury in House III.—Inventive and observative mind. Wide information. Fame in science or literature.

Mercury in Aquarius.—Serious, deep study in occult matters. Good observer and quick to learn. Road to a fortune through science or the arts.

Mercury in sextile aspect with the Moon. —Talent for the arts and for business.

The Moon in House VIII.—Journeys not profitable. Dangerous to persons of the other sex. Wealth through public favor or from unexpected quarter.

The general result to be gathered from the above mass of information would be as follows:

"The subject, child of poor parents, was not happy in his youth; his talents and his power of accommodating himself to circumstances served him to rise in spite of many serious obstacles and dangerous enemies; by the aid of powerful friends he may attain to fame in the arts or in science."

Practice in weighing the values of the various items of information will enable the student to arrive at more precise and detailed results.

THE 22 MAJOR ARCANES

ARCANE I. (A=I.) THE MAGUS

The Magus (magician) is standing in the attitude of the will-power about to act; he is dressed in white, the emblem of purity, with a circle of gold around his brow, emblem of eternal light; he holds in the right hand a scepter tipped with a circle, the emblem of creative intelligence. He raises this scepter toward Heaven to indicate his aspirations to wisdom, science and moral force. His left hand points towards the earth to show that he is ready to dominate over matter. In front of him, upon a cube—the image of absolute solidity—are found a cup full of human passions, a sword, the weapon of the braves who fight error, finally a golden pentacle (piece of money), the emblem of the reward granted to voluntary labor. His belt is a snake biting its tail, the symbol of eternity. The Ibis upon the cube typifies vigilance.

This Arcane, I., means: A firm will and confidence in yourself guided by reason and the love of justice shall lead you to the object of your ambition and save you from the dangers on the way.
ARCANE II. (B = 2.) THE GATE OF THE SANCTUARY

Here we have Occult Science represented by a stately woman seated between two columns of a temple, these columns representing Good and Evil; the figure is crowned with a crescent and her face is veiled, as a sign that Truth is not visible to the profane; she has upon her breast the Solar Cross, emblematic of universal generation, and, in her lap, a papyrus half covered by her cloak, indicating that the mysteries of the sacred science are unveiled only to the Initiated. The tiara upon her head is the emblem of the power of intelligence lighted up by wisdom represented by the crescent; the figure is seated, because science united to wisdom and will-power is immovable.

This Arcane, II., tells us that if man possesses a strong will he cannot fail to see the true light and to obey it properly. It is essential, however, that he should keep silent as to his opinions and projects, as it has been said that “the world belongs to the silent ones.”
ARCANE III. (G=3.) IRIS-URANIA

This is the ancient idea of Nature. It is represented by a woman seated upon a cube covered with eyes, the emblem of the visions of the famous seer, Hermes. Her feet rest upon a crescent of the moon, the emblem of matter subjected to mind. She is crowned with twelve stars representing the twelve months and the Sun serves her as a Nimbus, thus symbolizing the creative power of intelligence. In one hand she holds a scepter tipped with a globe, the emblem of her despotic action over the world; on her other hand is posed an eagle, its head turned towards her; this signifies the flight of the human soul returning to its initial principle: God.

This Arcane, III., means: That to wish for things possible is equivalent to creating them. To wish for things impossible is to prepare one's own ruin.
ARCANE IV. (D=4.) THE CUBIC STONE

Here is a man bearing on his head a crowned helmet, the emblem of conquest, as the cube upon which he is sitting is the symbol of labor that has reached its completion. He holds the scepter of the Magi as a sign of the moral power acquired through sacred studies. His left hand, pointing downward, indicates the mastery over matter, while the dove on his breast symbolizes innocence, and his crossed legs signify the expansion of the power of human mind within the three dimensions of the Infinite: Height, Width, Depth. The cat upon the cube symbolizes the thought of the Magi who is able to see through the night of the ancient times.

This Arcane, IV., means that nothing resists a firm will-power which has for its lever the Knowledge of Truth and Justice. To fight for both is more than a right, it is a duty. Whoever triumphs in this struggle has simply accomplished his mission. Whoever fails, in spite of his honest efforts, is entitled to immortality.
ASTROLOGY
ARCANE V. (E = 5.) THE MASTER OF THE ARCANES

The high priest of Isis is here represented seated between the columns of the sanctuary, one hand on a long cross with three crossbars, symbolizing the penetration of the creative genius through the three worlds. (Divine, Intellectual and Physical.) The two columns mean, respectively, the Law and the Freedom of our will-power which may obey or disobey. The other hand makes the sign of meditation and silence. At the feet of the high priest, two men are kneeling: a white man, personifying Good and a black man personifying Evil, both submitted to the Master of the Arcanes.

This Arcane, V., means that before you may tell a man whether he is happy or unhappy, you must find out what use he has made of his will-power, for every man is created to the image of his own works.
ARCANE VI. (U—V=6.) THE TWO WAYS

Here the Disciple or Neophyte is seen, hesitating between two ways, each of which is pointed out to him by a woman symbolizing, the one to the right, Vice, and the one to the left, Virtue. Above, is seen a Genius holding a bow whose arrow is pointed toward Vice as a warning of the punishment that awaits the man who has preferred the easy road to vice to the hard road to virtue.

This Arcane, VI., means that one must watch over one’s self, and above all show no indecision in the crucial moments of existence. Nor must one be discouraged because obstacles seem to bar the road to happiness. A strong will-power will suffice to overcome them all.
ARCANE VII. \((Z = 7)\) THE CHARIOT OF OSIRIS

Here we have a warrior riding a cubic chariot, upon which four columns support a starry dais; these columns symbolize the four elements, while the cubic chariot signifies that the ambition of the warrior has been realized through his will conquering every obstacle. The warrior himself has a golden band around his brow as a sign of the eternal light he is endowed with. In one hand, he holds a sword, the emblem of victory, and in his other hand, a scepter tipped with a square (Matter), a circle (Eternity), and a triangle (Divinity). He wears on his breast a Cuirass, the emblem of strength: it is adorned with three T-squares, which represent Good Judgment, Will-Power and Action. A winged sphere, on the front of the chariot, speaks of the exultation of the intellectual power in the infinite space and time. Two Sphinxes are hitched to this chariot and are now at rest. The black one represents Evil, the white one Good. They are both the slaves of the Magus when he has come out victorious from the various tests.

This Arcane, VII., means that the empire of the world belongs to those who possess the sovereignty of the mind; that is to say the Light which reveals all the mysteries of life.

ARCANE VIII. (H=8.) THE BALANCE AND THE SWORD

At the top of three steps which represent the three worlds, sits a woman, her brow encircled with a crown of iron, the emblem of inflexibility; her eyes are bandaged, to indicate that she holds no account of the social positions of the accused ones. A sword in one hand and a balance in the other, she judges and she punishes. The lion by her side symbolizes Force ruled over by Justice, and the Sphinx next to it, the eye of God who looks into the souls of the wicked. The winged Turtle above symbolizes Repentance which may obtain forgiveness in spite of the greatness of the crime. Finally, a divine messenger tells us that the justice of God will be the final judge of the justice of men.

This Arcane, VIII., means that everything in life is a pretty even struggle between Good and Bad, and that every action brings in its wake a re-action, thus forcing us to be most cautious in our thoughts and undertakings.
ARCANE IX. (TH = 9, THE VEILED LAMP

An old man, the symbol of wisdom, holds a lighted lamp which he covers with his mantle as a sign of discretion. He walks on, leaning on a stick, the symbol of strength acquired through experience.

This Arcane, IX., means that Wisdom has to be appealed to in every circumstance of life. It teaches one also to be discreet and silent in all critical circumstances.
ARCANE X. (O—J—Y = 10.) THE SPHINX

We have here the most ancient drawing of the Wheel of Destiny turning upon its axis. On one side we see the God Kne-phta, the Spirit of Good; on the other side, Typhon, the Spirit of Evil, who is about to be thrown off from the wheel while the Spirit of Good is rising. Over the whole presides a full figure of a winged Sphinx representing the four forces of human nature: to Know, to Dare, to Act, to Be Silent. The Sphinx remains in perfect equilibrium as if the constantly revolving wheel of fortune had no influence over him. He thus symbolizes the mysterious power of God disposing of human destinies according to the good or bad actions of everyone. In his claws, the Sphinx holds a javelin, the emblem of supreme justice. At the foot of the supporting beam of the axis, two snakes symbolize the even forces that balance each other, while both constantly struggle for supremacy.

This Arcane, X., means that if we want only what is true, what is just, what is within our reach: if we keep silent as to our designs: if, finally, we add perseverance to the rest, we shall find ourselves one day in possession of the Key to Power.
ARCANE XI. (C—K = 20.) THE TAMED LION

We see here a young maiden opening and closing without effort the mouth of a lion, an emblem of the power over one’s self acquired through the education of the will-power and the experience of life.

This Arcane, XI., means that if we are endowed with sufficient faith we may go ahead fearlessly. Obstacles are more imaginary than real. Let us find where our duty lies and accomplish it without hesitation.
ARCANE XII. \((L = 30.)\) THE SACRIFICE

A man is hanging by one foot from a gallows stretched across the trunks of two trees the twelve branches of which have been cut off. His hands are bound and from them drop pentacles or gold pieces. One of his legs, folded down and forming with the other a reversed triangle, tells us that he dies the victim of the wicked ones. His bound hands from which drop the gold pieces, mean that ideas survive those who sacrificed themselves for them and that they will come forth later. The twelve branches that have been cut down symbolize the signs of the Zodiac who return regularly year after year.

This Arcane, XII., means that one must sacrifice one's self for others without awaiting anything but ingratitude as a reward. Forgiveness must remain our most precious gift, as it causes us to resemble more closely our Divine prototype.
ARCANE XIII. (M = 40.) THE REAPING SKELETON

A skeleton armed with a scythe symbolizes Death mowing down human beings whose heads, feet and hands are constantly born again, so to speak, while a rainbow rises in the horizon, an emblem of the immortality of the soul.

This Arcane, XIII., means that we must raise our minds above earthly things, otherwise the bitterness of our disappointment will shorten our days. However, if Death should come to us early, we need not sorrow for it, since a new life and a better one is promised us, according to our merits.
THE ARCANES

ARCANE XIV. (N = 50.) THE TWO URNS

A figure representing the Sun is transferring from a golden vase into a silver vase the elemental forces of nature, a symbol of the great magic agent—the Electric and Magnetic Fluids combined—the image of the perpetual fecundation of Nature by means of Light and Heat, which are also Movement and Life.

This Arcane, XIV., means that we must so husband our forces, moral and physical, as to wear out all obstacles, little by little, as a drop of water pierces a stone.
ARCANE XV. ($X=60.$) TYPHON

This is the Spirit of Evil, of Fatality and of Chaos. It is represented by a hippopotamus with the head of a crocodile, the feet of a goat and the characteristics of man and woman. A snake emerges from his body, to show that he begets nothing but evil; his wings, like those of a bat, show him to be the Spirit of Darkness. He is seen here rising from ruins, one of his hands waving the torch of destruction and the other holding the scepter of division and hatred. At his feet are two men with goats' heads and chains around their necks, symbolizing those beings whom virtue brings down lower than the beast. The horn on the figure's nose indicates his rebellion against the Divine Spirit, which he seems to be insulting.

This Arcane, XV., means that fatality will ruin your future plans if your passions are not kept in strong control by your willpower.
ARCANE XVI. (O = 70.) THE THUNDER-STRUCK TOWER

We see here a pyramid whose pinnacle is crushed down by a stroke of lightning, throwing down two men, one of them with a crown on his head. This symbolizes the ruin of human pride and false science by the sudden influx of the Astral fluid.

This Arcane, XVI., means that you are going straight to your ruin, which will be due to your exaggerated pride, your foolish ventures and your voluntary mistakes.
ARCANE XVII. (F—P=8o.) THE STAR OF THE MAGI

This represents a nude young girl with one foot upon the Sea and one foot upon the Earth; she represents Truth and holds two cups from which flow Kindness and Charity, the balm that alleviates human suffering. The Sea represents the bitterness of the days of sorrow. Over the young girl shines an eight-pointed star, a double symbol of the Universe and of the divine Trinity; at its center is found a white pyramid united to another pyramid, a black one and up-side-down. This is the emblem of the great occult law which is worded as follows: "That which is above is like that which is below." Seven smaller stars represent the seven Planets of Ancient Astrology. Next to the woman there is a flower with three blossoms and above the upper one a butterfly opens its wings.

This Arcane, XVII., means that if you free yourself from your lower passions and your inborn errors, and steadfastly study the mysteries of the true science you will be given the key to the mysteries of life.
ARCANE XVIII. \( \text{TS} = 90. \) THE TWILIGHT

Two pyramids stand on the edge of a road; in front of them two dogs howl at the moon; below, a scorpion is seen. One of the pyramids is white and is the emblem of True Science; the other pyramid is black and is the symbol of Error. The two dogs represent Good and Evil, and the scorpion is the emblem of Perversity, the worst feature of vice.

This Arcane, XVIII., means that everything is conspiring against you and you alone are kept in ignorance of the real situation. Enemies of the worst kind are plotting against you, often hiding their treachery under the garb of flattery.
ARCANE XIX. ($Q = 100$) THE DAZZLING LIGHT

Under a radiant sun, a young man and a young girl hold each other by the hand within a circle of flowers; this Arcane symbolizes love, which brings with it Happiness; the sign within the sun above the couple is the symbol of universal generation.

This Arcane, XIX., means that you will be happy and no one shall take your happiness from you, if only you keep it within the limits of the home and the sanctuary of your heart.
ARCANE XX. (R = 200.) THE RISING OF THE DEAD

A Genius is blowing a trumpet above a Sarcophagus out of which emerge a family of father, mother and child. This not only symbolizes the Last Judgment of the Dead, but also the awakening of souls that have been put to sleep by error or inaction.

This Arcane, XX., means that you must not allow yourself to sink into sloth or forgetfulness, since you have a mission to fulfill and Providence is ready to reveal it to you as soon as you show yourself willing to accept the message.
We have before us a wreath made out of lotus flowers. At each of the four angles is found a head, respectively that of a lion, of a man, of an eagle and of a bull; they symbolize the four winds of the spirit, and in the center is found the primitive "lingham," the supreme Arcane of the universal generation of the three worlds, the absolute in the infinite, and the conjunction of the sexes. The wreath itself is the emblem of the magic chain that unites all beings, all things and all ideas. Under the wreath is a kneeling young girl representing Religion and playing upon a harp of three strings, the image of the triple harmony within man: Soul, Mind, Body.

This Arcane, XXI., means that you may reach the greatest height to which man may aspire; it promises you that your most ambitious desires will be realized and that your final success will only be limited by your wishes.
ARCANE XXII. (T = 400.) THE CROCODILE

This image, which has often been called the Atheist, or the Fool, represents a blind man with a bag on either side of his shoulder and a stick in his hand, walking towards a broken obelisk, stretched on the ground and behind which, with its huge mouth open, a crocodile awaits him. It is truly the picture of the Atheist who sees not the divine light and carries the weight of his mistakes and his faults. His stick cannot guide him, and he walks, urged on by fatality towards his ruin, symbolized by the voracious crocodile. In the sky above, the sun is partially eclipsed by a dark shadow, the symbol of Doubt destroying Faith.

This Arcane, XXII., means that a number of misfortunes are threatening you, and that your only hope is to come to you from Heaven towards which your prayers must rise constantly.
ASTROLOGY
THE 56 MINOR ARCANES

ARCANE XXIII. (TH = 9.) THE MASTER OF THE SCEPTER

A King, a crown on his head, seated on his throne and pointing a scepter towards the Earth.

ARCANE XXIV. (E = 5.) THE MISTRESS OF THE SCEPTER

A Queen, a crown on her head, seated on her throne, with a scepter in hand.

This Arcane, XXIV., means: Your future depends on a woman; except you find her, you will not succeed.

ARCANE XXV. (U - V = 6.) THE WARRIOR OF THE SCEPTER

A man on horseback fully armed and with a scepter in his hand.

ARCANE XXVI. (Z = 7.) THE SLAVE OF THE SCEPTER

A poorly-dressed man is planting a stick.

This Arcane, XXVI., means: All your labor will prove of no avail unless you abandon the foolish projects which you are entertaining now.
ARCANE XXVII. (A = 1.) THE SCEPTER

A Scepter tipped with a square, a triangle and a circle.

This Arcane, XXVII., means: Creative intelligence, useful labor and final success.

ARCANE XXVIII. (B = 2.) THE TWO SCEPTERS

Two Scepters arranged crosswise.

This Arcane, XXVIII., means that you will meet with great obstacles and will have to watch your interests with constant vigilance; it warns you against a partnership that will prove disastrous.

ARCANE XXIX (G = 3.) THE THREE SCEPTERS

Three Scepters arranged in a triangle.

This Arcane, XXIX., means that you will be endowed with inventive genius and will succeed in life on that account.

ARCANE XXX. (D = 4.) THE FOUR SCEPTERS

Four Scepters arranged in a square.

This Arcane, XXX., means that the enterprise you are engaged in now, will be a complete success.
ARCANE XXXI. (E = 5.) THE FIVE SCEPTERS
Five Scepters forming a star of five rays.
This Arcane, XXXI., means that a number of favorable chances will combine to bring about the success of your enterprises, if you do not spoil everything by extravagant pride and an angry disposition.

ARCANE XXXII. (U - V = 6.) THE SIX SCEPTERS
Six Scepters arranged in two triangles.
This Arcane, XXXII., means that numerous obstacles, pitfalls and delays will surely cause the ruin of your undertakings unless your will-power shows itself strong and persevering.

ARCANE XXXIII. (Z = 7.) THE SEVEN SCEPTERS
Seven Scepters arranged in a triangle and a square, the former above the latter.
This Arcane, XXXIII., means that you have in your possession everything needed for success, especially a brilliant intelligence which will allow you to conquer all difficulties.

ARCANE XXXIV. (H = 8.) THE EIGHT SCEPTERS
Eight Scepters arranged in a star of eight rays.
This Arcane, XXXIV., means that you will meet with a great many struggles, disputes, law-suits and breaks of partnerships or marriages.
THE ARCANES

ARCANE XXXV. \(\text{TH} = 9\). THE NINE SCEPTERS

Nine Scepters arranged in three triangles. This Arcane, XXXV., means that you will be engaged in mysterious or deeply scientific enterprises whose success will depend on your prudence and discretion.

ARCANE XXXVI. \(\text{I—J—Y} = 10\). THE TEN SCEPTERS

Ten Scepters, six of which are arranged in two triangles, and the four others are placed below in a square. This Arcane, XXXVI., means that you will have to undertake a number of journeys which will prove generally successful. Wealth and fame will come to you through the arts or the sciences. There is much joy in prospect for you.

ARCANE XXXVII. \(\text{U—V} = 6\). THE MASTER OF THE CUP

This Arcane, XXXVII., means that you will enjoy the sincere friendship and devotion of a person in a high position. If the questioner is a woman there is a fine marriage in prospect.

ARCANE XXXVIII. \(\text{H} = 8\). THE MISTRESS OF THE CUP

This Arcane, XXXVIII., means, for a man, a brilliant marriage; for all questioners, the good-will of ladies of high rank.
ARCANE XXXIX. (TH=9.) THE WARRIOR OF THE CUP

This Arcane, XXXIX., means that a projected marriage will not take place and that there will be lots of troubles of all kinds on account of women.

ARCANE XL. (I—J—Y=10.) THE SLAVE OF THE CUP

This Arcane, XL., means, especially on account of the fact that the cup carried by the slave is veiled, that you will suffer from unfortunate love affairs and from the treacherous conduct of people in whom you will have unwisely placed your confidence.

ARCANE XLI. (C—K=20.) THE CUP

This Arcane, XLI., means that a passion stronger than your reason will cause your ruin.

ARCANE XLII. (L=30.) THE TWO CUPS

Two Cups within a circle.

This Arcane, XLII., means that you will enjoy a perfect union and the devotion of reciprocated love.
ARCANE XLIII. (M=40.) THE THREE CUPS

Three Cups arranged in a triangle; from the one at the summit emerges the head of a young girl.

This Arcane, XLIII., means the awakening of innocent affections and the early realization of your best hopes.

ARCANE XLIV. (N=50.) THE FOUR CUPS

Four Cups arranged in a square.

This Arcane, XLIV., means that a great joy is in store for you. You will meet with strong friendships and enduring love. There will soon be an increase in your family.

ARCANE XLV. (X=60.) THE FIVE CUPS

Five Cups, of which four are placed at the angles of a square, the fifth in the middle.

This Arcane, XLV., means that there will be quarrels in your marriage relations; that your love affairs will be of a dangerous nature and that your friends will prove treacherous.

ARCANE XLVI. (O=70.) THE SIX CUPS

Six Cups arranged in two triangles.

This Arcane, XLVI., means that there will be much indecision in your love affairs and that you will probably make a poor choice by not listening to the voice of your heart or to that of your conscience; there are also probabilities of divorce or of intrigues outside of wedlock.
ARCADE XLVII. (F—B=80.) THE SEVEN CUPS

Seven Cups, three forming a triangle above the others arranged in a square.

This Arcane, XLVII., means the triumph of or through a woman. You will conquer your lower passions and be made happy by a congenial spouse.

ARCADE XLVIII. (TS=90.) THE EIGHT CUPS

Eight Cups arranged upon the eight angles of a cube.

This Arcane, XLVIII., means scandals due to love affairs, or unfortunate choice of husband or wife.

ARCADE XLIX. (Q=100.) THE NINE CUPS

Nine Cups, arranged in three triangles, which are all pointing downwards.

This Arcane, XLIX., means that there will be a marriage with an elderly person, but it advises you to keep away from marriage altogether.

ARCADE L. (R=20.) THE TEN CUPS

Ten Cups, nine of which are arranged in a circle with the tenth in the center.

This Arcane, L., means that you will have a happy life surrounded with affections. Your family will be numerous and your friends many. You may marry your first love.
ASTROLOGY
ARCANE LI. (TS=90.) THE MASTER OF THE SWORD

This Arcane, LI., means that you will make your career in the army or some high official positions, but you will have dangerous enemies and envious rivals.

ARCANE LII. (L=30.) THE MISTRESS OF THE SWORD

This Arcane, LII., means that there are great struggles in prospect for you, due to some jealousy aroused in a woman or coming through her.

ARCANE LIII. (N=50.) THE WARRIOR OF THE SWORD

The Warrior of the Sword is riding full tilt and at great speed.

This Arcane, LIII., means that you will meet with serious dangers from fire arms or other weapons in the hands of declared enemies. You will die at an early age. A hatred will follow you relentlessly.

ARCANE LIV. (X=60.) THE SLAVE OF THE SWORD

The Slave of the Sword holds in one hand a sword and in the other a club, besides having a dagger in his belt.

This Arcane, LIV., means that you will be the object, and possibly the victim, of constant plotting. Your enemies are mean and will stop at nothing to harm you.
THE ARCANES

ARCANE LV. (A=1.) THE SWORD

This Arcane, LV., is a protection as well as a threat. Its meaning is modified according to the House it is found to be in. It also signifies that your enterprises will succeed in spite of great obstacles.

ARCANE LVI. (B=2.) THE TWO SWORDS

Two Swords arranged crosswise.

This Arcane, LVI., foretells a duel, but it also says that the results will not be fatal. Your partnerships will not go smoothly; and in general many obstacles will be thrown in your way.

ARCANE LVII. (G=3.) THE THREE SWORDS

Three Swords arranged in a triangle.

This Arcane, LVII., means that you have a combative disposition and are fond of strife, law-suits, etc. It is a favorable omen for all people who make a profession of fighting, but it throws shadows over all enterprises.

ARCANE LVIII. (D=4.) THE FOUR SWORDS

Four Swords arranged in a square with the points inward.

This Arcane, LVIII., announces imminent dangers; also guilty thoughts and actions, remorse and regrets.
ASTROLOGY
THE ARCANE LIX. (E=5.) THE FIVE SWORDS

Five Swords arranged in a five-pointed star.

This Arcane, LIX., means: Tendency to insanity; angers that end in murder; terrible revenge; suicide; and great danger from following first impulses blindly.

ARCANE LX. (U—V=6.) THE SIX SWORDS

Six Swords arranged in two triangles.
This Arcane, LX., means a hard struggle against adversity; also wicked temptations and great sorrows due to lack of decision.

ARCANE LXI. (Z=7.) THE SEVEN SWORDS

Seven Swords arranged, four of them in a square, and three underneath in a triangle.
This Arcane, LXI., means a sudden catastrophe that may affect the brain; a loss of position; ultimate triumph.

ARCANE LXII. (H=8.) THE EIGHT SWORDS

Eight Swords, pointing outwards and arranged in an eight-ray star.
This Arcane, LXII., means that you are threatened with the loss of a law-suit; that great anxieties are in store for you; you may even be sentenced to a heavy penalty, prison or death.
ASTROLOGY
ARCANE LXIII. (TH=9.) THE NINE SWORDS

Nine Swords arranged in three triangles, points downwards.
This Arcane, LXIII., means for you sorrows, mysterious struggles, danger of death by murder, or dangerous wounds. You may triumph if you are prudent and discreet.

ARCANE LXIV. (I—J—Y=10.) THE TEN SWORDS

Ten Swords arranged in a circle with the points alternately turned in and out.
This Arcane, LXIV., means a succession of gains and losses, of quiet times and of struggles; you will be your worst enemy.

ARCANE LXV. (N=50.) THE MASTER OF THE PENTACLE*

This Arcane, LXV., means a rise in your fortune through the protection of influential people, generally of the other sex.

ARCANE LXVI. (O=70.) THE MISTRESS OF THE PENTACLE

This Arcane, LXVI., announces a brilliant marriage or, in general, the influence of one in high position willing to help you.

*To fully explain the next 14 Arcanes we must say that the "Pentacle" seems to mean a coin worn as a charm; in some translations it is called a "talisman" or "amulet," in others simply "money."
ARCANE LXVII. (TS=90.) THE WARRIOR OF THE PENTACLE

This Arcane, LXVII., means that there is lots of good luck in store for you, after going through severe tests. There will be many ups and downs in your life.

ARCANE LXVIII. (Q=100.) THE SLAVE OF THE PENTACLE

The Slave stretches his hands towards the Pentacle which he does not seem to be able to grasp, because his left foot is chained to a ball made of silver.

This Arcane, LXVIII., especially if it is united to Jupiter, means an exaggerated love of money and heavy losses through the unwise speculations of the questioner. The result will be utter poverty.

ARCANE LXIX. (C—K=20.) THE CROWNED PENTACLE

This Arcane, LXIX., is also called “The Talisman of Fortune.”

It means that, providing the questioner behaves in an absolutely correct manner and remains both wise and level-headed, he shall reach the highest goal.

ARCANE LXX. (L=30.) THE TWO PENTACLES

Two Pentacles surrounded by a circle.

This Arcane, LXX., means that fortune will prove fickle but that there are chances of a profitable partnership or marriage.
THE ARCANES

ARCANE LXXI. (M=40.) THE THREE PENTACLES

Three Pentacles arranged in a triangle.

This Arcane, LXXI., foretells that you are to secure wealth through enterprises which will be conducted by you wisely and with unremitting activity.

ARCANE LXXII (N=50.) THE FOUR PENTACLES

Four Pentacles arranged in a square.

This Arcane, LXXII., means amassing a fortune which will be kept to the end of life.

ARCANE LXXIII. (X=60.) THE FIVE PENTACLES

Five Pentacles, four of which are arranged in a square, the fifth one in the middle.

This Arcane, LXXIII., means that you will lead a dissipated life and squander your fortune as well as lose all chances of future prosperity. If any money comes to you it will be ill-gotten gain.

ARCANE LXXIV. (O=70.) THE SIX PENTACLES

Six Pentacles arranged in two triangles.

This Arcane, LXXIV., means that you will be suddenly enriched, but this money for which you will have made no effort and given no labor will not profit you long, especially on account of the undesirable friendships which you will form. In old age, you will find yourself very poor indeed.
ASTROLOGY
ARCANE LXXV. (F—P=80.) THE SEVEN PENTACLES

Seven Pentacles, arranged three in a triangle above four in a square.
This Arcane, LXXV., means that there is a high fortune in store for you, due to your own personal efforts unassisted by anyone.

ARCANE LXXVI. (TS=90.) THE EIGHT PENTACLES

Eight Pentacles, each one placed on one of the eight angles of a cube.
This Arcane, LXXVI., means that you will have to go through lengthy litigations on account of some property, probably inherited. You may become rich in the law profession. You may acquire money by wrong means, but it will not profit you long.

ARCANE LXXVII (Q=100.) THE NINE PENTACLES
Nine Pentacles arranged in three columns.
This Arcane, LXXVII., means that fortune will come to you through some mysterious means, either by discoveries or by the death of aged relatives in far-off countries. You are recommended to be very cautious if you want to secure that fortune.

ARCANE LXXVIII. (R=200.) THE TEN PENTACLES
Ten Pentacles arranged in a circle.
This Arcane, LXXVIII., means that you will acquire a large fortune by your own efforts; but you will have to defend it.
PTOLEMY (CLAUDIUS PTOLEMAEUS)
A CELEBRATED ALEXANDRIAN ASTRONOMER, GEOGRAPHER AND MATHEMATICIAN OF THE FIRST HALF OF THE SECOND CENTURY A. D.

His mathematical system of astronomy and geography was universally accepted, until replaced by the Copernican system. Columbus relied on Ptolemy's too low figures as to the size of the earth, when he ventured to reach Asia by sailing West.
CHAPTER XIII

HISTORY OF ASTRONOMY

Astrology is based on the belief that the heavenly bodies exert a direct influence upon human life and destiny, and it proposes to discover what this influence may be in any given case and thus to foretell the future.

We have seen that astrology was the earliest form of astronomy and the strongest impulse for the study of the sky. We must not forget that the firmament was to antiquity (and to comparatively modern times) a solid crystal vault, in which the fixed stars were set as jewels. Only the planets were wanderers, and were believed to be set each in a separate revolving crystal sphere. That the mysteries of human life, the inexplicable differences between people and their fates should be connected with the equally inexplicable but regular movements of the beautiful orbs in the sky, cannot be wondered at. Man believed himself the center of the world, everything existed for him only, and was valued only as it was of service to him. We are even to-day not so far from this point of view, it seems, for many people insist that plants, insects, etc., must have been created “for a purpose.”

Some of the astrologers, those with little power of imagination, occupied themselves less with the “language of the stars” and more with their material nature, and their paths of motion, and these men were astronomers rather than astrologers.

_Astronomy is the science which describes the heavenly bodies, calculates their paths and the velocity of their flight through space and explains the seeming irregularity of their motions and appearance._

The Beginnings of astronomy are unknown to us. If we wish to form an idea of them, we may turn to the savage tribes still in existence, the more intelligent of whom may be considered to have the same notions which our most remote ancestors had about the starry heavens.

It is probable that it was observed at an early period that the stars, like the sun and the moon, changed their positions in the sky, some rising in the east and setting in the west, while others in a certain northern part of the sky moved on a somewhat circular track, always in sight. We may assume that some observers learned early to tell how far the night had advanced by looking skyward.

Greek authors claim that Egyptian priests, living thousands of years before Christ, had considerable astronomical knowledge, which claim is borne out by certain peculiarities in the construction of the pyramids, plausibly interpreted as being based on quite accurate astronomical observations. The Chinese records, the Indian sacred books, and the observations by the Chaldean priests of Babylon, going back twenty-five centuries before Christ, all show remarkable acquaintance with the stars, although the theories based thereon were mostly erroneous. The earliest authentic astronomical observation seems to have been recorded in the ninth century, B. C.

The Constellations.—The sky-gazers must have been tempted at any early day to invent names for the varied "groups" of stars seen in the sky; in order to remember them better and to talk about them intelligently. Some of the groups naturally suggest by their arrangement a resemblance to objects known to man. A striking example is the Great Bear or Wagon, known to us as the Dipper. But, in most cases, the grouping is so extremely arbitrary, that Herschel was justified in saying: “The constellations seem to have been purposely named and delineated to cause as much confusion and inconvenience as possible. Innumerable snakes twine through large and contorted areas of the heavens, where no memory can follow them; bears, lions and fishes, large and small, confuse all nomenclature.”

It is always a difficult, if not impossible, task to reform old habits. Very few changes have been made in the nomenclature and grouping of the stars, as they existed in the days of early Greek astronomy. The names to this day are either those of common objects or animals (as dog, serpent, lyre, pitcher), or they are borrowed from Greek mythology (as Hercules, Orion, etc.)

The same is true of the twelve “signs” or constellations of the Zodiac, the customary Latin names of which play a large part in the first portion of this book. The English names may be easily remembered by the following verses:
The Ram, the Bull, the Heavenly Twins,
And now the Crab, the Lion shines,
The Virgin and the Scales,
The Scorpion, Archer, and He-Goat,
The Man that bears the Watering-pot,
And Fish with glittering tails.

The Eclipses of the sun and moon could not fail to make a most powerful impression on the human mind, whenever they occurred. The untutored mind of the savage must have feared at such a moment that the great light was being extinguished for good, which, in the case of the sun, meant eternal darkness and cold, the end of all life. The terror struck into his heart by this reflection he could not forget, and his childish fancy wove a story around his remembrance of the awful moment, the story of "Little Red Riding Hood," swallowed whole by the black wolf, but come to life again. In Oriental lore the wolf is replaced by a dragon, the head and tail of which are still represented in the nodes of the signs for eclipses, Ω. When it was discovered that it was the moon that effaced the sun, we do not know, but the idea that it might be the shadow of the earth that eclipsed the moon, was new to the people of Athens in the fifth century, B. C., because, as Anaxagoras tells us, they cried out against it as blasphemous.

The Chaldean astronomers discovered the regularity of the occurrence of eclipses, viz., after a period of eighteen years and ten or eleven days. How they arrived at this result, we do not know, as the eclipses are not always visible in Babylon, or in any other single place.

The Planets.—The fact that a few of the stars change their position, relative to the other stars, was discovered in prehistoric times. Five of these, then noticed—Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn—were called planets or wanderers, while the others were named fixed stars. The sun and the moon were included in the number of "planets" until very recently. The brilliancy of Venus as the Evening and Morning Star made it easily noticeable; the discovery of the identity of the Evening and Morning Stars is credited to Pythagoras, who flourished in the Sixth century, B. C. The apparent irregular motions of the planets, moving eastward and westward and at varying speed, was one of the great puzzles of astronomy and probably one of the greatest incentives to study.

The Occultations, i.e., the covering up of a planet or fixed star by the moon must have suggested to the most ancient astronomers, that the moon was nearer the earth than the bodies disappearing behind her, and from there it was but a step to the idea that the stars might all be at different distances from us.

The Sun returns to the same position among the stars in one year, Mars in two years, Mercury in eighty-eight days, Venus in 225 days, Jupiter in 12 years, Saturn in twenty-nine and one-half years, and the Moon in twenty-seven days. These cycles were obvious and easily noted.

Measurements of Time.—The Babylonians divided the day, not as we do, but by making twelve hours of the day and twelve of the night, varying the length of the hour according to the season. Their day-hour was almost twice as long in June as it was in December and the night-hour correspondingly short.

The "month" was taken from the period during which the Moon goes through her phases, so conspicuous and marked, that we cannot wonder that the month was used much earlier for noting time than the year. In Egypt, where the Nile rises and falls every year with nearly clock-like regularity, where all life is based and is dependent on this peculiarity of the river—in Egypt it was, that the year of 365 days was first established as the largest natural unit for time measurements.

The “week” has a more arbitrary origin. The Astrologers assigned one of the seven planets (including Sun and Moon) as a “ruler” to each hour of the day and named each day after the “ruler” of the first hour. The order was: Saturn, Sun, Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus. For the last four the names of some Teutonic deities were substituted by our ancestors: Tuis, Wodan, Thor, Frija, which accounts for the English appellations of the seven days of the week: Saturday (Saturn), Sunday (Sun), Monday (Moon), Tuesday (Tuis), Wednesday (Wodan), Thursday (Thor), Friday (Frija). The last four preserve the Latin names given above in the French language to this day: Mardi (Mars), Mercredi (Mercury), Jeudi (Jupiter), Vendredi (Venus)
THE PIONEERS OF ASTRONOMY

Pythagoras, who lived in the first part of the sixth century, B. C., is credited with having been the first to advocate the idea that the earth is a sphere, or round ball; but, of course, he still had no reason to doubt that the center of the earth was, at the same time, the center of the universe. He also deduced from the phases of the moon the theory that the moon was a sphere, too, and from this he concluded that all the heavenly bodies were globular in shape. He believed that the moon shines by reflecting the light of the sun.

Philolaus, living a century later, was the first to speak of a motion of the earth. (Galileo was persecuted and threatened with death for maintaining this truth 2,100 years later. Ignorance, oh how powerful!) Philolaus represented the earth as revolving around its own axis, and, with the sun, moon and planets, around another central fiery body, but what the path of reasoning was, by which he arrived at his conclusions, we do not know.

Aristotle, the great Greek philosopher (384-322, B. C.), who shaped the grooves in which human logic ran for yearly two thousand years, reasoned very cleverly about the shape of the earth, although it may seem comical to us, when he argues that the presence of elephants in easternmost India and in westernmost Africa proves that these two countries must be close to each other.

Aristarchus (of Samos, living in the third century, B.C.), was the first to use mathematics in his astronomical studies, and he figured the distance of the sun from the earth to be about twenty times that of the moon (in reality it is about four hundred times longer), the diameter of the moon about one-third that of the earth (which is nearly correct), and the size of the sun in proportion to these figures, assuming that the disc of the moon appeared to the human eye as of the same size as that of the sun.

Eratosthenes, living at Alexandria about 200 B.C., calculated the size of the earth for the first time, and he came surprisingly near the truth. He made his reckoning from the difference of the point in the heavens, where the sun seemed to stand at the time of the summer solstice in Alexandria and at Syene, which latter place was known to him as being on the line of the tropic of Cancer, so that the sun there was in the very zenith at midday. He also measured the obliquity of the ecliptic, i.e., the inclination of the ecliptic to the equinoctial, which he found to be $23^\circ 35'$, a result which differs only slightly from the truth, the mean value of it for A. D. 1900 being $23^\circ 27' 8''$.

Hipparchus, of Rhodos, who lived about 150 B.C., is one of the greatest astronomers of all times. He invented "trigonometry," without which astronomy would never have become a science. His observations were most accurate and systematic. He diligently compared old records of former observation with his own, noted the differences and speculated shrewdly on their explanations. He made a new catalogue of the stars, giving the celestial longitude and latitude of each, and classified them according to their brightness into six magnitudes. (This catalogue remained the standard for over fifteen hundred years.) He discovered the precession of the equinoxes, or the difference of the tropical year from the sidereal year (sun year), the latter being equal to twenty-six thousand tropical (or common) years. He fixed the time length of the tropical year very nearly as we figure it now, at 365 days, 6 hours and 10 minutes. He made great improvements in the rules for calculating eclipses, so that after him lunar eclipses could be predicted within one hour or two by any astronomer, while the extent of the disc to be covered could not yet be asserted with much accuracy.

During three hundred years after Hipparchus, no great name appears in the science of astronomy. Then Ptolemy, living at Alexandria, about 150 A. D., appeared, who revived the teachings of Hipparchus and made some valuable additions of his own. His great work is the Almagest, an astronomical treatise, in which he incorporated the sum and total of the astronomical knowledge of his time and the past. He corroborated and corrected the views of his great teacher, Hipparchus, to whom he gives due credit at all times.

Ptolemy's most valuable and original contribution to the science consists in his theory of the motions of the planets. He succeeded in constructing a set of circles and lines by means of which the seeming motion of a planet could be reproduced, and this ingenious system was to be demonstrated mathematically to be correct thirteen hundred years later by Kepler.

Ptolemy’s principal merit is the preservation of the old records and observations, while Hipparchus shines as a true scientist, satisfied in many cases to prepare and collect material for those who should come after him, whenever he recognized his own inability to replace erroneous theories by better ones.

Astronomy made no progress during five hundred years after Ptolemy, but the Almagest was ordered to be translated into Arabian by Harun al Rashid (at Bagdad, about 800 A.D.), of Arabian Nights’ fame, which gave a mighty stimulus to Arabian astronomers. Observatories were built and accurate records of observations, attested by affidavits, were kept. The Arabs were excellent mathematicians; they developed the science of trigonometry, devised new astronomical instruments and methods of calculation, the most important of which is the substitution of our present numerical system for the clumsy Roman numerals. In order to realize the vast advantage gained thereby, let the reader try an example in multiplication with Roman numbers, e.g.: MDCCXCXIV \times \text{DXLVIII}. The influence of the Arabs is preserved in such names as Vega, Zenith, Nadir, Almanac, all of Arabic origin.

The Arabian astronomers' work, carried on in Asia, in Africa and Spain, was the means by which the results of the ancient toilers and devotees were preserved, while the Roman Empire, never very fruitful in science and culture, was slowly broken to pieces by the onslaught of the Teutonic hordes from the North, just then emerging from the darkness of prehistoric times and appearing as half-savages on the stage, where to-day they play a leading part as civilizers of the world. There is not one great name in astronomy among all the famous Romans. Even Pliny gave little thought to this branch of human knowledge.

In the far East the Tartars, the Persians were at times zealous disciples of their Arabian teachers, but we do not know of any great discoveries due to them.

It was through these Arabian translations of the Almagest, of Aristotle's works and of others, that the western world took cogni-dance again of the scientific achievements of the ancient astronomers. Emperor Charlemagne, about A. D. 800, the learned Pope Sylvester II., about A. D. 1000, and Emperor Frederick II., about 1220, caused these precious books to be translated and studied very widely, and in the thirteenth century we find Roger Bacon (died at Oxford, England, 1294), who, rebelling against the supreme authority of Aristotle, urged the importance of renewed experiments and of mathematical proofs. He also tells that Caesar looked at the British coast from Gaul through a telescope, from which it is clear that at Roger Bacon's time the telescope had been invented. The famous painter and sculptor, Leonardo da Vinci (1452-1519), who was learned in all branches of science, was the first to explain the dim light on the dark part of the moon as a result of the reflection of the sun's light from the earth.
NICOLAUS COPERNICUS

THE FOUNDER OF MODERN ASTRONOMY

Born at Thorn, Prussian Poland, Feb. 19, 1473; died at Frauenberg Prussian Poland, May 24, 1543. In the year of his death he published a treatise in Latin, "De Orbium Cœlestium Revolutionibus," which gave an exposition of his new and startling system of astronomy, known since as the Copernican system.
MODERN ASTRONOMERS

The great wave of new life that swept over Europe in the fifteenth century, the quickening of intellects and broadening of mind, were due to three great causes principally, the invention of printing, the flight of Greek scholars from Constantinople, captured by the Turks, and the discovery of America.

In religious matters the result was reformation, in art it was renaissance, in all sciences it was revival of learning. Astronomy, too, stood in need of a strong mind to extricate it from the tangle of differences between the views of Ptolemy and those of Aristotle, blindly adhered to by their respective followers; and from the worse tangle of erroneous translations from the Greek and from the Arabian.

Copernicus, a German, has the honor of being the reformer of astronomy. Born on February 19th, 1473, in Thorn, on the Vistula, he spent most of his life in studying, traveling in his youth and spending the remainder of his years in easy circumstances. He was not a great astronomical observer. His instruments were mostly of his own construction and inferior to those used by the Arabs seven hundred years earlier, and inferior to those he might have bought at Nuremberg, and he is not very exact in his calculations. But he worked all his life faithfully on his great book "De Revolutionibus," refusing to attempt anything for which he was not ready. He declared himself unable, for instance, to undertake the rectification of the calendar, desired by the Pope. However, he was known to hold ideas opposed to those current among the common people. Luther called him a fool for believing that the earth was moving around the sun. Copernicus was wise not to publish his views. For his special friends, he wrote a short account of his system of the world, but this manuscript was lost after his death and not rediscovered until 1870. His great book was printed and published just before his death by his enthusiastic admirer and pupil Rheticus.

In this book Copernicus developed from definite principles mathematically an astronomical system which explained the observed motions of the celestial bodies, establishing, for the first time, the fact that the inferior planets, Mercury and Venus, are nearer the sun than the earth, while the superior planets, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn, are at greater distances. He fully explained the four seasons and the varying length of daylight.

The theories of Copernicus were the subject of violent attacks and spirited defense for many years, giving rise to many careful observations at different universities, the compiling of star catalogues, the invention of a pendulum clock and other mechanical aids extremely useful for subsequent investigations and calculations.

Tycho Brahe, a Dane, born in 1546, in southern Sweden, was the son of a nobleman. Extremely bright, he went to the university at the age of thirteen to prepare for a political career. He was much interested in astrology, and an eclipse, which he witnessed, in 1560, made such a strong impression on him that he decided to devote his life to astronomy and astrology. In 1563, in Leipsic, he made his first recorded observation. He spent many years traveling from university to university, to meet all the astronomers of his time. In November 1572 a brilliant new star appeared in Cassiopeia and vanished sixteen months later. Tycho wrote a learned book about this star, besides making the remarkable astrological
TYCHO BRAHE

A FAMOUS DANISH ASTRONOMER

Born at Knudstrup, South Sweden, Dec. 14th 1546. Died at Prague, Bohemia, Oct. 24th 1601. Of noble family, he enjoyed the patronage of King Frederick II of Denmark, and later of Emperor Rudolph II of Germany. He was a great observer, but rejected the Copernican system.
prophecy related in Chapter I of this volume. He discovered the variation of the moon, and the fourth inequality of the motion of the moon. He is considered never to have been equalled as a practical astronomer, devising many most serviceable implements and being very accurate in his observations.

His fame was so great that the King of Denmark offered to build an observatory for him. Tycho accepted, and soon a most beautiful, palatial and luxuriously-equipped observatory rose on the island of Hven, Denmark, which was called Uraniborg, Urania meaning the starry sky. The mural quadrant, shown on p. 8 of this book was the principal feature of this building and one of the most remarkable instruments ever employed in the service of astronomy. By its means the altitudes of the heavenly bodies could be observed with an accuracy unthought of until then.

Tycho was rich and a nobleman. His independent spirit led him into quarrels with the government and he left Denmark to become professor of astronomy and astrology in Prague, Bohemia, where he died. He was a true scientist, content to accumulate in his accurate and carefully recorded observations the material, from which a greater mathematician than he might deduce the truth about the planets' motions.
GALILEO GALILEI
A FAMOUS ITALIAN PHYSICIST

Born at Pisa, Italy, in Feb. 1564. Died at Arcetri near Florence, Jan. 8, 1642. Forced by the Inquisition to abjure his belief in the Copernican theory, he murmured E pur si muove=And yet it (the earth) moves.

Galileo Galilei is the martyr among the astronomers. He was born at Pisa, Italy, on February 18th, 1564. He was early diverted from his study of medicine to that of geometry and shocked his teachers by rebelling against the authority of Aristotle. The swinging of a chandelier in the Cathedral of Pisa gave him the idea of regulating a clockwork by means of a pendulum. His first pendulum clock was devised to aid a physician in counting the pulse-beats of a patient.

When he was appointed, at the age of twenty-five years, professor of mathematics at the University of Pisa, he demonstrated to his colleagues the falseness of one of Aristotle's theories, viz.: that the velocity of a falling body depended on its weight alone. In the presence of a large crowd a large, heavy object and a small, light object were dropped simultaneously from the top of the Leaning Tower of Pisa and struck the ground at the same moment. His boldness in attacking old-fogyism made him enemies, however, and he was soon glad of a call to Padua. Here he invented the thermometer, using alcohol, and constructed a telescope, after having heard about its invention by a Dutchman. When he turned his telescope skyward he was amazed to find that he could count ten times as many stars as with his naked eye. This discovery at once disproved the, until then, undoubted theory that the fixed stars were all set in a spherical vault, the firmament.

Next he discovered the satellites of Jupiter and we may believe that he did not trust his own eyes. He was now ready to accept the theory of Copernicus that the planets with the earth were circling around the sun. His fame caused the Duke of Tuscany to call him to Florence, where his telescope showed him the rings of Saturn as lateral appendages of the main body. He also discovered the libration of the moon, viz.: the fact that the surface of the moon turned towards us, does not always remain exactly the same, but varies a little at the edges.

But his great discoveries were objectionable to the Church of Rome, because they ran counter to what the priests had taught for more than a thousand years. He was accused of heresy and was only able to save his life by the ardent efforts of his many influential friends, by his spotless reputation, and by a solemn abjuration of all his teachings. He spent the remainder of his life in semi-captivity, suffered from many infirmities and from isolation, became blind and died on January 8, 1643.

John Kepler received from the dying Tycho Brahe the task of performing the difficult calculations, which were necessary to gain the proper results from the mass of observations so diligently collected in his life. Kepler, born December 27, 1571, in Weil, Germany, was a weakly child, whose eyesight was much impaired by small-pox when he was four years of age. He was much given to study, however, and in 1594 was appointed professor of astronomy at the University of Graetz. The duties of this position comprehended the duty of foretelling the great events of the year, and the destiny and fate of nations and of great individuals. At Tycho Brahe's death he was called to replace him at Prague. The dying request of Brahe was complied with by Kepler in the most enthusiastic way, and the results attained by him were among the greatest achievements in astronomy.

He discovered, from the notes of Brahe, that Mars must move, not in a circle, nor in a combination of circles, but in an elliptic path, and that the sun is situated in one of
JOHANN KEPLER

ONE OF THE CHIEF PIONEERS OF MODERN ASTRONOMY

Born at Weil, Wuertemberg, Germany, Dec. 27th 1571. Died in Ratisbon, Bavaria, Germany, Nov. 15th 1630. His name is especially associated with the three laws of planetary motion. (Kepler's laws).
the foci of the ellipse. (The first of Kepler's laws extends this to the motions of all the planets and their satellites.) He sagaciously imagined the law governing the velocity of a planet at different points of its path, although he knew of no physical principle on which to base such a theory. This, the second of Kepler's laws, states that the areas described by the radii vectores of the planet's ellipse in equal times, are equal. He believed that the tide of the sea must be attributed to the attraction of the moon, he had an idea of "gravitation," but was as yet unable to grasp the full meaning of this law.

When Kepler tried to find a connection between the distance of the planets from the sun and the time required for a revolution around the sun, he had to make a vast number of calculations, before, to his indescribable joy, he found that the square of the time was proportional to the cube of the average distance.

He was the first astronomer to foretell a transit of Venus and Mercury across the sun. He announced them in 1629 for specified days in 1631. The most practical work of his was the Rudolphine Tables, the forerunner of our modern nautical almanacs, by which the planets were located easily.
SIR ISAAC NEWTON
THE DISCOVERER OF THE LAW OF GRAVITATION
Sir Isaac Newton was born on Christmas day, 1642, at Woolsthorpe, Lincoln county, England. Even as a boy, Newton showed a great predilection for studying physical laws. He made water-wheels, jumped with and against a violent wind, noting the difference in the length of the jump and made a serviceable water-clock, and a sun-dial, still preserved by the Royal Society.

When a student at Trinity College, Cambridge, he threw himself with great energy upon mathematics, making some most important discoveries, and then directed his zeal to astronomy. Kepler had found how the planets move, Newton wished to know why they move.

Now, Galilei, in his days of imprisonment, had written a work on motion in which he had suggested the following three laws, unknown before:

1. A body in motion continues to move uniformly in a straight line unless acted upon by a force.

2. If force acts on a moving body, a change of motion is produced proportional to the force and in the same direction.

3. When one body exerts force on another, that other reacts with equal force on the first.
Newton took the substance of these laws from Galilei's work, but their clear statement is entirely due to him and so is their combination with Kepler's three laws, resulting in the truth that,

The whole solar system depends on a central force emanating from the sun and varying inversely with the square of the distance.

But what was this force?

Newton discovered this force in "gravitation," the mutual attraction between two bodies, as familiar to us as light and heat, but unknown to the world before Newton's time. "Gravitation" explained the ebb and tide, and in Newton's gigantic mind it demonstrated, also, that the axis of the earth is tilted because of the attractive power of the moon working upon the protuberant mass at the equatorial region.

In recognition of his splendid achievements, Newton was elected president of the Royal Society, a position he held twenty-five years, to his death, and he was knighted in 1705. He was buried in Westminster Abbey on March 28, 1727.

William Herschel was born at Hanover, on November 13, 1737, as the son of a learned and well-connected musician. At the outbreak of the Seven Years' War the French invaded Hanover, then a British dominion, and Herschel, at the time a member of a regimental band, saw actual war. He disliked his first experience so much that he deserted and went to England. His desertion was pardoned when he had attained to fame. In England, Herschel became quite a leading musician and composer, studying meanwhile mathematics as a pastime. While so engaged in Bath, a friend lent him a telescope. He saw at once that he must have one of much greater power to make the observations his thorough-going mind demanded and set to work to construct one, an arduous task, which he, however, accomplished to his entire satisfaction.

It was in 1774 that he first looked at the stars through a telescope and from that year starts his career as one of the greatest astronomers of the world. He kept on producing ever better and larger telescopes and inventing and improving other astronomical instruments until in March 1782, while in pursuit of a systematic investigation of every bright star, he discovered in the Constellation of Gemini an object that, instead of showing a mere point of light like the other fixed stars, presented a disc like
SIR WILLIAM HERSCHEL
THE VIRTUAL FOUNDER OF SIDEREAL SCIENCE

Born at Hannover, Germany, Nov 15th 1738. Died at Slough, near Windsor, England, Aug. 25th 1822. Made the first great reflecting telescope (40 feet long) in 1789. As an explorer of the heavens he has had no equal. the planets. And later observations showed that this object moved—therefore it was a new planet, to be added to the five, which since the memory of man had been known. It was named Uranus.

This discovery produced an unheard-of sensation in the learned world. The king, George the Third, appointed him "His Majesty's Own Astronomer," and enabled him to live entirely for his science at Windsor. For thirty years he continued to enrich human knowledge by his countless faithful descriptions of double stars, nebulae and clusters, first revealed to human gaze by this indefatigable worker.

Herschel was greatly assisted by Caroline Herschel, his sister, who, from infancy, greatly admired her talented brother and devoted her life to his service, keeping house for him, noting down his dictations, while he had his eye at the telescope, sometimes from nightfall to dawn, and working out the mathematical calculations, while he was tending to his duties as a musician.

In 1778 the astronomer Bode drew attention to a peculiarity of the figures representing the distances of the various planets from the sun. If we write the figures

0, 3, 6, 12, 24, 48, 96, we see at a glance that the third figure is the double of the second, the fourth is the double of the third and so on. If we add 4 to each figure, we have

figures which represent with surprising nearness the distances above referred to. The theoretical foundation of this law has not yet been discovered, and it does not hold good with regard to the seventh planet, Neptune, with the discovery of which a most peculiar fact is connected:

The astronomer Bouvard found, in 1821, that the calculated positions of Uranus did not coincide with those actually observed. He suggested that the discrepancies might be due to the attraction of an unknown seventh planet. Then Leverrier in France, and Adams in England, calculated upon the probable position of this unknown body, and on the night of September 23, 1846 Galle, in Berlin, found this planet in the place indicated. It has one satellite and was called Neptune.

Will appeal to all who enjoy reading a real novel based upon actual scenes. Intensely dramatic from start to finish

THE Cameo of the Empress

By SIGMUND KRAUSZ

The plot is handled with great originality; the scene is laid chiefly in Naples, Pompeii and Capri; the principal characters are American pleasure seekers in Italy. A beautiful girl, full of sentiment, an earnest young archaeologist, a lively young artist, a funny porous-plaster manufacturer, two bachelor girls—all Americans; an interesting young villain and a charming young artist's model, both Italians, with some minor actors, are the principal personages that furnish the material for the author. The story carries the reader with sustained interest from the first page to the last in a succession of unexpected situations and surprises, and the entirely novel employment of the occult in the final development of the story is a suggestion that will attract the attention of all readers of high-class fiction.

Illustrated with beautiful halftones. 280 pages, 12mo cloth. Original, unique, ornamental design
