INTRODUCTION

Two of the dramas contained in this volume are the most celebrated of all Calderon's writings. The first, "La Vida es Sueno", has been translated into many languages and performed with success on almost every stage in Europe but that of England. So late as the winter of 1866-7, in a Russian version, it drew crowded houses to the great theatre of Moscow; while a few years earlier, as if to give a signal proof of the reality of its title, and that Life was indeed a Dream, the Queen of Sweden expired in the theatre of Stockholm during the performance of "La Vida es Sueno". In England the play has been much studied for its literary value and the exceeding beauty and lyrical sweetness of some passages; but with the exception of a version by John Oxenford published in "The Monthly Magazine" for 1842, which being in blank verse does not represent the form of the original, no complete translation into English has been attempted. Some scenes translated with considerable elegance in the metre of the original were published by Archbishop Trench in 1856; but these comprised only a portion of the graver division of the drama. The present version of the entire play has been made with the advantages which the author's long experience in the study and interpretation of Calderon has enabled him to apply to this master-piece of the great Spanish poet. All the forms of verse have been preserved; while the closeness of the translation may be inferred from the fact, that not only the whole play but every speech and fragment of a speech are represented in English in the exact number of lines of the original, without the sacrifice, it is to be hoped, of one important idea.

A note by Hartzenbusch in the last edition of the drama published at Madrid (1872), tells that "La Vida es Sueno", is founded on a story which turns out to be substantially the same as that with which English students are familiar as the foundation of the famous Induction to the "Taming of the Shrew". Calderon found it however in a different work from that in which Shakespeare met with it, or rather his predecessor, the anonymous author of "The Taming of a Shrew", whose work supplied to Shakespeare the materials of his own comedy.

On this subject Malone thus writes. "The circumstance on which the Induction to the anonymous play, as well as to the present Comedy [Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew"], is founded, is related (as Langbaine has observed) by Heuterus, "Rerum Burgund." lib. iv. The earliest English original of this story in prose that I have met with is the following, which is found in Goulart's "Admirable and Memorable Histories", translated by E. Grimstone, quarto, 1607; but this tale (which Goulart translated from Heuterus) had undoubtedly appeared in English, in some other shape, before 1594:

"Philip called the good Duke of Burgundy, in the memory of our ancestors, being at Bruxelles with his Court, and walking one night after supper through the streets, accompanied by some of his favourites, he found lying upon the stones a certaine artisan that was very dronke, and that slept soundly. It pleased the prince in this artisan to make trial of the vanity of our life, whereof he had before discoursed with his familiar friends. He therefore caused this sleeper to be taken up, and carried into his palace; he commands him to be layed in one of the richest beds; a riche night cap to be given him; his foule shirt to be taken off, and to have another put on him of fine holland. When as this dronkard had digested his wine, and began to awake, behold there comes about his bed Pages and Groomes of the Duke's Chamber, who drawe the curteines, make many courtesies, and being bare-headed, aske him if it please him to rise, and what apparell it would please him to put on that day. They bring him rich apparell. This new Monsieur amazed at such courtesie, and doubting whether he dreamt or waked, suffered himselfe to be drest, and led out of the chamber. There came noblemen which saluted him with all honour, and conduct him to the Masse, where with great ceremonie they give him the booke of the Gospell, and the Pixe to kisse, as they did usually to the Duke. From the Masse they bring him back unto the pallace; he washes his hands, and sittes down at the table well furnished. After dinner, the Great Chamberlain commands cards to be brought with a great summe of money. This Duke in imagination playes with the chief of the Court. Then they carry him to walke in the gardein, and to hunt the hare, and to hawke. They bring him back into the pallace, where he sups in state. Candles being light the musitions begin to play; and the tables taken away, the gentlemen and gentlewomen fell to dancing. Then they played a pleasant comedie, after which followed a Banket, whereat they had presently store of Ipocras and pretious wine, with all sorts of confitures, to this prince of the new impression; so as he was dronke, and fell soundlie asleepe. Hereupon the Duke commanded that he should be disrobed of all his riche attire. He was put into his old ragges, and carried into the same place, where he had been found the night before; where he spent that night. Being awake in the morning, he began to remember what had happened before; he knewe not whether it were true indeede, or a dream that had troubled his braine. But in the end, after many discourses, he concludes that ALL WAS BUT A DREAME that had happened unto him; and so entertained his wife, his children, and his neighbours, without any other apprehension."

It is curious to find that the same anecdote which formed the Induction to the original "Taming of a Shrew", and which, from a comic point of view, Shakespeare so wonderfully developed in his own comedy, Calderon invested with such solemn and sublime dignity in "La Vida es Sueno". He found it, as Senor Hartzenbusch points out in the edition of 1872 already quoted, in the very amusing "Viage Entretenido" of Augustin de Rojas, which was first published in 1603. Hartzenbusch refers to the modern edition of Rojas, Madrid, 1793, tomo I, pp. 261, 262, 263, but in a copy of the Lerida edition of 1615, in my own possession, I find the anecdote at folios 118, 119, 120. There are some slight differences between the version of Rojas and that of Goulart, but the incidents and the persons are the same. The conclusion to which the artizan arrived at, in the version of Goulart, that all had been a dream, is expressed more strongly by the Duke himself in the story as told by Rojas.

"Y dijo entonces el Duque: 'veis aqui, amigos, "Lo que es el Mundo: Todo es un Sueno", pues esto verdaderamente ha pasado por este, como habeis visto, y le parece que lo ha sonado.'" —

The story in all probability came originally from the East. Mr. Lane in his translation of the Thousand and One Nights gives a very interesting narrative which he believes to be founded on an historical fact in which Haroun Al Raschid plays the part of the good Duke of Burgundy, and Abu-l-Hasan the original of Christopher Sly. The gravity of the treatment and certain incidents in this Oriental story recall more strongly Calderon's drama than the Induction to the "Taming of the Shrew". "La Vida es Sueno" was first published either at the end of 1635 or beginning of 1636.

The "Aprobacion" for its publication along with eleven other dramas (not nine as Archbishop Trench has stated), was signed on the 6th of November in the former year by the official licenser, Juan Bautista de Sossa. The volume was edited by the poet's brother, Don Joseph Calderon. So scarce has this first authorised collection of any of Calderon's dramas become, that a Spanish writer Don Vicente Garcia de la Huerta, in his "Teatro Espanol" (Parte Segunda, tomo 30), denies the existence of this volume of 1635, and states that it did not appear until 1640. As if to corroborate this view, Barrera in his "Catalogo del Teatro antiguo Espanol" gives the date 1640 to the "Primera parte de comedias de Calderon" edited by his brother Joseph.

There can be no doubt, however, that the volume appeared in 1635 or 1636 as stated. In 1637 Don Joseph Calderon published the "Second Part" of his brother's dramas containing like the former volume twelve plays.¹ In his dedication of this volume to D. Rodrigo de Mendoza, Joseph Calderon expressly alludes to the First Part of his brother's comedies which he had "printed." "En la primera Parte, Excellentissimo Senor, de las comedias que imprimir de Don Pedro Calderon de La Barca, mi hermano," etc. This of course settles the fact of the prior publication of the first Part. It is singular, however, to find that the most famous of all Calderon's dramas should have been frequently ascribed to Lope de Vega. So late as 1857 it is given in an Italian version by Giovanni La Cecilia, under the title of "La Vita e un Sogno", as a drama of Lope de Vega, with the date 1628. This of course is a mistake, but Senor Hartzenbusch, who makes no allusion to this circumstance, admits that two dramas of Lope de Vega, which it is presumed preceded the composition of Calderon's play turn on very nearly the same incidents as those of "La Vida es Sueno". These are "Lo que ha de ser", and "Barlan y Josafa". He gives a passage from each of these dramas which seem to be the germ of the fine lament of Sigismund, which the reader will find translated in the present volume.

Senor Hartzenbusch, in the edition of Calderon's "La Vida es Sueno", already referred to (Madrid, 1872), prints the passages from Lope de Vega's two dramas, but in neither of them, he justly remarks, can we find anything that at all corresponds to this "grandioso caracter de Segismundo."

The second drama in this volume, "The Wonderful Magician", is perhaps better known to poetical students in England than even the first, from the spirited fragment Shelley has left us in his "Scenes from Calderon." The preoccupation of a subject by a great master throws immense difficulties in the way of any one who ventures to follow in the same path: but as Shelley allowed himself great licence in his versification, and either from carelessness or an imperfect knowledge of Spanish is occasionally unfaithful to the meaning of his author, it may be hoped in my own version that strict fidelity both as to the form as well as substance of the original may be some compensation for the absence of those higher poetical harmonies to which many of my readers will have been accustomed.

"El Magico Prodigioso" appeared for the first time in the same volume as "La Vida es Sueno", prepared for publication in 1635 by Don Joseph Calderon. The translation is comprised in the same number of lines as the original, and all the preceding remarks on "Life is a Dream", whether in reference to the period of the first publication of the drama in Spain, or the principles I kept in view while attempting this version may be applied to it. As in the Case of "Life is a Dream", "The Wonderful Magician" has previously been translated entire by an English writer, ("Justina", by J.H. 1848); but as Archbishop Trench truly observes, "the writer did not possess that command of the resources of the English language, which none more than Calderon requires."

The Legend on which Calderon founded "El Magico Prodigioso" will be found in Surius, "De probatis Sanctorum historiis", t. V. (Col. Agr. 1574), p. 351: "Vita et Martyrium SS. Cypriani et Justinæ, autore Simeone Metaphraste", and in Chapter cxlii, of the "Legenda Aurea" of Jacobus de Voragine "De Sancta Justina virgine".

The martyrdom of the Saints took place in the year 290, and their festival is celebrated by the Church on the 26th of September.

Mr. Ticknor in his History of Spanish Literature, 1863, volume ii. p. 369, says that the Wonder-working Magician is founded on "the same legend on which Milman has founded his 'Martyr of Antioch.'" This is a mistake of the learned writer. "The Martyr of Antioch" is founded not on the history of St. Justina but of Saint Margaret, as Milman himself expressly states. Chapter xciii., "De Sancta Margareta", in the "Legenda Aurea" of Jacobus de Voragine contains her story.

The third translation in this volume is that of "The Purgatory of St. Patrick". This, though perhaps not so famous as the two preceding dramas, is intended to be given by Don P. De la Escosura, in a selection of Calderon's finest "comedias", now being edited by him for the Spanish Academy, as the representative piece of its class — namely, the mystical drama founded on the lives of Saints. Mr. Ticknor prefers it to the more celebrated "Devotion of the Cross," and says that it "is commonly ranked among the best religious plays of the Spanish theatre in the seventeenth century."

In all that relates to the famous cave known through the middle ages as the "Purgatory of Saint Patrick", as well as the Story of Luis Enius — the Owain Miles of Ancient English poetry — Calderon was entirely indebted to the little volume published at Madrid, in 1627, by Juan Perez de Montalvan, entitled "Vida y Purgatorio de San Patricio". This singular work met with immense success. It went through innumerable editions, and continues to be reprinted in Spain as a chap-book, down to the present day. I have the fifth impression "improved and enlarged by the author himself," Madrid, 1628, the year after its first appearance: also a later edition, Madrid, 1664. As early as 1637 a French translation appeared at Brussels by "F. A. S. Chartreux, a Bruxelles." In 1642 a second French translation was published at Troyes, by "R. P. Francois Bouillon, de l'Ordre de S. Francois, et Bachelier de Theologie." Mr. Thomas Wright in his "Essay on St. Patrick's Purgatory," London, 1844, makes the singular mistake of supposing that Bouillon's "Histoire de la Vie et Purgatoire de S. Patrice" was founded on the drama of Calderon, it being simply a translation of Montalvan's "Vida y Purgatorio," from which, like itself, Calderon's play was derived. Among other translations of Montalvan's work may be mentioned one in Dutch (Brussels, 1668) and one in Portuguese (Lisbon, 1738). It was also translated into German and Italian, but I find no mention of an English version. For this reason I have thought that a few extracts might be interesting, as showing how closely Calderon adhered even to the language of his predecessor.

In all that relates to the Purgatory, Montalvan's work is itself chiefly compiled from the "Florilegium Insulae Sanctorum, seu vitae et Actae sanctorum Hiberniae," Paris, 1624, fol. This work, which has now become scarce, was written by Thomas Messingham an Irish priest, the Superior of the Irish Seminary in Paris. No complete English version appears to have been made of it, but a small tract in English containing everything in the original work that referred to St. Patrick's Purgatory was published at Paris in 1718. As this tract is perhaps more scarce than even the Florilegium itself, the account of the Purgatory as given by Messingham from the MS. of Henry of Saltrey is reprinted in the notes to this drama in the quaint language of the anonymous translator. Of this tract, "printed at Paris in 1718" without the name of author, publisher or printer, I have not been able to trace another copy. In other points of interest connected with Calderon's drama, particularly to the clearing up of the difficulty hitherto felt as to the confused list of authorities at the end, the reader is also referred to the notes.

The present version of "The Purgatory of Saint Patrick" is, with the exception of a few unimportant lines, an entirely new translation. It is made with the utmost care, imitating all the measures and contained, like the two preceding dramas, in the exact number of lines of the original. One passage of the translation which I published in 1853 is retained in the notes, as a tribute of respect to the memory of the late John Rutter Chorley, it having been mentioned with praise by that eminent Spanish scholar in an elaborate review of my earlier translations from Calderon, which appeared in the "Athenaeum", Nov. 19 and Nov. 26, 1853.

It only remains to add that the text I have followed is that of Hartzenbusch in his edition of Calderon's Comedias, Madrid, 1856 ("Biblioteca de Autores Espanoles"). His arrangement of the scenes has been followed throughout, thus enabling the reader in a moment to verify for himself the exactness of the translation by a reference to the original, a crucial test which I rather invite than decline.

ACT THE FIRST

At one side a craggy mountain, at the other a tower, the lower part of which serves as the prison of SIGISMUND. The door facing the spectators is half open. The action commences at nightfall.

SCENE 1

ROSAURA, CLARIN:

ROSAURA in man's attire appears on the rocky heights and descends to the plain. She is followed by CLARIN:

ROSAURA: Wild hippogriff swift speeding,
 Thou that dost run, the winged winds exceeding,
 Bolt which no flash illumines,
 Fish without scales, bird without shifting plumes,
 And brute awhile bereft
 Of natural instinct, why to this wild cleft,
 This labyrinth of naked rocks, dost sweep
 Unreined, uncurbed, to plunge thee down the steep?
 Stay in this mountain wold,
 And let the beasts their Phaeton behold.
 For I, without a guide,
 Save what the laws of destiny decide,
 Benighted, desperate, blind.
 Take any path whatever that doth wind
 Down this rough mountain to its base,
 Whose wrinkled brow in heaven frowns in the sun's bright face.
 Ah, Poland! in ill mood
 Hast thou received a stranger, since in blood
 The name thou writest on thy sands
 Of her who hardly here fares hardly at thy hands.
 My fate may well say so:—
 But where shall one poor wretch find pity in her woe?

CLARIN: Say two, if you please;
 Don't leave me out when making complaints like these.
 For if we are the two
 Who left our native country with the view
 Of seeking strange adventures, if we be
 The two who, madly and in misery,

Have got so far as this, and if we still
 Are the same two who tumbled down this hill,
 Does it not plainly to a wrong amount,
 To put me in the pain and not in the account?

ROSAURA: I do not wish to impart,
 Clarin, to thee, the sorrows of my heart;
 Mourning for thee would spoil the consolation
 Of making for thyself thy lamentation;
 For there is such a pleasure in complaining,
 That a philosopher I've heard maintaining
 One ought to seek a sorrow and be vain of it,
 In order to be privileged to complain of it.

CLARIN: That same philosopher
 Was an old drunken fool, unless I err:
 Oh, that I could a thousand thumps present him,
 In order for complaining to content him!
 But what, my lady, say,
 Are we to do, on foot, alone, our way
 Lost in the shades of night?
 For see, the sun descends another sphere to light.

ROSAURA: So strange a misadventure who has seen?
 But if my sight deceives me not, between
 These rugged rocks, half-lit by the moon's ray
 And the declining day,
 It seems, or is it fancy? that I see
 A human dwelling?

CLARIN: So it seems to me,
 Unless my wish the longed-for lodging mocks.

ROSAURA: A rustic little palace 'mid the rocks
 Uplifts its lowly roof,
 Scarce seen by the far sun that shines aloof.
 Of such a rude device
 Is the whole structure of this edifice,

That lying at the feet
Of these gigantic crags that rise to greet
The sun's first beams of gold,
It seems a rock that down the mountain rolled.

CLARIN: Let us approach more near,
For long enough we've looked at it from here;
Then better we shall see
If those who dwell therein will generously
A welcome give us.

ROSAURA: See an open door
(Funereal mouth 'twere best the name it bore),
From which as from a womb
The night is born, engendered in its gloom.

[The sound of chains is heard within.]

CLARIN: Heavens! what is this I hear?

ROSAURA: Half ice, half fire, I stand transfixed with fear.

CLARIN: A sound of chains, is it not?
Some galley-slave his sentence here hath got;
My fear may well suggest it so may be.

SCENE 2

SIGISMUND, [in the tower.] ROSAURA, CLARIN:

SIGISMUND [within]: Alas! Ah, wretched me! Ah, wretched me!

ROSAURA: Oh what a mournful wail!
Again my pains, again my fears prevail.

CLARIN: Again with fear I die.

ROSAURA: Clarin!

CLARIN: My lady!

ROSAURA: Let us turn and fly
The risks of this enchanted tower.

CLARIN: For one,
I scarce have strength to stand, much less to run.

ROSAURA: Is not that glimmer there afar —
That dying exhalation — that pale star —
A tiny taper, which, with trembling blaze
Flickering 'twixt struggling flames and dying rays,
With ineffectual spark
Makes the dark dwelling place appear more dark?
Yes, for its distant light,
Reflected dimly, brings before my sight
A dungeon's awful gloom,
Say rather of a living corse, a living tomb;
And to increase my terror and surprise,
Drest in the skins of beasts a man there lies:
A piteous sight,
Chained, and his sole companion this poor light.
Since then we cannot fly,
Let us attentive to his words draw nigh,
Whatever they may be.

[The doors of the tower open wide, and SIGISMUND is discovered in chains and clad in the skins of beasts. The light in the tower increases.]

SIGISMUND: Alas! Ah, wretched me! Ah, wretched me!

Heaven, here lying all forlorn,
 I desire from thee to know,
 Since thou thus dost treat me so,
 Why have I provoked thy scorn
 By the crime of being born?—
 Though for being born I feel
 Heaven with me must harshly deal,
 Since man's greatest crime on earth
 Is the fatal fact of birth —
 Sin supreme without appeal.
 This alone I ponder o'er,
 My strange mystery to pierce through;
 Leaving wholly out of view
 Germs my hapless birthday bore,
 How have I offended more,
 That the more you punish me?
 Must not other creatures be
 Born? If born, what privilege
 Can they over me allege
 Of which I should not be free?
 Birds are born, the bird that sings,
 Richly robed by Nature's dower,
 Scarcely floats — a feathered flower,
 Or a bunch of blooms with wings —
 When to heaven's high halls it springs,
 Cuts the blue air fast and free,
 And no longer bound will be
 By the nest's secure control:—
 And with so much more of soul,
 Must I have less liberty?
 Beasts are born, the beast whose skin
 Dappled o'er with beauteous spots,

As when the great pencil dots
 Heaven with stars, doth scarce begin
 From its impulses within—
 Nature's stern necessity,
 To be schooled in cruelty,—
 Monster, waging ruthless war:—
 And with instincts better far
 Must I have less liberty?
 Fish are born, the spawn that breeds
 Where the oozy sea-weeds float,
 Scarce perceives itself a boat,
 Scaled and plated for its needs,
 When from wave to wave it speeds,
 Measuring all the mighty sea,
 Testing its profundity
 To its depths so dark and chill:—
 And with so much freer will,
 Must I have less liberty?
 Streams are born, a coiled-up snake
 When its path the streamlet finds,
 Scarce a silver serpent winds
 'Mong the flowers it must forsake,
 But a song of praise doth wake,
 Mournful though its music be,
 To the plain that courteously
 Opes a path through which it flies:—
 And with life that never dies,
 Must I have less liberty?
 When I think of this I start,
 Aetna-like in wild unrest
 I would pluck from out my breast
 Bit by bit my burning heart:—
 For what law can so depart
 From all right, as to deny
 One lone man that liberty —

That sweet gift which God bestows
On the crystal stream that flows,
Birds and fish that float or fly?

ROSAURA: Fear and deepest sympathy
Do I feel at every word.

SIGISMUND: Who my sad lament has heard?
What! Clotaldo!

CLARIN [aside to his mistress]: Say 'tis he.

ROSAURA: No, 'tis but a wretch (ah, me!)
Who in these dark caves and cold
Hears the tale your lips unfold.

SIGISMUND: Then you'll die for listening so,
That you may not know I know
That you know the tale I told.

[Seizes her.]

Yes, you'll die for loitering near:
In these strong arms gaunt and grim
I will tear you limb from limb.

CLARIN: I am deaf and couldn't hear:—
No!

ROSAURA: If human heart you bear,
'Tis enough that I prostrate me.
At thy feet, to liberate me!

SIGISMUND: Strange thy voice can so unbend me,
Strange thy sight can so suspend me,
And respect so penetrate me!
Who art thou? for though I see
Little from this lonely room,
This, my cradle and my tomb.
Being all the world to me,

And if birthday it could be,
Since my birthday I have known
But this desert wild and lone,
Where throughout my life's sad course
I have lived, a breathing corse,
I have moved, a skeleton;
And though I address or see
Never but one man alone,
Who my sorrows all hath known,
And through whom have come to me
Notions of earth, sky, and sea;
And though harrowing thee again,
Since thou'lt call me in this den,
Monster fit for bestial feasts,
I'm a man among wild beasts,
And a wild beast amongst men.
But though round me has been wrought
All this woe, from beasts I've learned
Polity, the same discerned
Heeding what the birds had taught,
And have measured in my thought
The fair orbits of the spheres;
You alone, 'midst doubts and fears,
Wake my wonder and surprise —
Give amazement to my eyes,
Admiration to my ears.
Every time your face I see
You produce a new amaze:
After the most steadfast gaze,
I again would gazer be.
I believe some hydropsy
Must affect my sight, I think
Death must hover on the brink
Of those wells of light, your eyes,
For I look with fresh surprise,

And though death result, I drink.
 Let me see and die: forgive me;
 For I do not know, in faith,
 If to see you gives me death,
 What to see you not would give me;
 Something worse than death would grieve me,
 Anger, rage, corroding care,
 Death, but double death it were,
 Death with tenfold terrors rife,
 Since what gives the wretched life,
 Gives the happy death, despair!

ROSAURA: Thee to see wakes such dismay,
 Thee to hear I so admire,
 That I'm powerless to inquire,
 That I know not what to say:
 Only this, that I to-day,
 Guided by a wiser will,
 Have here come to cure my ill,
 Here consoled my grief to see,
 If a wretch consoled can be
 Seeing one more wretched still.
 Of a sage, who roamed dejected,
 Poor, and wretched, it is said,
 That one day, his wants being fed
 By the herbs which he collected,
 "Is there one" (he thus reflected)
 "Poorer than I am to-day?"
 Turning round him to survey,
 He his answer got, detecting
 A still poorer sage collecting
 Even the leaves he threw away.
 Thus complaining to excess,
 Mourning fate, my life I led,
 And when thoughtlessly I said
 To myself, "Does earth possess

One more steeped in wretchedness?"
I in thee the answer find.
Since revolving in my mind,
I perceive that all my pains
To become thy joyful gains
Thou hast gathered and entwined.
And if haply some slight solace
By these pains may be imparted,¹
Hear attentively the story
Of my life's supreme disasters.
I am

SCENE 3

CLOTALDO, Soldiers, SIGISMUND, ROSAURA, CLARIN:

CLOTALDO [within]: Warders of this tower,
Who, or sleeping or faint-hearted,
Give an entrance to two persons
Who herein have burst a passage

ROSAURA: New confusion now I suffer.

SIGISMUND: 'Tis Clotaldo, who here guards me;
Are not yet my miseries ended?

CLOTALDO [within]: Hasten hither, quick! be active!
And before they can defend them,
Kill them on the spot, or capture!

[Voices within.] Treason!

CLARIN: Watchguards of this tower,
Who politely let us pass here,
Since you have the choice of killing
Or of capturing, choose the latter.

[Enter CLOTALDO and Soldiers; he with a pistol, and all with their faces covered.]

CLOTALDO [aside to the Soldiers]: Keep your faces all well covered,
For it is a vital matter
That we should be known by no one,
While I question these two stragglers.

CLARIN: Are there masqueraders here?

CLOTALDO: Ye who in your ignorant rashness
Have passed through the bounds and limits
Of this interdicted valley,
'Gainst the edict of the King,

Who has publicly commanded
 None should dare descry the wonder
 That among these rocks is guarded,
 Yield at once your arms and lives,
 Or this pistol, this cold aspic
 Formed of steel, the penetrating
 Poison of two balls will scatter,
 The report and fire of which
 Will the air astound and startle.

SIGISMUND: Ere you wound them, ere you hurt them,
 Will my life, O tyrant master,
 Be the miserable victim
 Of these wretched chains that clasp me;
 Since in them, I vow to God,
 I will tear myself to fragments
 With my hands, and with my teeth,
 In these rocks here, in these caverns,
 Ere I yield to their misfortunes,
 Or lament their sad disaster.

CLOTALDO: If you know that your misfortunes,
 Sigismund, are unexampled,
 Since before being born you died
 By Heaven's mystical enactment;
 If you know these fetters are
 Of your furies oft so rampant
 But the bridle that detains them,
 But the circle that contracts them.
 Why these idle boasts? The door
 [To the Soldiers.]
 Of this narrow prison fasten;
 Leave him there secured.

SIGISMUND: Ah, heavens,
 It is wise of you to snatch me
 Thus from freedom! since my rage

'Gainst you had become Titanic,
Since to break the glass and crystal
Gold-gates of the sun, my anger
On the firm-fixed rocks' foundations
Would have mountains piled of marble.

CLOTALDO: 'Tis that you should not so pile them
That perhaps these ills have happened,

[Some of the SOLDIERS lead SIGISMUND into his prison, the doors of which are closed upon him.]

SCENE 4

ROSAURA, CLOTALDO, CLARIN, Soldiers.

ROSAURA: Since I now have seen how pride
Can offend thee, I were hardened
Sure in folly not here humbly
At thy feet for life to ask thee;
Then to me extend thy pity,
Since it were a special harshness
If humility and pride,
Both alike were disregarded.

CLARIN: If Humility and Pride
Those two figures who have acted
Many and many a thousand times
In the "autos sacramentales",
Do not move you, I, who am neither
Proud nor humble, but a sandwich
Partly mixed of both, entreat you
To extend to us your pardon.

CLOTALDO: Ho!

SOLDIERS: My lord?

CLOTALDO: Disarm the two,
And their eyes securely bandage,
So that they may not be able
To see whither they are carried.

ROSAURA: This is, sir, my sword; to thee
Only would I wish to hand it,
Since in fine of all the others
Thou art chief, and I could hardly
Yield it unto one less noble.

CLARIN: Mine I'll give the greatest rascal
Of your troop: [To a Soldier.] so take it, you.

ROSAURA: And if I must die, to thank thee
For thy pity, I would leave thee
This as pledge, which has its value
From the owner who once wore it;
That thou guard it well, I charge thee,
For although I do not know
What strange secret it may carry,
This I know, that some great mystery
Lies within this golden scabbard,
Since relying but on it
I to Poland here have travelled
To revenge a wrong.

CLOTALDO [aside]: Just heavens!
What is this? Still graver, darker,
Grow my doubts and my confusion,
My anxieties and my anguish.—
Speak, who gave you this?

ROSAURA: A woman.

CLOTALDO: And her name?

ROSAURA: To that my answer
Must be silence.

CLOTALDO: But from what
Do you now infer, or fancy,
That this sword involves a secret?

ROSAURA: She who gave it said: "Depart hence
Into Poland, and by study,
Stratagem, and skill so manage
That this sword may be inspected
By the nobles and the magnates
Of that land, for you, I know,

Will by one of them be guarded,"—
 But his name, lest he was dead,
 Was not then to me imparted.

CLOTALDO [aside]: Bless me, Heaven! what's this I hear?
 For so strangely has this happened,
 That I cannot yet determine
 If 'tis real or imagined.
 This is the same sword that I
 Left with beauteous Violante,
 As a pledge unto its wearer,
 Who might seek me out thereafter,
 As a son that I would love him,
 And protect him as a father.
 What is to be done (ah, me!)
 In confusion so entangled,
 If he who for safety bore it
 Bears it now but to dispatch him,
 Since condemned to death he cometh
 To my feet? How strange a marvel!
 What a lamentable fortune!
 How unstable! how unhappy!
 This must be my son — the tokens
 All declare it, superadded
 To the flutter of the heart,
 That to see him loudly rappeth
 At the breast, and not being able
 With its throbs to burst its chamber,
 Does as one in prison, who,
 Hearing tumult in the alley,
 Strives to look from out the window;
 Thus, not knowing what here passes
 Save the noise, the heart uprusheth
 To the eyes the cause to examine —
 They the windows of the heart,
 Out through which in tears it glances.

What is to be done? (O Heavens!)
 What is to be done? To drag him
 Now before the King were death;
 But to hide him from my master,
 That I cannot do, according
 To my duty as a vassal.
 Thus my loyalty and self-love
 Upon either side attack me;
 Each would win. But wherefore doubt?
 Is not loyalty a grander,
 Nobler thing than life, than honour?
 Then let loyalty live, no matter
 That he die; besides, he told me,
 If I well recall his language,
 That he came to revenge a wrong,
 But a wronged man is a lazar,—
 No, he cannot be my son,
 Not the son of noble fathers.
 But if some great chance, which no one
 Can be free from, should have happened,
 Since the delicate sense of honour
 Is a thing so fine, so fragile,
 That the slightest touch may break it,
 Or the faintest breath may tarnish,
 What could he do more, do more,
 He whose cheek the blue blood mantles,
 But at many risks to have come here
 It again to re-establish?
 Yes, he is my son, my blood,
 Since he shows himself so manly.
 And thus then betwixt two doubts
 A mid course alone is granted:
 'Tis to seek the King, and tell him
 Who he is, let what will happen.
 A desire to save my honour

May appease my royal master;
Should he spare his life, I then
Will assist him in demanding
His revenge; but if the King
Should, persisting in his anger,
Give him death, then he will die
Without knowing I'm his father.—

[To ROSAURA and CLARIN:]

Come, then, come then with me, strangers.
Do not fear in your disasters
That you will not have companions
In misfortune; for so balanced
Are the gains of life or death,
That I know not which are larger.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE 5

A HALL IN THE ROYAL PALACE.

[Enter at one side ASTOLFO and Soldiers, and at the other the INFANTA ESTRELLA and her Ladies. Military music and salutes within.]

ASTOLFO: Struck at once with admiration
 At thy starry eyes outshining,
 Mingle many a salutation,
 Drums and trumpet-notes combining,
 Founts and birds in alternation;
 Wondering here to see thee pass,
 Music in grand chorus gathers
 All her notes from grove and grass:
 Here are trumpets formed of feathers,
 There are birds that breathe in brass.
 All salute thee, fair Senora,
 Ordnance as their Queen proclaim thee,
 Beauteous birds as their Aurora,
 As their Pallas trumpets name thee,
 And the sweet flowers as their Flora;
 For Aurora sure thou art,
 Bright as day that conquers night —
 Thine is Flora's peaceful part,
 Thou art Pallas in thy might,
 And as Queen thou rul'st my heart.

ESTRELLA: If the human voice obeying
 Should with human action pair,
 Then you have said ill in saying
 All these flattering words and fair,
 Since in truth they are gainsaying
 This parade of victory,
 'Gainst which I my standard rear,
 Since they say, it seems to me,

Not the flatteries that I hear,
 But the rigours that I see.
 Think, too, what a base invention
 From a wild beast's treachery sprung,—
 Fraudful mother of dissension —
 Is to flatter with the tongue,
 And to kill with the intention.

ASTOLFO: Ill informed you must have been,
 Fair Estrella, thus to throw
 Doubt on my respectful mien:
 Let your ear attentive lean
 While the cause I strive show.
 King Eustorgius the Fair,
 Third so called, died leaving two Daughters, and Basilius heir;
 Of his sisters I and you
 Are the children — I forbear
 To recall a single scene
 Save what's needful. Clorilene,
 Your good mother and my aunt,
 Who is now a habitant
 Of a sphere of sunnier sheen,
 Was the elder, of whom you
 Are the daughter; Recisunda,
 Whom God guard a thousand years,
 Her fair sister (Rosamunda
 Were she called if names were true)
 Wed in Muscovy, of whom
 I was born. 'Tis needful now
 The commencement to resume.
 King Basilius, who doth bow
 'Neath the weight of years, the doom
 Age imposes, more inclined
 To the studies of the mind
 Than to women, wifeless, lone,

Without sons, to fill his throne
 I and you our way would find.
 You, the elder's child, averred,
 That the crown you stood more nigh:
 I, maintaining that you erred,
 Held, though born of the younger, I,
 Being a man, should be preferred.
 Thus our mutual pretension
 To our uncle we related,
 Who replied that he would mention
 Here, and on this day he stated,
 What might settle the dissension.
 With this end, from Muscovy
 I set out, and with that view,
 I to-day fair Poland see,
 And not making war on you,
 Wait till war you make on me.
 Would to love — that God so wise —
 That the crowd may be a sure
 Astrologue to read the skies,
 And this festive truce secure
 Both to you and me the prize,
 Making you a Queen, but Queen
 By my will, our uncle leaving
 You the throne we'll share between —
 And my love a realm receiving
 Dearer than a King's demesne.

ESTRELLA: Well, I must be generous too,
 For a gallantry so fine;
 This imperial realm you view,
 If I wish it to be mine
 'Tis to give it unto you.
 Though if I the truth confessed,
 I must fear your love may fail —
 Flattering words are words at best,

For perhaps a truer tale
Tells that portrait on your breast.

ASTOLFO: On that point complete content
Will I give your mind, not here,
For each sounding instrument
[Drums are heard.]
Tells us that the King is near,
With his Court and Parliament.

SCENE 6

The KING BASILIUS, with his retinue. —
ASTOLFO, ESTRELLA, Ladies, Soldiers.

ESTRELLA: Learned Euclid . . .

ASTOLFO: Thales wise . .

ESTRELLA: The vast Zodiac . . .

ASTOLFO: The star spaces . . .

ESTRELLA: Who dost soar to . . .

ASTOLFO: Who dost rise...

ESTRELLA: The sun's orbit . . .

ASTOLFO: The stars' places . . .

ESTRELLA: To describe . . .

ASTOLFO: To map the skies . . .

ESTRELLA: Let me humbly interlacing . . .

ASTOLFO: Let me lovingly embracing . . .

ESTRELLA: Be the tendril of thy tree.

ASTOLFO: Bend respectfully my knee.

BASILIUS: Children, that dear word displacing
 Colder names, my arms here bless;
 And be sure, since you assented
 To my plan, my love's excess
 Will leave neither discontented,
 Or give either more or less.
 And though I from being old
 Slowly may the facts unfold,
 Hear in silence my narration,

Keep reserved your admiration,
 Till the wondrous tale is told.
 You already know — I pray you
 Be attentive, dearest children,¹
 Great, illustrious Court of Poland,
 Faithful vassals, friends and kinsmen,
 You already know — my studies
 Have throughout the whole world given me
 The high title of "the learned,"
 Since 'gainst time and time's oblivion
 The rich pencils of Timanthes,
 The bright marbles of Lysippus,
 Universally proclaim me
 Through earth's bounds the great BASILIUS
 You already know the sciences
 That I feel my mind most given to
 Are the subtle mathematics,
 By whose means my clear prevision
 Takes from rumour its slow office,
 Takes from time its jurisdiction
 Of, each day, new facts disclosing;
 Since in algebraic symbols
 When the fate of future ages
 On my tablets I see written,
 I anticipate time in telling
 What my science hath predicted.
 All those circles of pure snow,
 All those canopies of crystal,
 Which the sun with rays illumines,
 Which the moon cuts in its circles,
 All those orbs of twinkling diamond,
 All those crystal globes that glisten,
 All that azure field of stars

¹ The metre changes here to the "asonante" in "i—e", or their vocal equivalents, and is kept up for the remainder of the Act.

Where the zodiac signs are pictured,
 Are the study of my life,
 Are the books where heaven has written
 Upon diamond-dotted paper,
 Upon leaves by sapphires tinted,
 With light luminous lines of gold,
 In clear characters distinctly
 All the events of human life,
 Whether adverse or benignant.
 These so rapidly I read
 That I follow with the quickness
 Of my thoughts the swiftest movements
 Of their orbits and their circles.
 Would to heaven, that ere my mind
 To those mystic books addicted
 Was the comment of their margins
 And of all their leaves the index,
 Would to heaven, I say, my life
 Had been offered the first victim
 Of its anger, that my death-stroke
 Had in this way have been given me,
 Since the unhappy find even merit
 Is the fatal knife that kills them,
 And his own self-murderer
 Is the man whom knowledge injures!—
 I may say so, but my story
 So will say with more distinctness,
 And to win your admiration
 Once again I pray you listen.—
 Clorilene, my wife, a son
 Bore me, so by fate afflicted
 That on his unhappy birthday
 All Heaven's prodigies assisted.
 Nay, ere yet to life's sweet life
 Gave him forth her womb, that living

Sepulchre (for death and life
Have like ending and beginning),
Many a time his mother saw
In her dreams' delirious dimness
From her side a monster break,
Fashioned like a man, but sprinkled
With her blood, who gave her death,
By that human viper bitten.
Round his birthday came at last,
All its auguries fulfilling
(For the presages of evil
Seldom fail or even linger):
Came with such a horoscope,
That the sun rushed blood-red tinted
Into a terrific combat
With the dark moon that resisted;
Earth its mighty lists outspread
As with lessening lights diminished
Strove the twin-lamps of the sky.
'Twas of all the sun's eclipses
The most dreadful that it suffered
Since the hour its bloody visage
Wept the awful death of Christ.
For o'erwhelmed in glowing cinders
The great orb appeared to suffer
Nature's final paroxysm.
Gloom the glowing noontide darkened,
Earthquake shook the mightiest buildings,
Stones the angry clouds rained down,
And with blood ran red the rivers.
In this frenzy of the sun,
In its madness and delirium,
Sigismund was born, thus early
Giving proofs of his condition,
Since his birth his mother slew,

Just as if these words had killed her,
"I am a man, since good with evil
I repay here from the beginning,"—
I, applying to my studies,
Saw in them as 'twere forewritten
This, that Sigismund would be
The most cruel of all princes,
Of all men the most audacious,
Of all monarchs the most wicked;
That his kingdom through his means
Would be broken and partitioned,
The academy of the vices,
And the high school of sedition;
And that he himself, borne onward
By his crimes' wild course resistless,
Would even place his feet on me;
For I saw myself down-stricken,
Lying on the ground before him
(To say this what shame it gives me!)
While his feet on my white hairs
As a carpet were imprinted.
Who discredits threatened ill,
Specially an ill previsionsed
By one's study, when self-love
Makes it his peculiar business?—
Thus then crediting the fates
Which far off my science witnessed,
All these fatal auguries
Seen though dimly in the distance,
I resolved to chain the monster
That unhappily life was given to,
To find out if yet the stars
Owned the wise man's weird dominion.
It was publicly proclaimed
That the sad ill-omened infant

Was stillborn. I then a tower
 Caused by forethought to be builded
 'Mid the rocks of these wild mountains
 Where the sunlight scarce can gild it,
 Its glad entrance being barred
 By these rude shafts obeliscal.
 All the laws of which you know,
 All the edicts that prohibit
 Anyone on pain of death
 That secluded part to visit
 Of the mountain, were occasioned
 By this cause, so long well hidden.
 There still lives Prince Sigismund,
 Miserable, poor, in prison.
 Him alone Clotaldo sees,
 Only tends to and speaks with him;
 He the sciences has taught him,
 He the Catholic religion
 Has imparted to him, being
 Of his miseries the sole witness.
 Here there are three things: the first
 I rate highest, since my wishes
 Are, O Poland, thee to save
 From the oppression, the affliction
 Of a tyrant King, because
 Of his country and his kingdom
 He were no benignant father
 Who to such a risk could give it.
 Secondly, the thought occurs
 That to take from mine own issue
 The plain right that every law
 Human and divine hath given him
 Is not Christian charity;
 For by no law am I bidden
 To prevent another proving,

Say, a tyrant, or a villain,
 To be one myself: supposing
 Even my son should be so guilty,
 That he should not crimes commit
 I myself should first commit them.
 Then the third and last point is,
 That perhaps I erred in giving
 Too implicit a belief
 To the facts foreseen so dimly;
 For although his inclination
 Well might find its precipices,
 He might possibly escape them:
 For the fate the most fastidious,
 For the impulse the most powerful.
 Even the planets most malicious
 Only make free will incline,
 But can force not human wishes.
 And thus 'twist these different causes
 Vacillating and unfixed,
 I a remedy have thought of
 Which will with new wonder fill you.
 I to-morrow morning purpose,
 Without letting it be hinted
 That he is my son, and therefore
 Your true King, at once to fix him
 As King Sigismund (for the name
 Still he bears that first was given him)
 'Neath my canopy, on my throne,
 And in fine in my position,
 There to govern and command you,
 Where in dutiful submission
 You will swear to him allegiance.
 My resources thus are triple,
 As the causes of disquiet
 Were which I revealed this instant.

The first is; that he being prudent,
Careful, cautious and benignant,
Falsifying the wild actions
That of him had been predicted,
You'll enjoy your natural prince,
He who has so long been living
Holding court amid these mountains,
With the wild beasts for his circle.
Then my next resource is this:
If he, daring, wild, and wicked,
Proudly runs with loosened rein
O'er the broad plain of the vicious,
I will have fulfilled the duty
Of my natural love and pity;
Then his righteous deposition
Will but prove my royal firmness,
Chastisement and not revenge
Leading him once more to the prison.
My third course is this: the Prince
Being what my words have pictured,
From the love I owe you, vassals,
I will give you other princes
Worthier of the crown and sceptre;
Namely, my two sisters' children,
Who their separate pretensions
Having happily commingled
By the holy bonds of marriage,
Will then fill their fit position.
This is what a king commands you,
This is what a father bids you,
This is what a sage entreats you,
This is what an old man wishes;
And as Seneca, the Spaniard,
Says, a king for all his riches

Is but slave of his Republic,
This is what a slave petitions.

ASTOLFO: If on me devolves the answer,
As being in this weighty business
The most interested party,
I, of all, express the opinion:—
Let Prince Sigismund appear;
He's thy son, that's all-sufficient.

ALL: Give to us our natural prince,
We proclaim him king this instant!

BASILIOUS: Vassals, from my heart I thank you
For this deference to my wishes:—
Go, conduct to their apartments
These two columns of my kingdom,
On to-morrow you shall see him.

ALL: Live, long live great King Basilius!

[Exeunt all, accompanying ESTRELLA and ASTOLFO;
The King remains.]

SCENE 7

CLOTALDO, ROSAURA, CLARIN, and BASILIUS

CLOTALDO: May I speak to you, sire?

BASILIOUS: Clotaldo,
You are always welcome with me.

CLOTALDO: Although coming to your feet
Shows how freely I'm admitted,
Still, your majesty, this once,
Fate as mournful as malicious
Takes from privilege its due right,
And from custom its permission.

BASILIOUS: What has happened?

CLOTALDO: A misfortune,
Sire, which has my heart afflicted
At the moment when all joy
Should have overflown and filled it.

BASILIOUS: Pray proceed.

CLOTALDO: This handsome youth here,
Inadvertently, or driven
By his daring, pierced the tower,
And the Prince discovered in it.
Nay

BASILIOUS: Clotaldo, be not troubled
At this act, which if committed
At another time had grieved me,
But the secret so long hidden
Having myself told, his knowledge
Of the fact but matters little.
See me presently, for I

Much must speak upon this business,
And for me you much must do
For a part will be committed
To you in the strangest drama
That perhaps the world e'er witnessed.
As for these, that you may know
That I mean not your remissness
To chastise, I grant their pardon.
[Exit.]

CLOTALDO: Myriad years to my lord be given!

SCENE 8

CLOTALDO, ROSAURA, and CLARIN:

CLOTALDO [aside]: Heaven has sent a happier fate;
Since I need not now admit it,
I'll not say he is my son.—
Strangers who have wandered hither,
You are free.

ROSAURA: I give your feet
A thousand kisses.

CLARIN: I say misses,
For a letter more or less
'Twixt two friends is not considered.

ROSAURA: You have given me life, my lord,
And since by your act I'm living,
I eternally will own me
As your slave.

CLOTALDO: The life I've given
Is not really your true life,
For a man by birth uplifted
If he suffers an affront
Actually no longer liveth;
And supposing you have come here
For revenge as you have hinted,
I have not then given you life,
Since you have not brought it with you,
For no life disgraced is life.—
[Aside.] (This I say to arouse his spirit.)

ROSAURA: I confess I have it not,
Though by you it has been given me;
But revenge being wreaked, my honour

I will leave so pure and limpid,
 All its perils overcome,
 That my life may then with fitness
 Seem to be a gift of yours.

CLOTALDO: Take this burnished sword which hither
 You brought with you; for I know,
 To revenge you, 'tis sufficient,
 In your enemy's blood bathed red;
 For a sword that once was girded
 Round me (I say this the while
 That to me it was committed),
 Will know how to right you.

ROSAURA: Thus
 In your name once more I gird it,
 And on it my vengeance swear,
 Though the enemy who afflicts me
 Were more powerful.

CLOTALDO: Is he so?

ROSAURA: Yes; so powerful, I am hindered
 Saying who he is, not doubting
 Even for greater things your wisdom
 And calm prudence, but through fear
 Lest against me your prized pity
 Might be turned.

CLOTALDO: 'Twill rather be,
 By declaring it, more kindled;
 Otherwise you bar the passage
 'Gainst your foe of my assistance.—
 [Aside.] (Would that I but knew his name!)

ROSAURA: Not to think I set so little
 Value on such confidence,
 Know my enemy and my victim

Is no less than Prince Astolfo,
Duke of Muscovy.

CLOTALDO [aside]: Resistance
Badly can my grief supply
Since 'tis heavier than I figured.
Let us sift the matter deeper.—
If a Muscovite by birth, then
He who is your natural lord
Could not 'gainst you have committed
Any wrong; reseek your country,
And abandon the wild impulse
That has driven you here.

ROSAURA: I know,
Though a prince, he has committed
'Gainst me a great wrong.

CLOTALDO: He could not,
Even although your face was stricken
By his angry hand. [Aside.] (Oh, heavens!)

ROSAURA: Mine's a wrong more deep and bitter.

CLOTALDO: Tell it, then; it cannot be
Worse than what my fancy pictures.

ROSAURA: I will tell it; though I know not,
With the respect your presence gives me,
With the affection you awaken,
With the esteem your worth elicits,
How with bold face here to tell you
That this outer dress is simply
An enigma, since it is not
What it seems. And from this hint, then,
If I'm not what I appear,
And Astolfo with this princess

Comes to wed, judge how by him
I was wronged: I've said sufficient.

[Exeunt ROSAURA and CLARIN:]

CLOTALDO: Listen! hear me! wait! oh, stay!
What a labyrinthine thicket
Is all this, where reason gives
Not a thread whereby to issue?
My own honour here is wronged,
Powerful is my foe's position,
I a vassal, she a woman;
Heaven reveal some way in pity,
Though I doubt it has the power;
When in such confused abysses,
Heaven is all one fearful presage,
And the world itself a riddle.

ACT THE SECOND

A hall in the royal palace.

SCENE 1

BASILIOUS and CLOTALDO:

CLOTALDO: Everything has been effected
As you ordered.

BASILIOUS: How all happened¹
Let me know, my good CLOTALDO

CLOTALDO: It was done, sire, in this manner.
With the tranquillising draught,
Which was made, as you commanded,
Of confections duly mixed
With some herbs, whose juice extracted
Has a strange tyrannic power,
Has some secret force imparted,
Which all human sense and speech
Robs, deprives, and counteracteth,
And as 'twere a living corpse
leaves the man whose lips have quaffed it
So asleep that all his senses,
All his powers are overmastered
— No need have we to discuss
That this fact can really happen,
Since, my lord, experience gives us
Many a clear and proved example;
Certain 'tis that Nature's secrets
May by medicine be extracted,
And that not an animal,
Not a stone, or herb that's planted,
But some special quality
Doth possess: for if the malice
Of man's heart, a thousand poisons

¹ The metre of this and the following scene is the asonante in a—e.

That give death, hath power to examine,
Is it then so great a wonder
That, their venom being abstracted,
If, as death by some is given,
Sleep by others is imparted?
Putting, then, aside the doubt
That 'tis possible this should happen,
A thing proved beyond all question
Both by reason and example
— With the sleeping draught, in fine,
Made of opium superadded
To the poppy and the henbane,
I to Sigismund's apartment —
Cell, in fact — went down, and with him
Spoke awhile upon the grammar
Of the sciences, those first studies
Which mute Nature's gentle masters,
Silent skies and hills, had taught him;
In which school divine and ample,
The bird's song, the wild beast's roar,
Were a lesson and a language.
Then to raise his spirit more
To the high design you planned here,
I discoursed on, as my theme,
The swift flight, the stare undazzled
Of a pride-plumed eagle bold,
Which with back-averted talons,
Scorning the tame fields of air,
Seeks the sphere of fire, and passes
Through its flame a flash of feathers,
Or a comet's hair untangled.
I extolled its soaring flight,
Saying, "Thou at last art master
Of thy house, thou'rt king of birds,
It is right thou should'st surpass them."

He who needed nothing more
 Than to touch upon the matter
 Of high royalty, with a bearing
 As became him, boldly answered;
 For in truth his princely blood
 Moves, excites, inflames his ardour
 To attempt great things: he said,
 "In the restless realm of atoms
 Given to birds, that even one
 Should swear fealty as a vassal!
 I, reflecting upon this,
 Am consoled by my disasters,
 For, at least, if I obey,
 I obey through force: untrammelled,
 Free to act, I ne'er will own
 Any man on earth my master."—
 This, his usual theme of grief,
 Having roused him nigh to madness,
 I occasion took to proffer
 The drugged draught: he drank, but hardly
 Had the liquor from the vessel
 Passed into his breast, when fastest
 Sleep his senses seized, a sweat,
 Cold as ice, the life-blood hardened
 In his veins, his limbs grew stiff,
 So that, knew I not 'twas acted,
 Death was there, feigned death, his life
 I could doubt not had departed.
 Then those, to whose care you trust
 This experiment, in a carriage
 Brought him here, where all things fitting
 The high majesty and the grandeur
 Of his person are provided.
 In the bed of your state chamber
 They have placed him, where the stupor

Having spent its force and vanished,
 They, as 'twere yourself, my lord,
 Him will serve as you commanded:
 And if my obedient service
 Seems to merit some slight largess,
 I would ask but this alone
 (My presumption you will pardon),
 That you tell me, with what object
 Have you, in this secret manner,
 To your palace brought him here?

BASILIOUS: Good Clotaldo, what you ask me
 Is so just, to you alone
 I would give full satisfaction.
 Sigismund, my son, the hard
 Influence of his hostile planet
 (As you know) doth threat a thousand
 Dreadful tragedies and disasters;
 I desire to test if Heaven
 (An impossible thing to happen)
 Could have lied — if having given us
 Proofs unnumbered, countless samples
 Of his evil disposition,
 He might prove more mild, more guarded
 At the lest, and self-subdued
 By his prudence and true valour
 Change his character; for 'tis man
 That alone controls the planets.
 This it is I wish to test,
 Having brought him to this palace,
 Where he'll learn he is my son,
 And display his natural talents.
 If he nobly hath subdued him,
 He will reign; but if his manners
 Show him tyrannous and cruel,
 Then his chains once more shall clasp him.

But for this experiment,
 Now you probably will ask me
 Of what moment was't to bring him
 Thus asleep and in this manner?
 And I wish to satisfy you,
 Giving all your doubts an answer.
 If to-day he learns that he
 Is my son, and some hours after
 Finds himself once more restored
 To his misery and his shackles,
 Certain 'tis that from his temper
 Blank despair may end in madness —
 But once knowing who he is,
 Can he be consoled thereafter?
 Yes, and thus I wish to leave
 One door open, one free passage,
 By declaring all he saw
 Was a dream. With this advantage
 We attain two ends. The first
 Is to put beyond all cavil
 His condition, for on waking
 He will show his thoughts, his fancies:
 To console him is the second;
 Since, although obeyed and flattered,
 He beholds himself awhile,
 And then back in prison shackled
 Finds him, he will think he dreamed.
 And he rightly so may fancy,
 For, Clotaldo, in this world
 All who live but dream they act here.

CLOTALDO: Reasons fail me not to show
 That the experiment may not answer;
 But there is no remedy now,
 For a sign from the apartment

Tells me that he hath awoken
And even hitherward advances.

BASILIOUS: It is best that I retire;
But do you, so long his master,
Near him stand; the wild confusion
That his waking sense may darken
Dissipate by simple truth.

CLOTALDO: Then your licence you have granted
That I may declare it?

BASILIOUS: Yes;
For it possibly may happen
That admonished of his danger
He may conquer his worst passions.
[Exit]

SCENE 2

CLARIN and CLOTALDO:

CLARIN [aside]: Four good blows are all it cost me
To come here, inflicted smartly
By a red-robed halberdier,
With a beard to match his jacket,
At that price I see the show,
For no window's half so handy
As that which, without entreating
Tickets of the ticket-master,
A man carried with himself;
Since for all the feasts and galas
Cool effrontery is the window
Whence at ease he gazes at them.

CLOTALDO [aside]: This is Clarin, heavens! of her,
Yes, I say, of her the valet,
She, who dealing in misfortunes,
Has my pain to Poland carried:—
Any news, friend Clarin?

CLARIN: News?
Yes, sir, since your great compassion
Is disposed Rosaura's outrage
To revenge, she has changed her habit,
And resumed her proper dress.

CLOTALDO: 'Tis quite right, lest possible scandal
Might arise.

CLARIN: More news: her name
Having changed and wisely bartered
For your niece's name, she now
So in honour has advanced her,
That among Estrella's ladies

She here with her in the palace
Lives.

CLOTALDO: 'Tis right that I once more
Should her honour re-establish.

CLARIN: News; that anxiously she waiteth
For that very thing to happen,
When you may have time to try it.

CLOTALDO: Most discreetly has she acted;
Soon the time will come, believe me,
Happily to end this matter.

CLARIN: News, too; that she's well regaled,
Feasted like a queen, and flattered
On the strength of being your niece.
And the last news, and the saddest,
Is that I who here came with her
Am with hunger almost famished.
None remember me, or think
I am Clarin, clarion rather,
And that if that clarion sounded,
All the Court would know what passes.
For there are two things, to wit,
A brass clarion and a lackey,
That are bad at keeping secrets;
And it so may chance, if haply
I am forced to break my silence,
They of me may sing this passage:
"Never, when the day is near,
Does clarion sound more clear."¹

CLOTALDO: Your complaint is too well-founded;
I will get you satisfaction,
Meanwhile you may wait on me.

CLARIN: See, sir, Sigismund advances.

SCENE 3

[Music and song.] SIGISMUND enters, lost in amazement. Servants minister to him, presenting costly robes. —CLOTALDO, and CLARIN:

SIGISMUND: Help me, Heaven, what's this I see!

Help me, Heaven, what's this I view!

Things I scarce believe are true,

But, if true, which fright not me.

I in palaces of state?

I 'neath silks and cloth of gold?

I, around me, to behold

Rich-robed servants watch and wait?

I so soft a bed to press

While sweet sleep my senses bowed?

I to wake in such a crowd,

Who assist me even to dress?

'Twere deceit to say I dream,

Waking I recall my lot,

I am Sigismund, am I not?

Heaven make plain what dark doth seem!

Tell me, what has phantasy —

Wild, misleading, dream-adept —

So effected while I slept,

That I still the phantoms see?

But let that be as it may,

Why perplex myself and brood?

Better taste the present good,

Come what will some other day.

FIRST SERVANT [aside to the' Second Servant, and to CLARIN]: What a sadness doth oppress him!

SECOND SERVANT: Who in such-like case would be Less surprised and sad than he?

CLARIN: I for one.

SECOND SERVANT [to the First]: You had best address him.

FIRST SERVANT [to SIGISMUND]: May they sing again?

SIGISMUND: No, no;
I don't care to hear them sing.

SECOND SERVANT: I conceived the song might bring
To your thought some ease.

SIGISMUND: Not so;
Voiced that but charm the ear
Cannot soothe my sorrow's pain;
'Tis the soldier's martial strain
That alone I love to hear.

CLOTALDO: May your Highness, mighty Prince,
Deign to let me kiss your hand,
I would first of all this land
My profound respect evince.

SIGISMUND [aside]: 'Tis my gaoler! how can he Change his harshness and neglect
To this language of respect?
What can have occurred to me?

CLOTALDO: The new state in which I find you
Must create a vague surprise,
Doubts unnumbered must arise
To bewilder and to blind you;
I would make your prospect fair,
Through the maze a path would show,
Thus, my lord, 'tis right you know
That you are the prince and heir
Of this Polish realm: if late
You lay hidden and concealed
'Twas that we were forced to yield

To the stern decrees of fate,
 Which strange ills, I know not how,
 Threatened on this land to bring
 Should the laurel of a king
 Ever crown thy princely brow.
 Still relying on the power
 Of your will the stars to bind,
 For a man of resolute mind
 Can them bind how dark they lower;
 To this palace from your cell
 In your life-long turret keep
 They have borne you while dull sleep
 Held your spirit in its spell.
 Soon to see you and embrace
 Comes the King, your father, here —
 He will make the rest all clear.

SIGISMUND: Why, thou traitor vile and base,
 What need I to know the rest,
 Since it is enough to know
 Who I am my power to show,
 And the pride that fills my breast?
 Why this treason brought to light
 Has thou to thy country done,
 As to hide from the King's son,
 'Gainst all reason and all right,
 This his rank?

CLOTALDO: Oh, destiny!

SIGISMUND: Thou the traitor's part has played
 'Gainst the law; the King betrayed,
 And done cruel wrong to me;
 Thus for each distinct offence
 Have the law, the King, and I
 Thee condemned this day to die
 By my hands.

SECOND SERVANT: Prince

SIGISMUND: No pretence
Shall undo the debt I owe you.
Catiff, hence! By Heaven! I say,
If you dare to stop my way
From the window I will throw you.

SECOND SERVANT: Fly, Clotaldo!

CLOTALDO: Woe to thee,
In thy pride so powerful seeming,
Without knowing thou art dreaming!
[Exit.

SECOND SERVANT: Think

SIGISMUND: Away! don't trouble me.

SECOND SERVANT: He could not the King deny.

SIGISMUND: Bade to do a wrongful thing
He should have refused the King;
And, besides, his prince was I.

SECOND SERVANT: 'Twas not his affair to try
If the act was wrong or right.

SIGISMUND: You're indifferent, black or white,
Since so pertly you reply.

CLARIN: What the Prince says is quite true,
What you do is wrong, I say.

SECOND SERVANT: Who gave you this licence, pray?

CLARIN: No one gave; I took it.

SIGISMUND: Who
Art thou, speak?

CLARIN: A meddling fellow,
Prating, prying, fond of scrapes,
General of all jackanapes,
And most merry when most mellow.

SIGISMUND: You alone in this new sphere
Have amused me.

CLARIN: That's quite true, sir,
For I am the great amuser
Of all Sigismunds who are here.

SCENE 4

ASTOLFO, SIGISMUND, CLARIN, Servants, and Musicians.

ASTOLFO: Thousand tunes be blest the day,
 Prince, that gives thee to our sight,
 Sun of Poland, whose glad light
 Makes this whole horizon gay,
 As when from the rosy fountains
 Of the dawn the stream-rays run,
 Since thou issuest like the sun
 From the bosom of the mountains!
 And though late do not defer
 With thy sovran light to shine;
 Round thy brow the laurel twine —
 Deathless crown.

SIGISMUND: God guard thee, sir.

ASTOLFO: In not knowing me I o'erlook,
 But alone for this defect,
 This response that lacks respect,
 And due honour. Muscovy's Duke
 Am I, and your cousin born,
 Thus my equal I regard thee.

SIGISMUND: Did there, when I said "God guard thee,"
 Lie concealed some latent scorn? —
 Then if so, now having got
 Thy big name, and seeing thee vexed,
 When thou com'st to see me next
 I will say God guard thee not.

SECOND SERVANT [to ASTOLFO]: Think, your Highness, if he errs
 Thus, his mountain birth's at fault,
 Every word is an assault.

[To SIGISMUND:]

Duke Astolfo, sir, prefers

SIGISMUND: Tut! his talk became a bore,
Nay his act was worse than that,
He presumed to wear his hat.

SECOND SERVANT: As grandee.

SIGISMUND: But I am more.

SECOND SERVANT: Nevertheless respect should be Much more marked betwixt ye two
Than 'twixt others.

SIGISMUND: And pray who
Asked your meddling thus with me?

SCENE 5

ESTRELLA: — THE SAME.

ESTRELLA: Welcome may your Highness be,
 Welcomed oft to this thy throne,
 Which long longing for its own
 Finds at length its joy in thee;
 Where, in spite of bygone fears,
 May your reign be great and bright,
 And your life in its long flight
 Count by ages, not by years.

SIGISMUND (to CLARIN): Tell me, thou, say, who can be
 This supreme of loveliness —
 Goddess in a woman's dress —
 At whose feet divine we see
 Heaven its choicest gifts doth lay?—
 This sweet maid? Her name declare.

CLARIN: 'Tis your star-named¹ cousin fair.

SIGISMUND: Nay, the sun, 'twere best to say.—

[To ESTRELLA:]

Though thy sweet felicitation
 Adds new splendour to my throne,
 'Tis for seeing thee alone
 That I merit gratulation;
 Therefore I a prize have drawn
 That I scarce deserved to win,
 And am doubly blessed therein:—
 Star, that in the rosy dawn
 Dimmest with transcendent ray
 Orbs that brightest gem the blue,
 What is left the sun to do,

¹ 'Estrella', which means star in Spanish.

When thou risest with the day?—
 Give me then thy hand to kiss,
 In whose cup of snowy whiteness
 Drinks the day delicious brightness.

ESTRELLA: What a courtly speech is this?

ASTOLFO [aside]: If he takes her hand I feel
 I am lost.

SECOND SERVANT [aside]: Astolfo's grief
 I perceive, and bring relief:—
 Think, my lord, excuse my zeal,
 That perhaps this is too free,
 Since Astolfo

SIGISMUND: Did I say
 Woe to him that stops my way?—

SECOND SERVANT: What I said was just.

SIGISMUND: To me
 This is tiresome and absurd.
 Nought is just, or good or ill,
 In my sight that balks my will.

SECOND SERVANT: Why, my lord, yourself I heard
 Say in any righteous thing
 It was proper to obey.

SIGISMUND: You must, too, have heard me say
 Him I would from window throw
 Who should tease me or defy?

SECOND SERVANT: Men like me perhaps might show
 That could not be done, sir.

SIGISMUND: No?
 Then, by Heaven, at least, I'll try!

[He seizes him in his arms and rushes to the side. All follow, and return immediately.]

ASTOLFO: What is this I see? Oh, woe!

ESTRELLA: Oh, prevent him! Follow me!
[Exit.]

SIGISMUND: [returning]. From the window into the sea
He has fallen; I told him so.

ASTOLFO: These strange bursts of savage malice
You should regulate, if you can;
Wild beasts are to civilised man
As rude mountains to a palace.

SIGISMUND: Take a bit of advice for that:
Pause ere such bold words are said,
Lest you may not have a head
Upon which to hang your hat.

[Exit ASTOLFO]

SCENE 6

BASILIOUS, SIGISMUND, and CLARIN:

BASILIOUS: What's all this?

SIGISMUND: A trifling thing:

One who teased and thwarted me
I have just thrown into the sea.

CLARIN [to SIGISMUND]: Know, my lord, it is the King.

BASILIOUS: Ere the first day's sun hath set,
Has thy coming cost a life?

SIGISMUND: Why he dared me to the strife,
And I only won the bet.

BASILIOUS: Prince, my grief, indeed is great,
Coming here when I had thought
That admonished thou wert taught
To o'ercome the stars and fate,
Still to see such rage abide
In the heart I hoped was free,
That thy first sad act should be
A most fearful homicide.
How could I, by love conducted,
Trust me to thine arms' embracing,
When their haughty interlacing,
Has already been instructed
How to kill? For who could see,
Say, some dagger bare and bloody,
By some wretch's heart made ruddy,
But would fear it? Who is he,
Who may happen to behold
On the ground the gory stain
Where another man was slain

But must shudder? The most bold
 Yields at once to Nature's laws;
 Thus I, seeing in your arms
 The dread weapon that alarms,
 And the stain, must fain withdraw;
 And though in embraces dear
 I would press you to my heart,
 I without them must depart,
 For, alas! your arms I fear.

SIGISMUND: Well, without them I must stay,
 As I've staid for many a year,
 For a father so severe,
 Who could treat me in this way,
 Whose unfeeling heart could tear me
 From his side even when a child,
 Who, a denizen of the wild,
 As a monster there could rear me,
 Any by many an artful plan
 Sought my death, it cannot grieve me
 Much his arms will not receive me
 Who has scarcely left me man.

BASILIOUS: Would to God it had not been
 Act of mine that name conferred,
 Then thy voice I ne'er had heard,
 Then thy boldness ne'er had seen.

SIGISMUND: Did you manhood's right retain,
 I would then have nought to say,
 But to give and take away
 Gives me reason to complain;
 For although to give with grace
 Is the noblest act 'mongst men,
 To take back the gift again
 Is the basest of the base.

BASILIOUS: This then is thy grateful mood
 For my changing thy sad lot
 To a prince's!

SIGISMUND: And for what
 Should I show my gratitude!
 Tyrant of my will o'erthrown,
 If thou hoary art and gray,
 Dying, what do'st give me? Say,
 Do'st thou give what's not mine own?
 Thou'rt my father and my King,
 Then the pomp these walls present
 Comes to me by due descent
 As a simple, natural thing.
 Yes, this sunshine pleaseth me,
 But 'tis not through thee I bask;
 Nay, a reckoning I might ask
 For the life, love, liberty
 That through thee I've lost so long:
 Thine 'tis rather to thank me,
 That I do not claim from thee
 Compensation for my wrong.

BASILIOUS: Still untamed and uncontrolled;—
 Heaven fulfils its word I feel,
 I to that same court appeal
 'Gainst thy taunts, thou vain and bold,
 But although the truth thou'st heard,
 And now know'st thy name and race,
 And do'st see thee in this place,
 Where to all thou art preferred,
 Yet be warned, and on thee take
 Ways more mild and more befitting,
 For perhaps thou art but dreaming,
 When it seems that thou'rt awake.
 [Exit.]

SIGISMUND: Is this, then, a phantom scene? —

Do I wake in seeming show?—

No, I dream not, since I know

What I am and what I've been.

And although thou should'st repent thee,

Remedy is now too late.

Who I am I know, and fate,

Howsoe'er thou should'st lament thee,

Cannot take from me my right

Of being born this kingdom's heir.

If I saw myself erewhile

Prisoned, bound, kept out of sight,

'Twas that never on my mind

Dawned the truth; but now I know

Who I am — a mingled show

Of the man and beast combined.

SCENE 7

ROSAURA, in female attire; SIGISMUND, CLARIN, and Servants.

ROSAURA [aside]: To wait upon Estrella I come here,
And lest I meet Astolfo tremble with much fear;
Clotaldo's wishes are
The Duke should know me not, and from afar
See me, if see he must.
My honour is at stake, he says; my trust
Is in Clotaldo's truth.
He will protect my honour and my youth.

CLARIN [to SIGISMUND]: Of all this palace here can boast,
All that you yet have seen, say which has pleased you most?

SIGISMUND: Nothing surprised me, nothing scared,
Because for everything I was prepared;
But if I felt for aught, or more or less
Of admiration, 'twas the loveliness
Of woman; I have read
Somewhere in books on which my spirit fed,
That which caused God the greatest care to plan,
Because in him a little world he formed, was man;
But this were truer said, unless I err,
Of woman, for a little heaven he made in her;
She who in beauty from her birth
Surpasses man as heaven surpasseth earth;
Nay, more, the one I see.

ROSAURA [aside]: The Prince is here; I must this instant flee.

SIGISMUND: Hear, woman! stay;
Nor wed the western with the orient ray,
Flying with rapid tread;
For joined the orient rose and western red,
The light and the cold gloom,

The day will sink untimely to its tomb.
But who is this I see?

ROSAURA [aside]: I doubt and yet believe that it is he.

SIGISMUND [aside]: This beauty I have seen
Some other time.

ROSAURA [aside]: This proud, majestic mien,
This form I once saw bound
Within a narrow cell.

SIGISMUND [aside]: My life I have found.—
Woman, the sweetest name
That man can breathe, or flattering language frame,
Who art thou? for before
I see thee, I believe and I adore;
Faith makes my love sublime,
Persuading me we've met some other time.
Fair woman, speak; my will must be obeyed.

ROSAURA: In bright Estrella's train a hapless maid.—
[Aside.] He must not know my name.

SIGISMUND: The sun, say rather, of that star whose flame,
However bright its blaze
Is but the pale reflection of thy rays.
In the fair land of flowers,
The realm of sweets that lies in odorous bowers,
The goddess rose I have seen
By right divine of beauty reign as queen.
I have seen where brightest shine
Gems, the assembled glories of the mine,
The brilliant throng elect the diamond king
For the superior splendour it doth fling.
Amid the halls of light,
Where the unresting star-crowds meet at night,
I have seen fair Hesper rise

And take the foremost place of all the skies.
And in that higher zone
Where the sun calls the planets round his throne,
I have seen, with sovereign sway,
That he presides the oracle of the day.
How, then, 'mid flowers of earth or stars of air,
'Mid stones or suns, if that which is most fair
The preference gains, canst thou
Before a lesser beauty bend and bow,
When thine own charms compose
Something more bright than sun, stone, star, or rose?

SCENE 8

CLOTALDO, who remains at the side-scene; SIGISMUND, CLARIN, and Servants.

CLOTALDO [aside]: To calm Prince Sigismund devolves on me,
Because 'twas I who reared him: — What do I see?

ROSAURA: Thy favour, sir, I prize;
To thee the silence of my speech replies;
For when the reason's dull, the mind depressed,
He best doth speak who keeps his silence best.

SIGISMUND: You must not leave me. Stay:
What! would you rob my senses of the ray
Your beauteous presence gave?

ROSAURA: That licence, from your Highness, I must crave.

SIGISMUND: The violent efforts that you make
Show that you do not ask the leave you take.

ROSAURA: I hope to take it, if it is not given.

SIGISMUND: You rouse my courtesy to rage, by heaven!—
In me resistance, as it were, distils
A cruel poison that my patience kills.

ROSAURA: Then though that poison may be strong,
The source of fury, violence, and wrong,
Potent thy patience to subdue,
It dare not the respect to me that's due.

SIGISMUND: As if to show I may,
You take the terror of your charms away.
For I am but too prone
To attempt the impossible; I to-day have thrown
Out of this window one who said, like you,
I dare not do the thing I said I would do.

Now just to show I can,
I may throw out your honour, as the man.

CLOTALDO [aside]: More obstinate doth he grow;
What course to take, O heavens! I do not know,
When wild desire, nay, crime,
Perils my honour for the second time.

ROSAURA: Not vainly, as I see,
This hapless land was warned thy tyranny
In fearful scandals would eventuate,
In wrath and wrong, in treachery, rage and hate.
But who in truth could claim
Aught from a man who is but a man in name,
Audacious, cruel, cold,
Inhuman, proud, tyrannical and bold,
'Mong beasts a wild beast born?—

SIGISMUND: It was to save me from such words of scorn
So courteously I spoke,
Thinking to bind you by a gentler yoke;
But if I am in aught what you have said,
Then, as God lives, I will be all you dread.
Ho, there! here leave us. See to it at your cost,
The door be locked; let no one in.

[Exeunt CLARIN and the attendants.]

ROSAURA: I'm lost!
Consider

SIGISMUND: I'm a despot, and 'tis vain
You strive to move me, or my will restrain.

CLOTALDO [aside]: Oh, what a moment! what an agony!
I will go forth and stop him though I die.
[He advances.]

My lord, consider, stay

SIGISMUND: A second time you dare to cross my way.

Old dotard: do you hold

My rage in such slight awe you are so bold?

What brought you hither? Speak!

CLOTALDO: The accents of this voice, however weak,

To tell you to restrain

Your passions, if as King you wish to reign,—

Not to be cruel, though you deem

Yourself the lord of all, for all may be a dream.

SIGISMUND: You but provoke my rage

By these old saws, the unwelcome light of age,

In killing you, at least I'll see

If 'tis a dream or truth.

[As he is about to draw his dagger CLOTALDO detains it, and throws himself on his knees.]

CLOTALDO: Sole hope for me

To save my life is thus to humbly kneel.

SIGISMUND: Take your audacious hand from off my steel.

CLOTALDO: Till some kind aid be sent,

Till some one come who may your rage prevent,

I will not loose my hold.

ROSAURA: Oh, Heaven!

SIGISMUND: I say,

Loose it, old dotard, grim and gaunt and gray,

Or by another death

[They struggle.]

I'll crush you in my arms while you have breath.

ROSAURA: Quick! quick! they slay

Clotaldo, help! oh, help!

[ASTOLFO enters at this moment, and CLOTALDO falls at his feet; he stands between them.]

ASTOLFO: This strange affray,
What can it mean, magnanimous Prince? would you
So bright a blade imbrue
In blood that age already doth congeal?
Back to its sheath return the shining steel.

SIGISMUND: Yes, when it is bathed red
In his base blood.

ASTOLFO: This threatened life hath fled
For sanctuary to my feet;
I must protect it in that poor retreat.

SIGISMUND: Protect your own life, then, for in this way,
Striking at it, I will the grudge repay
I owe you for the past.

ASTOLFO: I thus defend
My life; but majesty will not offend.
[ASTOLFO draws his sword and they fight.]

CLOTALDO: Oh! wound him not, my lord.

SCENE 9

BASILIOUS, ESTRELLA and Attendants, SIGISMUND, ASTOLFO, and CLOTALDO.

BASILIOUS: Swords flashing here!—

ESTRELLA [aside]: Astolfo is engaged: — Oh, pain severe!

BASILIOUS: What caused this quarrel? Speak, say why?

ASTOLFO: 'Tis nothing now, my lord, since thou art by.

SIGISMUND: 'Tis much, although thou now art by, my lord.
I wished to kill this old man with my sword.

BASILIOUS: Did you not then respect
These snow-white hairs?

CLOTALDO: My lord will recollect
They scarce deserved it, being mine.

SIGISMUND: Who dares
To ask of me do I respect white hairs?
Your own some day
My feet may trample in the public way,
For I have not as yet revenged my wrong,
Your treatment so unjust and my sad state so long.
[Exit.]

BASILIOUS: But ere that dawn doth break,
You must return to sleep, where when you wake
All that hath happened here will seem —
As is the glory of the world — a dream.

[Exeunt The King, CLOTALDO, and Attendants.]

SCENE 10

ESTRELLA and ASTOLFO

ASTOLFO: Ah, how rarely fate doth lie
 When it some misfortune threatens!¹
 Dubious when 'tis good that's promised,
 When 'tis evil, ah, too certain!—
 What a good astrologer
 Would he be, whose art foretelleth
 Only cruel things; for, doubtless,
 They would turn out true for ever!
 This in Sigismund and me
 Is exemplified, Estrella,
 Since between our separate fortunes
 Such a difference is presented.
 In his case had been foreseen
 Murders, miseries, and excesses,
 And in all they turned out true,
 Since all happened as expected.
 But in mine, here seeing, lady,
 Rays so rare and so resplendent
 That the sun is but their shadow.
 And even heaven a faint resemblance,
 When fate promised me good fortune,
 Trophies, praises, and all blessings,
 It spoke ill and it spoke well;
 For it was of both expressive,
 When it held out hopes of favour,
 But disdain alone effected.

ESTRELLA: Oh, I doubt not these fine speeches
 Are quite true, although intended
 Doubtless for that other lady,

¹ The vocal asonante in e—e here commences, and continues to the end of the Sixteenth Scene.

She whose portrait was suspended
From your neck, when first, Astolfo,
At this Court here you addressed me.
This being so, 'tis she alone
Who these compliments deserveth.
Go and pay them to herself,
For like bills that are protested
In the counting-house of love,
Are those flatteries and finesses
Which to other kings and ladies
Have been previously presented.

SCENE 11

ROSAURA, who remains at the side; ESTRELLA, and ASTOLFO:

ROSAURA [aside]: Well, thank God, my miseries
Have attained their lowest level,
Since by her who sees this sight
Nothing worse can be expected.

ASTOLFO: Then that portrait from my breast
Shall be taken, that thy perfect
Beauty there may reign instead.
For where bright Estrella enters
Shadow cannot be, or star
Where the sun; I go to fetch it.—
[Aside.] Pardon, beautiful Rosaura,
This offence; the absent never,
Man or woman, as this shows,
Faith of plighted vows remember.
[Exit.]

[ROSAURA comes forward.]

ROSAURA [aside]: Not a single word I heard,
Being afraid they might observe me.

ESTRELLA: Oh, Astrea!

ROSAURA: My good lady!

ESTRELLA: Nothing could have pleased me better
Than your timely coming here.
I have something confidential
To entrust you with.

ROSAURA: You honour
Far too much my humble service.

ESTRELLA: Brief as is the time, Astrea,
I have known you, you already
Of my heart possess the keys
'Tis for this and your own merits
That I venture to entrust you
With what oft I have attempted
From myself to hide.

ROSAURA: Your slave!

ESTRELLA: Then concisely to express it,
Know, Astolfo, my first cousin
('Tis enough that word to mention,
For some things may best be said
When not spoken but suggested),
Soon expects to wed with me,
If my fate so far relenteth,
As that by one single bliss
All past sorrows may be lessened.
I was troubled, the first day
That we met, to see suspended
From his neck a lady's portrait.
On the point I urged him gently,
He so courteous and polite
Went immediately to get it,
And will bring it here. From him
I should feel quite disconcerted
To receive it. You here stay,
And request him to present it
Unto you. I say no more.
You are beautiful and clever,
You must know too what is love.
[Exit.]

SCENE 12

ROSAURA: Would I knew it not! O help me
Now, kind heaven! for who could be
So prudential, so collected,
As to know how best to act
In so painful a dilemma?
Is there in the world a being,
Is there one a more inclement
Heaven has marked with more misfortunes,
Has 'mid more of sorrow centred?—
What, bewildered, shall I do,
When 'tis vain to be expected
That my reason can console me,
Or consoling be my helper?
From my earliest misfortune
Everything that I've attempted
Has been but one misery more —
Each the other's sad successor,
All inheritors of themselves.
Thus, the Phoenix they resemble,
One is from the other born,
New life springs where old life endeth,
And the young are warmly cradled
By the ashes of the elder.
Once a wise man called them cowards,
Seeing that misfortunes never
Have been seen to come alone.
But I call them brave, intrepid,
Who go straight unto their end,
And ne'er turn their backs in terror:—
By the man who brings them with him
Everything may be attempted,
Since he need on no occasion

Have the fear of being deserted.
 I may say so, since at all times,
 Whatsoever life presented,
 I, without them, never saw me,
 Nor will they grow weary ever,
 Till they see me in death's arms,
 Wounded by fate's final weapon.
 Woe is me! but what to-day
 Shall I do in this emergence?—
 If I tell my name, Clotaldo,
 Unto whom I am indebted
 For my very life and honour,
 May be with me much offended;
 Since he said my reparation
 Must in silence be expected.
 If I tell not to Astolfo
 Who I am, and he detects me
 How can I dissemble then?
 For although a feigned resemblance
 Eyes and voice and tongue might try,
 Ah, the truthful heart would tremble,
 And expose the lie. But wherefore
 Study what to do? 'Tis certain
 That however I may study,
 Think beforehand how to nerve me,
 When at last the occasion comes,
 Then alone what grief suggesteth
 I will do, for no one holds
 In his power the heart's distresses.
 And thus what to say or do
 As my soul cannot determine,
 Grief must only reach to-day
 Its last limit, pain be ended,
 And at last an exit make
 From the doubts that so perplex me

How to act: but until then

Help me, heaven, oh, deign to help me!

SCENE 13

ASTOLFO, with the portrait; and ROSAURA:

ASTOLFO: Here then is the portrait, Princess:
But, good God!

ROSAURA: Your Highness trembles;
What has startled, what surprised you?

ASTOLFO: Thee, Rosaura, to see present.

ROSAURA: I Rosaura? Oh, your Highness
Is deceived by some resemblance
Doubtless to some other lady;
I'm Astrea, one who merits
Not the glory of producing
An emotion so excessive.

ASTOLFO: Ah, Rosaura thou mayst feign,
But the soul bears no deception,
And though seeing thee as Astrea,
As Rosaura it must serve thee.

ROSAURA: I, not knowing what your Highness
Speaks of, am of course prevented
From replying aught but this,
That Estrella (the bright Hesper
Of this sphere) was pleased to order
That I here should wait expectant
For that portrait, which to me
She desires you give at present:
For some reason she prefers
It through me should be presented —
So Estrella — say, my star —
Wishes — so a fate relentless

Wills — in things that bring me loss —
So Estrella now expecteth.

ASTOLFO: Though such efforts you attempt,
Still how badly you dissemble,
My Rosaura! Tell the eyes
In their music to keep better
Concert with the voice, because
Any instrument whatever
Would be out of tune that sought
To combine and blend together
The true feelings of the heart
With the false words speech expresses.

ROSAURA: I wait only, as I said,
For the portrait.

ASTOLFO: Since you're bent then
To the end to keep this tone,
I adopt it, and dissemble.
Tell the Princess, then, Astrea,
That I so esteem her message,
That to send to her a copy
Seems to me so slight a present,
How so highly it is valued
By myself, I think it better
To present the original,
And you easily may present it,
Since, in point of fact, you bring it
With you in your own sweet person.

ROSAURA: When it has been undertaken
By a man, bold, brave, determined,
To obtain a certain object,
Though he get perhaps a better,
Still not bringing back the first
He returns despised: I beg, then.

That your highness give the portrait;
I, without it, dare not venture.

ASTOLFO: How, then, if I do not give it
Will you get it?

ROSAURA: I will get it
Thus, ungrateful.
[She attempts to snatch it.]

ASTOLFO: 'Tis in vain.

ROSAURA: It must ne'er be seen, no, never
In another woman's hands.

ASTOLFO: Thou art dreadful.

ROSAURA: Thou deceptive.

ASTOLFO: Oh, enough, Rosaura mine.

ROSAURA: Thine! Thou liest, base deserter.
[Both struggle for the portrait.]

SCENE 14

ESTRELLA, ROSAURA, and ASTOLFO:

ESTRELLA: Prince! Astrea! What is this?

ASTOLFO [aside]: Heavens! Estrella!

ROSAURA [aside]: Love befriend me;
Give me wit enough my portrait
To regain: — If thou would'st learn then
[To ESTRELLA:]
What the matter is, my lady,
I will tell thee.

ASTOLFO [aside to ROSAURA]: Would'st o'erwhelm me?

ROSAURA: You commanded me to wait here
For the Prince, and representing
You, to get from him a portrait.
I remained alone, expecting,
And, as often by one thought
Is some other thought suggested,
Seeing that you spoke of portraits,
I, reminded thus, remembered
That I had one of myself
In my sleeve: I wished to inspect it,
For a person quite alone
Even by trifles is diverted.
From my hand I let it fall
On the ground; the Prince, who entered
With the other lady's portrait,
Raised up mine, but so rebellious
Was he to what you had asked him
That, instead of his presenting
One, he wished to keep the other.
Since he mine will not surrender

To my prayers and my entreaties:
Angry at this ill-timed jesting
I endeavoured to regain it,
That which in his hand is held there
Is my portrait, if you see it;
You can judge of the resemblance.

ESTRELLA: Duke, at once, give up the portrait.
[She takes it from his hand.]

ASTOLFO: Princess

ESTRELLA: Well, the tints were blended
By no cruel hand, methinks.

ROSAURA: Is it like me?

ESTRELLA: Like! 'Tis perfect.

ROSAURA: Now demand from him the other.

ESTRELLA: Take your own, and leave our presence.

ROSAURA [aside]: I have got my portrait back;
Come what may I am contented.
[Exit.]

SCENE 15

ESTRELLA and ASTOLFO:

ESTRELLA: Give me now the other portrait;
For — although perhaps I never
May again address or see you —
I desire not, no, to let it
In your hands remain, if only
For my folly in requesting
You to give it.

ASTOLFO [aside]: How escape
From this singular dilemma?—
Though I wish, most beauteous Princess,
To obey thee and to serve thee,
Still I cannot give the portrait
Thou dost ask for, since

ESTRELLA: A wretched
And false-hearted lover art thou.
Now I wish it not presented,
So to give thee no pretext
For reminding me that ever
I had asked it at thy hands.
[Exit.]

ASTOLFO: Hear me! listen! wait! I remember! —
God, what has thou done, Rosaura?
Why, or wherefore, on what errand,
To destroy thyself and me
Hast thou Poland rashly entered?
[Exit.]

SCENE 16

PRISON OF THE PRINCE IN THE TOWER.

SIGISMUND, as at the commencement, clothed in skins, chained, and lying on the ground; CLOTALDO, Two Servants, and CLARIN:

CLOTALDO: Leave him here on the ground,
Where his day,— its pride being o'er,—
Finds its end too.

A SERVANT: As before
With the chain his feet are bound.

CLARIN: Never from that sleep profound
Wake, O Sigismund, or rise,
To behold with wondering eyes
All thy glorious life o'erthrown,
Like a shadow that hath flown,
Like a bright brief flame that dies!

CLOTALDO: One who can so wisely make
Such reflections on this case
Should have ample time and space,
Even for the Solon's sake,
[To the Servant.]
To discuss it; him you'll take
To this cell here, and keep bound.
[Pointing to an adjoining room]

CLARIN: But why me?

CLOTALDO: Because 'tis found
Safe, when clarions secrets know,
Clarions to lock up, that so
They may not have power to sound.

CLARIN: Did I, since you treat me thus,
Try to kill my father? No.
Did I from the window throw
That unlucky Icarus?
Is my drink somniferous?
Do I dream? Then why be pent?

CLOTALDO: 'Tis a clarion's punishment.

CLARIN: Then a horn of low degree,
Yea, a cornet I will be,
A safe, silent instrument.
[They take him away, and CLOTALDO remains alone.]

SCENE 17

BASILIOUS, disguised; CLOTALDO, and SIGISMUND, asleep.

BASILIOUS: Hark, Clotaldo!

CLOTALDO: My lord here?
Thus disguised, your majesty?

BASILIOUS: Foolish curiosity
Leads me in this lowly gear
To find out, ah, me! with fear,
How the sudden change he bore.

CLOTALDO: There behold him as before
In his miserable state.

BASILIOUS: Wretched Prince! unhappy fate!
Birth by baneful stars watched o'er!—
Go and wake him cautiously,
Now that strength and force lie chained
By the opiate he hath drained.

CLOTALDO: Muttering something restlessly,
See he lies.

BASILIOUS: Let's listen; he
May some few clear words repeat.

SIGISMUND: [Speaking in his sleep.]
Perfect Prince is he whose heat
Smites the tyrant where he stands,
Yes, Clotaldo dies by my hands,
Yes, my sire shall kiss my feet.

CLOTALDO: Death he threatens in his rage.

BASILIOUS: Outrage vile he doth intend.

CLOTALDO: He my life has sworn to end.

BASILIOUS: He has vowed to insult my age.

SIGISMUND [still sleeping]: On the mighty world's great stage,
 'Mid the admiring nations' cheer,
 Valour mine, that has no peer,
 Enter thou: the slave so shunned
 Now shall reign Prince Sigismund,
 And his sire he wrath shall fear.—
 [He awakes.]
 But, ah me! Where am I? Oh!—

BASILIOUS: Me I must not let him see.
 [To CLOTALDO]
 Listening I close by will be,
 What you have to do you know.
 [He retires.]

SIGISMUND: Can it possibly be so?
 Is the truth not what it seemed?
 Am I chained and unredeemed?
 Art not thou my lifelong tome,
 Dark old tower? Yes! What a doom!
 God! what wondrous things I've dreamed!

CLOTALDO: Now in this delusive play
 Must my special part be taken:—
 Is it not full time to waken?

SIGISMUND: Yes, to waken well it may.

CLOTALDO: Wilt thou sleep the livelong day?—
 Since we gazing from below
 Saw the eagle sailing slow,
 Soaring through the azure sphere,
 All the time thou waited here,
 Didst thou never waken?

SIGISMUND: No,
 Nor even now am I awake

Since such thoughts my memory fill,
 That it seems I'm dreaming still:
 Nor is this a great mistake;
 Since if dreams could phantoms make
 Things of actual substance seen,
 I things seen may phantoms deem.
 Thus a double harvest reaping,
 I can see when I am sleeping,
 And when waking I can dream.

CLOTALDO: What you may have dreamed of, say.

SIGISMUND: If I thought it only seemed,
 I would tell not what I dreamed,
 But what I beheld, I may.
 I awoke, and lo! I lay
 (Cruel and delusive thing!)
 In a bed whose covering,
 Bright with blooms from rosy bowers,
 Seemed a tapestry of flowers
 Woven by the hand of Spring.
 Then a crowd of nobles came,
 Who addressed me by the name
 Of their prince, presenting me
 Gems and robes, on bended knee.
 Calm soon left me, and my frame
 Thrilled with joy to hear thee tell
 Of the fate that me befell,
 For though now in this dark den,
 I was Prince of Poland then.

CLOTALDO: Doubtless you repaid me well?

SIGISMUND: No, not well: for, calling thee
 Traitor vile, in furious strife
 Twice I strove to take thy life.

CLOTALDO: But why all this rage 'gainst me?

SIGISMUND: I was master, and would be
Well revenged on foe and friend.
Love one woman could defend
That, at least, for truth I deem,
All else ended like a dream,
THAT alone can never end.
[The King withdraws.]

CLOTALDO [aside]: From his place the King hath gone,
Touched by his pathetic words:—
[Aloud]
Speaking of the king of birds
Soaring to ascend his throne,
Thou didst fancy one thine own;
But in dreams, however bright,
Thou shouldst still have kept in sight
How for years I tended thee,
For 'twere well, whoe'er we be,
Even in dreams to do what's right.
[Exit.]

SCENE 18

SIGISMUND: That is true: then let's restrain
This wild rage, this fierce condition
Of the mind, this proud ambition,
Should we ever dream again:
And we'll do so, since 'tis plain,
In this world's uncertain gleam,
That to live is but to dream:
Man dreams what he is, and wakes
Only when upon him breaks
Death's mysterious morning beam.
The king dreams he is a king,
And in this delusive way
Lives and rules with sovereign sway;
All the cheers that round him ring,
Born of air, on air take wing.
And in ashes (mournful fate!)
Death dissolves his pride and state:
Who would wish a crown to take,
Seeing that he must awake
In the dream beyond death's gate?
And the rich man dreams of gold,
Gilding cares it scarce conceals,
And the poor man dreams he feels
Want and misery and cold.
Dreams he too who rank would hold,
Dreams who bears toil's rough-ribbed hands,
Dreams who wrong for wrong demands,
And in fine, throughout the earth,
All men dream, whate'er their birth,
And yet no one understands.
'Tis a dream that I in sadness
Here am bound, the scorn of fate;

'Twas a dream that once a state
I enjoyed of light and gladness.
What is life? 'Tis but a madness.
What is life? A thing that seems,
A mirage that falsely gleams,
Phantom joy, delusive rest,
Since is life a dream at best,
And even dreams themselves are dreams.

ACT THE THIRD

Within the tower.

SCENE 1

CLARIN: In a strange enchanted tower,
 I, for what I know, am prisoned;¹
 How would ignorance be punished,
 If for knowledge they would kill me?
 What a thing to die of hunger,
 For a man who loves good living!
 I compassionate myself;
 All will say: "I well believe it";
 And it well may be believed,
 Because silence is a virtue
 Incompatible with my name
 Clarin, which of course forbids it.
 In this place my sole companions,
 It may safely be predicted,
 Are the spiders and the mice:
 What a pleasant nest of linnets!—
 Owing to this last night's dream,
 My poor head I feel quite dizzy
 From a thousand clarionets,
 Shawms, and seraphines and cymbals,
 Crucifixes and processions,
 Flagellants who so well whipped them,
 That as up and down they went,
 Some even fainted as they witnessed
 How the blood ran down the others.
 I, if I the truth may whisper,
 Simply fainted from not eating,
 For I see me in this prison
 All day wondering how this Poland
 Such a 'Hungary' look exhibits,
 All night reading in the 'Fasti'

¹ The asonante to the end of Scene IV. is in i—e, or their vocal equivalents.

By some half-starved poet written.²

In the calendar of saints,

If a new one is admitted,

Then St. Secret be my patron,

For I fast upon his vigil;

Though it must be owned I suffer

Justly for the fault committed,

Since a servant to be silent

Is a sacrilege most sinful.

[A sound of drums and trumpets, with voices within.]

² These four lines are a paraphrase of the original. Clarin's jokes are different, and not much better. He says he spends his days studying philosophy in the works of 'Nicomedes' (or 'Not-eating'), and his nights perusing the decrees of the 'Nicene' Council (Concilio 'Niceno', the Council of 'No-Supper').

SCENE 2

Soldiers and CLARIN:

FIRST SOLDIER [within]: He is here within this tower.
Dash the door from off its hinges;
Enter all

CLARIN: Good God! 'tis certain
That 'tis me they seek so briskly,
Since they say that I am here.
What can they require?

FIRST SOLDIER [within]: Go in there.
[Several Soldiers enter.]

SECOND SOLDIER: Here he is.

CLARIN: He's not.

ALL THE SOLDIERS: Great lord!

CLARIN [aside]: Are the fellows mad or tipsy?

FIRST SOLDIER: Thou art our own Prince, and we Will not have, and won't admit of,
Any but our natural Prince;
We no foreign Prince here wish for.
Let us kneel and kiss thy feet.

THE SOLDIERS: Live, long live our best of Princes!

CLARIN [aside]: 'Gad! the affair grows rather serious.
Is it usual in this kingdom
To take some one out each day,
Make him Prince, and then remit him
To this tower? It must be so,
Since each day that sight I witness.
I must therefore play my part.

SOLDIERS: Thy feet give us!

CLARIN: I can't give them,
As I want them for myself.
For a prince to be a cripple
Would be rather a defect.

SECOND SOLDIER: We have all conveyed our wishes
To your father; we have told him
You alone shall be our Prince here,
Not the Duke.

CLARIN: And were you guilty
'Gainst my sire, of disrespect?

FIRST SOLDIER: 'Twas the loyalty of our spirit.

CLARIN: If 'twas loyalty, I forgive you.

SECOND SOLDIER: Come, regain thy lost dominion.
Long live Sigismund!

ALL: Live the Prince.

CLARIN [aside]: Say they Sigismund? Good. Admitted.
Sigismund must be the name
Given to all pretended princes.

SCENE 3

SIGISMUND, CLARIN, and Soldiers.

SIGISMUND: Who has named here Sigismund?

CLARIN [aside]: Ah, I'm but an addled prince, then!

FIRST SOLDIER: Who is Sigismund?

SIGISMUND: Who? I.

SECOND SOLDIER [to CLARIN]: How, then, didst thou, bold and silly,
Dare to make thee Sigismund?

CLARIN: I a Sigismund? Thou fibbest;
It was you yourselves that thus
Sigismundized me and prined me:
All the silliness and the boldness
Have been by yourselves committed.

FIRST SOLDIER: Great and brave Prince Sigismund
(For thy bearing doth convince us
Thou art he, although on faith
We proclaim thee as our prince here).
King Basilius, thy father,
Fearful of the Heavens fulfilling
A prediction, which declared
He would see himself submitted
At thy victor feet, attempts
To deprive thee of thy birthright,
And to give it to Astolfo,
Muscovy's duke. For this his missives
Summoned all his court: the people
Understanding, by some instinct,
That they had a natural king,
Did not wish a foreign princeling
To rule o'er them. And 'tis thus,

That the fate for thee predicted
 Treating with a noble scorn,
 They have sought thee where imprisoned
 Thou dost live, that issuing forth,
 By their powerful arms assisted,
 From this tower, thy crown and sceptre
 Thou shouldst thus regain, and quit them
 Of a stranger and a tyrant.
 Forth! then; for among these cliffs here
 There is now a numerous army,
 Formed of soldiers and banditti,
 That invoke thee: freedom waits thee;
 To the thousand voices listen.

[Voices within.] Long, long live Prince Sigismund!

SIGISMUND: Once again, O Heaven! wouldst wish me
 Once again to dream of greatness
 Which may vanish in an instant?
 Once again to see the glories,
 That a royal throne encircle,
 Die in darkness and in gloom,
 Like a flame the winds extinguish?
 Once again by sad experience
 To be taught the dangerous limits
 Human power may overleap,
 At its birth and while it liveth?
 No, it must not, must not be:—
 See me now one more submitted
 To my fate; and since I know
 Life is but a dream, a vision,
 Hence, ye phantoms, that assume
 To my darkened sense the figure
 And the voice of life — although
 Neither voice nor form is in them.
 I no longer now desire

A feigned majesty, a fictitious
 And fantastic pomp — illusions
 Which the slightest breath that ripples
 The calm ether can destroy,
 Even as in the early spring-time,
 When the flowering almond tree
 Unadvisedly exhibits
 All its fleeting bloom of flowers,
 The first blast their freshness withers,
 And the ornament and grace
 Of its rosy locks disfigures.
 Now I know ye — know ye all,
 And I know the same false glimmer
 Cheats the eyes of all who sleep.
 Me false shows no more bewilder;
 Disabused, I now know well
 Life is but a dream — a vision.

SECOND SOLDIER: If thou thinkest we deceive thee,
 Turn thine eyes to those proud cliffs here,
 See the crowds that wait there, willing,
 Eager to obey thee.

SIGISMUND: Yet
 Just as clearly and distinctly,
 I have seen another time
 The same things that now I witness,
 And 'twas but a dream.

SECOND SOLDIER: At all times
 Great events, my lord, bring with them
 Their own omens; and thy dream
 But the actual fact prefigured.

SIGISMUND: You say well, it was an omen;
 But supposing the bright vision
 Even were true, since life is short,

Let us dream, my soul a little,
 Once again, remembering now
 With all forethought and prevision
 That we must once more awake
 At the better time not distant;
 That being known, the undeceiving,
 When it comes, will be less bitter;
 For it takes the sting from evil
 To anticipate its visit.
 And with this conviction, too,
 Even its certainty admitting,
 That all power being only lent
 Must return unto the Giver,
 Let us boldly then dare all.—
 For the loyalty you exhibit,
 Thanks, my lieges. See in me
 One who will this land deliver
 From a stranger's alien yoke.
 Sound to arms; you soon shall witness
 What my valour can effect.
 'Gainst my father I have lifted
 Hostile arms, to see if Heaven
 Has of me the truth predicted.
 At my feet I am to see him . . .
 But if I, from dreams delivered,
 [Aside.
 Wake ere then, and nothing happens,
 Silence now were more befitting.

ALL: Long live Sigismund, our king!

SCENE 4

CLOTALDO, SIGISMUND, CLARIN, and Soldiers.

CLOTALDO: Ha! what tumult, Heavens! has risen?

SIGISMUND: Well, CLOTALDO:

CLOTALDO: Sire On me

[Aside.

Will his wrath now fall.

CLARIN [aside]: He'll fling him
Headlong down the steep, I'll bet.

[Exit.

CLOTALDO: At your royal feet submitted
I know how to die.

SIGISMUND: My father,
Rise, I pray, from that position,
Since to you, my guide and polestar,
Are my future acts committed;
All my past life owes you much
For your careful supervision.
Come, embrace me.

CLOTALDO: What do you say?

SIGISMUND: That I dream, and that my wishes
Are to do what's right, since we
Even in dreams should do what's fitting.

CLOTALDO: Then, my prince, if you adopt
Acting rightly as your symbol,
You will pardon me for asking,
So to act, that you permit me.
No advice and no assistance
Can I give against my king.

Better that my lord should kill me
At his feet here.

SIGISMUND: Oh, ungrateful!
Villain! wretch! [Aside.] But Heavens! 'tis fitter
I restrain myself, not knowing
But all this may be a vision.—
The fidelity I envy
Must be honoured and admitted.
Go and serve your lord, the king.
Where the battle rages thickest
We shall meet. — To arms, my friends!

CLOTALDO: Thanks, most generous of princes.
[Exit.]

SIGISMUND: Fortune, we go forth to reign;
Wake me not if this is vision,
Let me sleep not if 'tis true.
But whichever of them is it,
To act right is what imports me.
If 'tis true, because it is so;
If 'tis not, that when I waken
Friends may welcome and forgive me.
[Exeunt all, drums beating.]

SCENE 5

HALL IN THE ROYAL PALACE.

BASILIOUS and ASTOLFO:

BASILIOUS: Who can expect, Astolfo, to restrain
 An untamed steed that wildly turns to flee?
 Who can the current of a stream detain,
 That swollen with pride sweeps down to seek the sea?
 Who can prevent from tumbling to the plain
 Some mighty peak the lightning's flash sets free?
 Yet each were easier in its separate way,
 Than the rude mob's insensate rage to stay.
 The several bands that throng each green retreat
 This truth proclaim by their parted cries;
 Astolfo here the echoing notes repeat,
 While there 'tis Sigismund that rends the skies
 The place where late the land was glad to greet
 The choice we made, a second venture tries;
 And soon will be, as Horror o'er it leans,
 The fatal theatre of tragic scenes.

ASTOLFO: My lord, let all this joy suspended be,
 These plaudits cease, and to another day
 Defer the rapture thou hast promised me;
 For if this Poland (which I hope to sway)
 Resists to-day my right of sovereignty,
 'Tis that by merit I should win my way.
 Give me a steed; to stem this wild revolt
 My pride shall be the flash that bears the bolt.
 [Exit.]

BASILIOUS: Slight help there is for what is fixed by fate,
 And much of danger to foresee the blow;
 If it must fall, defence is then too late,

And he who most forestalls doth most foreknow.
Hard law! Stern rule! Dire fact to contemplate!
That he who thinks to fly doth nearer go.
Thus by the very means that I employed,
My country and myself I have destroyed.

SCENE 6

ESTRELLA and BASILIOUS:

ESTRELLA: If, mighty lord, thy presence, which it braves,
The tumult of the crowd cannot defeat —
The frenzy of the multitude that raves
In hostile bands through every square and street,—
Thou'lt see thy kingdom swim in crimson waves,
A purple sea of blood shall round it beat;
For even already in its dismal doom
All is disaster, tragedy, and gloom.
Such is thy kingdom's ruin, so severe
The hard and bloody trial fate hath sent,
Dazed is the eye, and terrified the ear;
Dark grows the sun, and every wind is spent;
Each stone a mournful obelisk doth rear,
And every flower erects a monument;
A grave seems every house, whence life is gone,—
Each soldier is a living skeleton.

SCENE 7

CLOTALDO, BASILIUS, and ESTRELLA:

CLOTALDO: Thanks be to God, I reach thy feet alive.

BASILIOUS: What news of Sigismund, Clotaldo, say?

CLOTALDO: The crowd, whom frenzy and blind impulse drive,
Into the tower resistless burst their way,
Released the Prince, who seeing thus revive
The honour he had tasted for one day,
Looked brave, declaring, in a haughty tone,
The truth at last that heaven must now make known.

BASILIOUS: Give me a horse! In person forth I'll ride
To check the pride of this ungrateful son.
Where Science erred let now the sword decide;
By my own valour shall my throne be won!
[Exit.]

ESTRELLA: Let me the glory of the fight divide —
A twinkling star beside that royal sun —
Bellona matched with Mars: for I would dare
To scale even heaven to rival Pallas there.

[Exit, and they sound to arms.]

SCENE 8

ROSAURA, who detains CLOTALDO:

ROSAURA: Though the trumpets from afar
 Echo in thy valorous breast,
 Hear me, list to my request,
 For I know that all is war.
 Well thou knowest that I came
 Poor to Poland, sad, dejected;
 And that graciously protected,
 Thou thy pity let me claim.
 It was thy command, ah, me!
 I should live here thus disguised,
 Striving, as thy words advised
 (Hiding all my jealousy),
 To avoid Astolfo's sight;
 But he saw me, and though seeing,
 With Estrella, he — false being!—
 Converse holds this very night
 In a garden bower. The key
 I have taken, and will show
 Where, by entering, with a blow
 Thou canst end my misery.
 Thus, then, daring, bold, and strong,
 Thou my honour wilt restore;
 Strike, and hesitate no more,
 Let his death revenge my wrong.

CLOTALDO: It is true, my inclination
 Since thou first wert seen by me,
 Was to strive and do for thee
 (Be thy tears my attestation)
 All my life could do to serve thee.
 What I first was forced to press,

Was that thou should'st change thy dress;
 Les if chancing to observe thee
 Masquerading like a page,
 By appearances so strong
 Led astray, the Duke might wrong
 By a thought thy sex and age.
 Meanwhile various projects held me
 In suspense, oft pondering o'er
 How thy honour to restore;
 Though (thy honour so compelled me)
 I Astolfo's life should take —
 Wild design that soon took wing —
 Yet, as he was not my king,
 It no terror could awake.
 I his death was seeking, when
 Sigismund with vengeful aim
 Sought for mine; Astolfo came,
 And despising what most men
 Would a desperate peril deem,
 Stood in my defence; his bearing,
 Nigh to rashness in its daring,
 Showed a valour most extreme.
 How then, think, could I, whose breath
 Is his gift, in murderous strife,
 For his giving me my life,
 Strive in turn to give him death?
 And thus, grateful, yet aggrieved,
 By two opposite feelings driven,
 Seeing it to thee have given,
 And from him have it received,
 Doubting this, and that believing,
 Half revenging, half forgiving,
 If to thee I'm drawn by giving,
 I to him am by receiving;
 Thus bewildered and beset,

Vainly seeks my love a way,
 Since I have a debt to pay,
 Where I must exact a debt

ROSAURA: It is settled, I believe,
 As all men of spirit know,
 That 'tis glorious to bestow,
 But a meanness to receive.
 Well, admitting this to be,
 Then thy thanks should not be his,
 Even supposing that he is
 One who gave thy life to thee;
 As the gift of life was thine,
 And from him the taking came,
 In this case the act was shame,
 And a glorious act in mine.
 Thus by him thou art aggrieved,
 And by me even complimented,
 Since to me thou hast presented
 What from him thou hast received:
 Then all hesitation leaving,
 Thou to guard my fame shouldst fly,
 Since my honour is as high
 As is giving to receiving.

CLOTALDO: Thou it seems a generous fever
 In a noble heart to give,
 Still an equal fire may live
 In the heart of the receiver.
 Heartlessness is something hateful,
 I would boast a liberal name;
 Thus I put my highest claim
 In the fact of being grateful.
 Then to me that title leave,—
 Gentle birth breeds gentleness;

For the honour is no less
To bestow than to receive.

ROSAURA: I received my life from thee,
But for thee I now were dead;
Still it was thyself that said
No insulted life could be Called a life: on that I stand;
Nought have I received from thee,
For the life no life could be
That was given me by thy hand.
But if thou wouldst first be just
Ere being generous in this way
(As I heard thyself once say),
Thou will give me life I trust,
Which thou hast not yet; and thus
Giving will enhance thee more,
For if liberal before,
Thou wilt then be generous.

CLOTALDO: Conquered by thy argument,
Liberal I first will be.
I, Rosaura, will to thee
All my property present;
In a convent live; by me
Has the plan been weighed some time,
For escaping from a crime
Thou wilt there find sanctuary;
For so many ills present them
Through the land on every side,
That being nobly born, my pride
Is to strive and not augment them.
By the choice that I have made,
Loyal to the land I'll be,
I am liberal with thee,
And Astolfo's debt is paid;

Choose then, nay, let honour, rather,
Choose for thee, and for us two,
For, by Heaven! I could not do
More for thee were I thy father!—

ROSAURA: Were that supposition true,
I might strive and bear this blow;
But not being my father, no.

CLOTALDO: What then dost thou mean to do?

ROSAURA: Kill the Duke.

CLOTALDO: A gentle dame,
Who no father's name doth know,
Can she so much valour show?

ROSAURA: Yes.

CLOTALDO: What drives thee on?

ROSAURA: My fame.

CLOTALDO: Think that in the Duke thou'lt see

ROSAURA: Honour all my wrath doth rouse.

CLOTALDO: Soon thy king — Estrella's spouse.

ROSAURA: No, by Heaven! it must not be.

CLOTALDO: It is madness.

ROSAURA: Yes, I see it.

CLOTALDO: Conquer it.

ROSAURA: I can't o'erthrow it.

CLOTALDO: It will cost thee

ROSAURA: Yes, I know it.

CLOTALDO: Life and honour.

ROSAURA: Well, so be it.

CLOTALDO: What wouldst have?

ROSAURA: My death.

CLOTALDO: Take care!
It is spite.

ROSAURA: 'Tis honour's cure.

CLOTALDO: 'Tis wild fire.

ROSAURA: That will endure.

CLOTALDO: It is frenzy.

ROSAURA: Rage, despair.

CLOTALDO: Can there then be nothing done
This blind rage to let pass by?

ROSAURA: No.

CLOTALDO: And who will help thee?

ROSAURA: I.

CLOTALDO: Is there then no remedy?

ROSAURA: None.

CLOTALDO: Think of other means whereby

ROSAURA: Other means would seal my fate.
[Exit.]

CLOTALDO: If 'tis so, then, daughter, wait,
For together we shall die.
[Exit.]

SCENE 9

THE OPEN PLAIN.

SIGISMUND, clothed in skins: Soldiers marching. CLARIN:

[Drums are heard.]

SIGISMUND: If Rome could see me on this day
Amid the triumphs of its early sway,
Oh, with what strange delight
It would have seen so singular a sight,
Its mighty armies led
By one who was a savage wild beast bred,
Whose courage soars so high,
That even an easy conquest seems the sky!
But let us lower our flight,
My spirit; 'tis not thus we should invite
This doubtful dream to stay,
Lest when I wake and it has past away,
I learn to my sad cost,
A moment given, 'twas in a moment lost;
Determined not to abuse it,
The less will be my sorrow should I lose it.

[A trumpet sounds.]

CLARIN: Upon a rapid steed,
(Excuse my painting it; I can't indeed Resist the inspiration),
Which seems a moving mass of all creation,
Its body being the earth,
The fire the soul that in its heart hath birth,
Its foam the sea, its panting breath the air,
Chaos confused at which I stand and stare,
Since in its soul, foam, body, breath, to me
It is a monster made of fire, earth, air, and sea;

Its colour dapple grey,
Speckled its skin, and flecked, as well it may,
By the impatient spur its flank that dyes,
For lo! it doth not run, the meteor flies;
As borne upon the wind,
A beauteous woman seeks thee.

SIGISMUND: I'm struck blind!

CLARIN: Good God, it is Rosaura, oh, the pain!
[Retires.]

SIGISMUND: Heaven has restored her to my sight again.

SCENE 10

ROSAURA, in a light corselet, with sword and dagger;
SIGISMUND, and Soldiers.

ROSAURA: Noble-hearted Sigismund!
 Thou whose hidden light heroic
 Issues from its night of shadows
 To the great deeds of its morning;
 And as heaven's sublimest planet
 From the white arms of Aurora
 Back restores their beauteous colour
 To the wild flowers and the roses,
 And upon the seas and mountains,
 When endiademmed with glory,
 Scatters light, diffuses splendour,
 Braids their foam, their hair makes golden;
 Thus thou dawnest on the world
 Bright auspicious sun of Poland,
 Who will help a hapless woman,
 She who at thy feet doth throw her,
 Help her, since she is unhappy,
 And a woman; two good motives
 Quite enough to move a man
 Who of valour so doth boast him,
 Though even one would be sufficient,
 Though even one would be all potent.
 Thou hast seen me thrice already,
 Thrice thou hast not truly known me,
 For each time by different dresses
 Was I strangely metamorphosed.
 First I seemed to thee a man,
 When within thy sad and sombre
 Cell thou sawest me, when thy life
 Wiled from me mine own misfortunes.

As a woman next thou sawest me,
 Where the splendours of thy throne-room
 Vanished like a fleeting vision,
 Vain, phantasmal and abortive.
 The third time is now, when being
 Something monstrous and abnormal,
 In a woman's dress thou see'st me
 With a warrior's arms adorned.
 And to pity and compassion
 That thou may'st be moved more strongly,
 Listen to the sad succession
 Of my tragical misfortunes.
 In the Court of Muscovy
 I was born of a noble mother,
 Who indeed must have been fair
 Since unhappiness was her portion.
 Fond and too persuading eyes
 Fixed on her, a traitor lover,
 Whom, not knowing, I don't name,
 Though mine own worth hath informed me
 What was his: for being his image,
 I sometimes regret that fortune
 Made me not a pagan born,
 That I might, in my wild folly,
 Think he must have been some god,
 Such as he was, who in golden
 Shower wooed Danae, or as swan
 Leda loved, as bull, Europa.
 When I thought to lengthen out,
 Citing these perfidious stories,
 My discourse, I find already
 That I have succinctly told thee
 How my mother, being persuaded
 By the flatteries of love's homage,
 Was as fair as any fair,

And unfortunate as all are.
 That ridiculous excuse
 Of a plighted husband's promise
 So misled her, that even yet
 the remembrance brings her sorrow.
 For that traitor, that Aeneas
 Flying from his Troy, forgot there,
 Or left after him his sword.
 By this sheath its blade is covered,
 But it shall be naked drawn
 Ere this history is over.
 From this loosely fastened know
 Which binds nothing, which ties nothing,
 Call it marriage, call it crime,
 Names its nature cannot alter,
 I was born, a perfect image,
 A true copy of my mother,
 In her loveliness, ah, no!
 In her miseries and misfortunes.
 Therefore there is little need
 To say how the hapless daughter,
 Heiress of such scant good luck,
 Had her own peculiar portion.
 All that I will say to thee
 Of myself is, that the robber
 Of the trophies of my fame,
 Of the sweet spoils of my honour,
 Is Astolfo Ah! to name him
 Stirs and rouses up the choler
 Of the heart, a fitting effort
 When an enemy's name is spoken,—
 Yes, Astolfo was that traitor,
 Who, forgetful of his promise
 (For when love has passed away,
 Even its memory is forgotten),

Came to Poland, hither called.
 From so sweet so proud a conquest,
 To be married to Estrella,
 Of my setting sun the torch light.
 Who'll believe that when one star
 Oft unites two happy lovers,
 Now one star, Estrella, comes
 Two to tear from one another?
 I offended, I deceived,
 Sad remained, remained astonished,
 Mad, half dead, remained myself;
 That's to say, in so much torment,
 That my heart was like a Babel
 Of confusion, hell, and horror:
 I resolving to be mute,
 (For there are some pains and sorrows
 That by feelings are expressed,
 Better than when words are spoken).
 I by silence spoke my pain,
 Till one day being with my mother
 Violante, she (oh, heavens!)
 Burst their prison; like a torrent
 Forth they rushed from out my breast,
 Streaming wildly o'er each other.
 No embarrassment it gave me
 To relate them, for the knowing
 That the person we confide to
 A like weakness must acknowledge
 Gives as 'twere to our confusion
 A sweet soothing and a solace,
 For at times a bad example
 Has its use. In fine, my sorrows
 She with pity heard, relating
 Even her own grief to console me:
 When he has himself been guilty

With what ease the judge condoneth!
 Knowing from her own experience
 That 'twas idle, to slow-moving
 Leisure, to swift-fleeting time,
 To intrust one's injured honour.
 She could not advise me better,
 As the cure of my misfortunes,
 Than to follow and compel him
 By prodigious acts of boldness
 To repay my honour's debt:
 And that such attempt might cost me
 Less, my fortune wished that I
 Should a man's strange dress put on me.
 She took down an ancient sword,
 Which is this I bear: the moment
 Now draws nigh I must unsheath it,
 Since to her I gave that promise,
 When confiding in its marks,
 Thus she said, "Depart to Poland,
 And so manage that this steel
 Shall be seen by the chief nobles
 Of that land, for I have hope
 That there may be one among them
 Who may prove to thee a friend,
 An adviser and consoler."
 Well, in Poland I arrived;
 It is useless to inform thee
 What thou knowest already, how
 A wild steed resistless bore me
 To thy cavernd tower, wherein
 Thou with wonder didst behold me.
 Let us pass too, how Clotaldo
 Passionately my cause supported,
 How he asked my life of the king
 Who to him that boon accorded;

How discovering who I am
 He persuaded me my proper
 Dress to assume, and on Estrella
 To attend as maid of honour,
 So to thwart Astolfo's love
 And prevent the marriage contract.
 Let us, too, pass by, that here
 thou didst once again behold me
 In a woman's dress, my form
 Waking thus a twofold wonder,
 And approach the time, Clotaldo
 Being convinced it was important
 That should wed and reign together
 Fair Estrella and Astolfo,
 'Gainst my honour, me advised
 To forego my rightful project.
 But, O valiant Sigismund,
 Seeing that the moment cometh
 For thy vengeance, since heaven wishes
 Thee to-day to burst the portals
 Of thy narrow rustic cell,
 Where so long immured, thy body
 Was to feeling a wild beast,
 Was to sufferance what the rock is,
 And that 'gainst thy sire and country
 Thou hast gallantly revolted,
 And ta'en arms, I come to assist thee,
 Intermingling the bright corselet
 Of Minerva with the trappings
 Of Diana, thus enrobing
 Silken stuff and shining steel
 In a rare but rich adornment.
 On, then, on, undaunted champion!
 To us both it is important
 To prevent and bring to nought

This engagement and betrothal;
 First to me, that he, my husband,
 Should not falsely wed another,
 Then to thee, that their two staffs
 Being united, their joined forces
 Should with overwhelming power
 Leave our doubtful victory hopeless.

Woman, I come here to urge thee
 To repair my injured honour,
 And as man I come to rouse thee
 Crown and sceptre to recover.

Woman I would wake thy pity
 Since here at thy feet I throw me,
 And as man, my sword and person
 In thy service I devote thee.

But remember, if to-day
 As a woman thou should'st court me,
 I, as man, will give thee death
 In the laudable upholding,
 Of my honour, since I am
 In this strife of love, this contest,
 Woman my complaints to tell thee,
 And a man to guard my honour.

SIGISMUND [aside]: Heavens! if it is true I dream,
 Memory then suspend thy office,
 For 'tis vain to hope remembrance
 Could retain so many objects.
 Help me, God! or teach me how
 All these numerous doubts to conquer,
 Or to cease to think of any!—
 Whoe'er tried such painful problems?
 If 'twas but a dream, my grandeur,
 How then is it, at this moment,
 That this woman can refer me
 To some facts that are notorious?

Then 'twas truth, and not a dream;
 But if it was truth (another
 And no less confusion,) how
 Can my life be called in proper
 Speech a dream? So like to dreams
 Are then all the world's chief glories,
 That the true are oft rejected
 As the false, the false too often
 Are mistaken for the true?
 Is there then 'twixt one and the other
 Such slight difference, that a question
 May arise at any moment
 Which is true or which is false?
 Are the original and the copy
 So alike, that which is which
 Oft the doubtful mind must ponder?
 If 'tis so, and if must vanish,
 As the shades of night at morning,
 All of majesty and power,
 All of grandeur and of glory,
 Let us learn at least to turn
 To our profit the brief moment
 That is given us, since our joy
 Lasteth while our dream lasts only.
 In my power Rosaura stands,
 Thou, my heart, her charms adoreth,
 Let us seize then the occasion;
 Let love trample in its boldness
 All the laws on which relying
 She here at my feet has thrown her.
 'Tis a dream; and since 'tis so,
 Let us dream of joys, the sorrows
 Will come soon enough hereafter.
 But with mine own words just spoken,
 Let me now confute myself!

If it is a dream that mocks me,
 Who for human vanities
 Would forego celestial glory?
 What past bliss is not a dream?
 Who has had his happy fortunes
 Who hath said not to himself
 As his memory ran o'er them,
 "All I saw, beyond a doubt
 Was a dream." If this exposeth
 My delusion, if I know
 That desire is but the glowing
 Of a flame that turns to ashes
 At the softest wind that bloweth;
 Let us seek then the eternal,
 The true fame that ne'er reposeth,
 Where the bliss is not a dream,
 Nor the crown a fleeting glory.
 Without honour is ROSAURA.
 But it is a prince's province
 To give honour, not to take it:
 Then, by Heaven! it is her honour
 That for her I must win back,
 Ere this kingdom I can conquer.
 Let us fly then this temptation.
 [To the Soldiers.]
 'Tis too strong: To arms! March onward!
 For to-day I must give battle,
 Ere descending night, the golden
 Sunbeams of expiring day
 Buries in the dark green ocean.

ROSAURA: Dost thou thus, my lord, withdraw thee?
 What! without a word being spoken?
 Does my pain deserve no pity?
 Does my grief so little move thee?
 Can it be, my lord, thou wilt not

Deign to hear, to look upon me?
Dost thou even avert thy face?

SIGISMUND: Ah, Rosaura, 'tis thy honour
That requires this harshness now,
If my pity I would show thee.
Yes, my voice does not respond,
'Tis my honour that respondeth;
True I speak not, for I wish
That my actions should speak for me;
Thee I do not look on, no,
For, alas! it is of moment,
That he must not see thy beauty
Who is pledged to see thy honour.
[Exit followed by the Soldiers.]

ROSAURA: What enigmas, O ye skies!
After many a sigh and tear,
Thus in doubt to leave me here
With equivocal replies!

SCENE 11

CLARIN and ROSAURA:

CLARIN: Madam, is it visiting hour?

ROSAURA: Welcome, Clarin, where have you been?

CLARIN: Only four stout walls between
In an old enchanted tower;
Death was on the cards for me,
But amid the sudden strife
Ere the last trump came, my life
Won the trick and I got free.
I ne'er hoped to sound again.

ROSAURA: Why?

CLARIN: Because alone I know
Who you are: And this being so,
Learn, Clotaldo is This strain
Puts me out.

[Drums are heard.]

ROSAURA: What can it be?

CLARIN: From the citadel at hand,
Leagured round, an armed band
As to certain victory
Sallies forth with flags unfurled.

ROSAURA: 'Gainst Prince Sigismund! and I,
Coward that I am, not by
To surprise and awe the world,
When with so much cruelty
Each on each the two hosts spring!
[Exit.]

SCENE 12

CLARIN; and Soldiers within.

Voices of some: Live, long live our victor King!

Voices of others: Live, long live our liberty!

CLARIN: Live, long live the two, I say!

Me it matters not a pin,

Which doth lose or which doth win,

If I can keep out of the way!—

So aside here I will go,

Acting like a prudent hero,

Even as the Emperor Nero

Took things coolly long ago.

Or if care I cannot shun,

Let it 'bout mine ownself be;

Yes, here hidden I can see

All the fighting and the fun;

What a cosy place I spy

Mid the rock there! so secure,

Death can't find me out I'm sure,

Then a fig for death I say!

[Conceals himself, drums beat and the sound of arms is heard.]

SCENE 13

BASILIOUS, CLOTALDO, ASTOLFO, flying. — CLARIN concealed.

BASILIOUS: Hapless king! disastrous reign!
Outraged father! guilty son!

CLOTALDO: See thy vanquished forces run
In a panic o'er the plain!

ASTOLFO: And the rebel conqueror's stay,
Proud, defiant.

BASILIOUS: 'Tis decreed
Those are loyal who succeed,
Rebels those who lose the day.
Let us then, Clotaldo, flee,
Since the victory he hath won,
From a proud and cruel son.

[Shots are fired within, and CLARIN falls wounded from his hiding-place.]

CLARIN: Heaven protect me!

ASTOLFO: Who can be
This last victim of the fight,
Who is struck down in the retreat,
Falls here bleeding at our feet?

CLARIN: I am an unlucky wight,
Who to shun Death's fearful face
Found the thing I would forget:
Flying from him, him I've met.
For there is no secret place
Hid from death; and therefore I
This conclusion hold as clear,
He 'scapes best who goes more near,
He dies first who first doth fly.

Then return, return and be
 In the bloody conflict lost;
 Where the battle rages most,
 There is more security
 Than in hills how desolate,
 Since no safety can there be
 'Gainst the force of destiny,
 And the inclemency of fate;
 Therefore 'tis in vain thou flyest
 From the death thou draw'st more nigh,
 Oh, take heed for thou must die
 If it is God's will thou diest!
 [Falls within.]

BASILIOUS: Oh, take heed for thou must die
 If it is God's will thou diest!—
 With what eloquence, O heaven!
 Does this body that here lieth,
 Through the red mouth of a wound
 To profoundest thoughts entice us
 From our ignorance and our error!
 The red current as it glideth
 Is a bloody tongue that teaches
 All man's diligence is idle,
 When against a greater power,
 And a higher cause it striveth.
 Thus with me, 'gainst strife and murder
 When I thought I had provided,
 I but brought upon my country
 All the ills I would have hindered.

CLOTALDO: Though, my lord, fate knoweth well
 Every path, and quickly findeth
 Whom it seeks; yet still it strikes me
 'Tis not christian-like to say
 'Gainst its rage that nought suffices.

That is wrong, a prudent man
Even o'er fate victorious rises;
And if thou art not preserved
From the ills that have surprised thee,
From worse ills thyself preserve.

ASTOLFO: Sire, Clotaldo doth address thee
As a cautious, prudent man,
Whose experience time hath ripened.
I as a bold youth would speak:
Yonder, having lost its rider,
I behold a noble steed
Wandering reinless and unbridled,
Mount and fly with him while I
Guard the open path behind thee.

BASILIU: If it is God's will I die,
Or if Death for me here lieth
As in ambush, face to face
I will meet it and defy it.

SCENE 14

SIGISMUND, ESTRELLA, ROSAURA, Soldiers, Attendants, BASILIUS, ASTOLFO, and CLOTALDO:

A SOLDIER: 'Mid the thickets of the mountain,
'Neath these dark boughs so united,
The King hides.

SIGISMUND: Pursue him then,
Leave no single shrub unrifled,
Nothing must escape your search,
Not a plant, and not a pine tree.

CLOTALDO: Fly, my lord!

BASILIOUS: And wherefore fly?

ASTOLFO: Come!

BASILIOUS: Astolfo, I'm decided.

CLOTALDO: What to do?

BASILIOUS: To try, Clotaldo,
One sole remedy that surviveth.
[To SIGISMUND.]
If 'tis me thou'rt seeking, Prince,
At thy feet behold me lying.
[Kneeling.
Let thy carpet be these hairs
Which the snows of age have whitened.
Tread upon my neck, and trample
On my crown; in base defilement
Treat me with all disrespect;
Let thy deadliest vengeance strike me
Through my honour; as thy slave
Make me serve thee, and in spite of

All precautions let fate be,
Let heaven keep the word it plighted.

SIGISMUND: Princes of the Court of Poland,
Who such numerous surprises
Have astonished seen, attend,
For it is your prince invites ye.
That which heaven has once determined,
That which God's eternal finger
Has upon the azure tablets
Of the sky sublimely written,
Those transparent sheets of sapphire
Superscribed with golden ciphers
Ne'er deceive, and never lie;
The deceiver and the liar
Is he who to use them badly
In a wrongful sense defines them.
Thus, my father, who is present,
To protect him from the wildness
Of my nature, made of me
A fierce brute, a human wild-beast;
So that I, who from my birth,
From the noble blood that trickles
Through my veins, my generous nature,
And my liberal condition,
Might have proved a docile child,
And so grew, it was sufficient
By so strange an education,
By so wild a course of living,
To have made my manners wild;—
What a method to refine them!
If to any man 'twas said,
"It is fated that some wild-beast will destroy you," would it be Wise to wake a sleeping tiger
As the remedy of the ill?

If 'twere said, "this sword here hidden
In its sheath, which thou dost wear,
Is the one foredoomed to kill thee,"
Vain precaution it would be
To preserve the threatened victim.
Bare to point it at his breast.
If 'twere said, "these waves that ripple
Calmly here for thee will build
Foam-white sepulchres of silver,"
Wrong it were to trust the sea
When its haughty breast is lifted
Into mountain heights of snow,
Into hills of curling crystal.
Well, this very thing has happened
Unto him, who feared a wild-beast,
And awoke him while he slept;
Or who drew a sharp sword hidden
Naked forth, or dared the sea
When 'twas roused by raging whirlwinds
And though my fierce nature (hear me)
Was as 'twere the sleeping tiger,
A sheathed sword my innate rage
And my wrath a quiet ripple,
Fate should not be forced by means
So unjust and so vindictive,
For they but excite it more;
And thus he who would be victor
O'er his fortune, must succeed
By wise prudence and self-strictness.
Not before an evil cometh
Can it rightly be resisted
Even by him who hath foreseen it,
For although (the fact's admitted)
By an humble resignation
It is possible to diminish

Its effects, it first must happen,
 And by no means can be hindered.
 Let it serve as an example
 This strange sight, this most surprising
 Spectacle, this fear, this horror,
 This great prodigy; for none higher
 E'er was worked than this we see,
 After years of vain contriving,
 Prostrate at my feet a father,
 And a mighty king submitted.
 This the sentence of high heaven
 Which he did his best to hinder
 He could not prevent. Can I,
 Who in valour and in science,
 Who in years am so inferior,
 It avert? My lord, forgive me,
 [To the King.]
 Rise, sir, let me clasp thy hand;
 For since heaven has now apprized thee
 That thy mode of counteracting
 Its decree was wrong, a willing
 Sacrifice to thy revenge
 Let my prostrate neck be given.

BASILIOUS: Son, this noble act of thine
 In my heart of hearts reviveth
 All my love, thou'rt there reborn.
 Thou art Prince; the bay that bindeth
 Heroes' brows, the palm, be thine,
 Let the crown thine own deeds give thee.

ALL: Long live Sigismund our King!

SIGISMUND: Though my sword must wait a little
 Ere great victories it can gain,
 I to-day will win the highest,
 The most glorious, o'er myself.—

Give, Astolfo, give your plighted
Hand here to Rosaura, since
It is due and I require it.

ASTOLFO: Though 'tis true I owe the debt,
Still 'tis needful to consider
That she knows not who she is;
It were infamous, a stigma
On my name to wed a woman

CLOTALDO: Stay, Astolfo, do not finish;
For Rosaura is as noble
As yourself. My sword will right her
In the field against the world:
She's my daughter, that's sufficient.

ASTOLFO: What do you say?

CLOTALDO: Until I saw her
To a noble spouse united,
I her birth would not reveal.
It were now a long recital,
But the sum is, she's my child.

ASTOLFO: That being so, the word I've plighted
I will keep.

SIGISMUND: And that Estrella
May not now be left afflicted,
Seeing she has lost a prince
Of such valour and distinction,
I propose from mine own hand
As a husband one to give her,
Who, if he does not exceed
Him in worth, perhaps may rival.
Give to me thy hand.

ESTRELLA: I gain
By an honour so distinguished.

SIGISMUND: To Clotaldo, who so truly
Served my father, I can give him
But these open arms wherein
He will find what'er he wishes.

A SOLDIER: If thou honorest those who serve thee,
Thus, to me the first beginner
Of the tumult through the land,
Who from out the tower, thy prison,
Drew thee forth, what wilt thou give?

SIGISMUND: Just that tower: and that you issue
Never from it until death,
I will have you guarded strictly;
For the traitor is not needed
Once the treason is committed.

BASILIOUS: So much wisdom makes one wonder.

ASTOLFO: What a change in his condition!

ROSAURA: How discreet! how calm! how prudent!

SIGISMUND: Why this wonder, these surprises,
If my teacher was a dream,
And amid my new aspirings
I am fearful I may wake,
And once more a prisoner find me
In my cell? But should I not,
Even to dream it is sufficient:
For I thus have come to know
That at last all human blisses
Pass and vanish as a dream,
And the time that may be given me
I henceforth would turn to gain:
Asking for our faults forgiveness,
Since to generous, noble hearts
It is natural to forgive them.
