

The background of the cover is a painting. In the upper half, several white swans with long necks and wings are shown in flight against a sky filled with soft, white clouds. Below the sky is a vast expanse of blue water. In the lower portion of the painting, a dark, rocky coastline is visible, with some buildings or structures nestled among the rocks. The overall style is that of a classical or impressionistic painting.

shall use all the natural means to relieve and prevent suffering—there will be no scoring of one set of doctors by another because all will have one purpose. But more to the point than that, men will discover that health in its largest sense consists in living devout and prayerful lives whereunto shall be revealed in good time all that our finite minds can know and use. There will be no suffering of the body in the old and pitiful sense, for we shall be so much alive that disease and death can no longer claim us.
